Paris, Dec. 30.—France has at last defined her attitude toward England. It has not been done without much fear on all sides that something radical might occur which would throw the French republic into tumult and perhaps ruin the great exposition of 1900. Wise counsels have prevailed, however, and it can be stated that France has turned a deaf ear to Russia's pleadings. Russia offered to support France in demanding immediate evacuation of Egypt and at the same time make energetic demonstration in the direction of India. To all this France has declined her assent. It is now the universal impression that France will take no hostile action toward England.

TO ATTACK INHLAWE.

London, Dec. 27.—The reported sortie from Ladysmith resulting in the capture of a Boer position is not confirmed and apparently is only a Kaffir story. A Chieveley despatch, dated Dec. 29th, made no mention of it. The same message shows renewed activity upon the part of the British, apparently preparatory to some action. The Boer position eastward of the camp was thoroughly reconnoitered Dec. 28 without drawing the enemy.

The naval guns engaged in daily practice, and it is said on good authority that thirty or forty Boers have been killed by the firing during two days.

A despatch from Durban predicts that Ladysmith will be relieved on or about January 7. While there is nothing to bear out this forecast there is some disposition to believe that General Buller is preparing another attempt to advance this time by an attack on the Boer position on Inhlawe mountain.

POWELL LOST 109 MEN.

Lorenzo Marquez, Dec. 29.—Advices received here from Pretoria under date of Wednesday, Dec. 27, say that no official despatch from Mafeking announces that in the sortie which the British made from that place November 25, attacking one of the Boer forts with cannon, maxims and an armored train, so persistently that the fighting raged up to the walls of the fort, the British list 190 men killed and wounded, while the Boers only lost two men killed and seven wounded.

The despatch adds that Captain Krrkwood and Grenfell were captured by Boer scouts near Colenso and were being sent to Pretoria.

Two unloaded shells inscribed "The season's greetings," have been fired at Ladysmith.

Ten South African medical students from Edinburgh have arrived at Pretoria from Delagoa Bay with five tons of medical stores.

A despatch from the Boer camp at the Modder River, dated on December 28, reports an artillery duel lasting an hour. On Dec. 27 a British reconnoitering party made a sortie, but did not come within the Boer range. The British, on Dec. 28, commenced a steady bombardment of the Boer position.

HOW DORDRECHT WAS TAKEN.

London, Dec. 30.—A special despatch to the Times from Sterkstroom, says that a force of Cape Mounted Rifles under Col. Dalegety occupied Dordrecht on the 24th. The occupation was the result of a sharp bit of fighting on the previous day, when a small force of Cape Troops supported by an armored train under Lieutenant Gosset and a detachment of the Berkshire regiment—100 of all ranks—encountered 800 hundred Boers, chiefly rebels, near Koupsleet, and drove them seven miles into Dordrecht. The Boers showed indifferent courage in the action. There were no casualties on the British side.

THE LINE IS OPEN.

London, Dec. 29.—The War Office has received this despatch:

"Cape Town, Thursday, Dec. 28.—The Inhidwe colliery line is now working again."

REPORTED LEAKAGE.

London, Dec. 30.—Advices from Lorenzo Marquez say that cargoes for the Transvaal and interior have decreased to onefifth of the normal average, but large shipments are expected from Europe within the next fortnight. There are still many who believe that guns and ammunition are being smuggled through to the Boers. A French vessel now in Delogoa Bay is said to have brought two large guns from Madagascar. The customs officials, however, say that no contraband of war is passing through either port. But there is in the minds of many a strong suspicion that some of the subordinate customs officers are not above being bought, and it is urged that the examination of cargoes should be made by experienced English customs officers. There is a strong suspicion that the Boer Intelligence Department is receiving news [illegible] foreign consul at Lorenzo Marquez, who is notorious for his pro-Boer sympathies. This suspicion is strengthened by the fact that the news of General Roberts' appointment was generally known in Pretoria on Wednesday, and indirectly reached Delagoa Bay from the Transvaal on Friday, while the confirmation from Reuter was only telegraphed from Cape Town this week. Boer emissaries are constantly coming and going from Lorenzo Marquez. It is worthy of note that the consul who represents the Transvaal and the Orange Free State at that place continues to act in the same capacity for Holland.

DEATH OF DAVID HOGG.

A Former Resident of Peterborough Dies in London England.

Montreal, Que., Dec. 30.—The death of David H. Hogg, of this city, is announced from London. Mr. Hogg while crossing the Atlantic on the Majestic from New York fell on the deck and broke his collar bone. An operation in London resulted fatally. Mrs. Hogg was cabled for and reached the other side two days later after her husband's death. Mr. Hogg was a wholesale dealer in photographic supplies and before coming to this city resided in Peterborough.

The deceased will be remembered by a number of the older residents as coming to town from Aberdeen, Scotland, in the fifties wit hhis brother James. He took a position in a general store kept by Nicholls and Hall and James was employed in th clecal branch of the Bank of Montreal of which Mr. Root Nichols was agent at that time. Mr. Hogg was afterwards employed in the post office and left Peterborough about 30 years ago. Of late years h ehas been very prosperous in business, owning photographic supplies depots in both Monreal and Toronto. His brother James who was afterwards manager of the Bank of Montreal in Stratford and other places now resides in western Ontario having been superannuated some years ago.—Examiner.

30,000,000 for War Purposes.

Paris, Dec. 30.—The Government will submit to the Chamber of Depaties at the beginning of January a bill providing for the defence of the French coasts and colonies, and to increase the strugth of the fleet. This does not involve an increase in the expenditure.

The costs of the defence of the coasts and colonies is estimated at $24,000,000, spread over two and a half years. This sum will be provided for by 50,000,000 francs annually, set aside to pay off certain bonds, and which become free this year by the final repayment of these bonds.

The expense of the increase of the fleet will be met by utilizing 55,000,000 francs out of the 105,000,000 francs annually devoted to the construction of new vessels. At the end of two years the whole 105,000,000 francs can be devoted to th enew naval program.

The total outlay, which is estimated at 400,000,000 francs will provide; it is understood, for the construction of 12 first-class ironclads, several torpedo boat destroyers, and a large number of torpedo boats.

Already the press denounce the scheme as inadequate.

La Patrie says:

"It is tantamount to a rejection of the proposal of M. Lockroy, former Minister of Marine, to expend 500,000,000 francs fo rthe immediate reconstruction of the French navy, because the present scheme only asks that 400,000,000, francs be expended within the next six years, while the building of the proposed ironclads will be almost as long."

Liner Ashore.

London, Dec. 30.—The Hamburg and South American lines Peletas, from Santos for Rotterdam, having 629 passengers on board, struck on the sand on the east side of Dungeness, the southern extremety of Kent, soon after midnight, in the midst of a terrific agle, which raged all around the coast.

The storm was the worst of the winter and seas immediately began breaking over the steamer. For a time it appeared as though no one on board of her could be saved.

The Dugness coast guards seeing the Peletas' signals of distress, made desperate and for a long time unsuccessful efforts to launch the life boat in the heavy surf beating on the shore.

Finally the coast guardsmen succeeded in reaching the Pletas. They remained alongside the steamer all night and eventually put the rocket apparatus in operation. During the whole time the wind blew with hurricane force, accompanied by heavy rain and hail. The passengers had a terrifying experience. When day broke the gale slightly moderated, enabling the life boats to transfer the passengers, who were safely landed at New Romnew.

NO PASSENGERS ON BOARD.

London, Dec. 30.—It now turns out that the Peletas carried no passengers only carrying grain

Bright Page in History.

London, Dec. 30.—Sir Robert Gillespie, presiding at a meeting of the Canada Company, remarked on the splendid evidence of loyalty exhibited by Canada during the present South African troubles. He was sure that all were identified with Canada, as well as the nation at large, felt proud of Canada's enthusiastic and glorious desire to help to support the mother country in th ecrisis. No action could prove more strongly their desire to maintain the unity of the empire. Their loyalty to the Queen was indeed a bright page in the history of Great Britain and the colonies. These remarks were enthusiastically received.

ROBERTS AND KITCHENER

TWIN HEROES OF TWO BLOODY EASTERN WARS.

One Reaped Undying Fame in the Famous March to Kandahar, the Other on the Bloody Sands of the Soudan.

The seriousness of the war situation in South Africa has stirred up England as she has not been stirred before in three-quarters of a century and has led to her ordering to the scene of hostilities two of her ablest generals, Field Marshal Lord Roberts and Maj. General Lord Kitchener, the one the hero of Kandahar, and the other the hero of Omdurman, in Africa.

Lord Roberts, who will assume chief command in South Africa, is the idol of the British army and is popularly known as "Bobs." He is regarded by the military authorities of the leading countries of Europe as the foremost British commander of the Victorian era, his celebrated forced march to Kandahar constituting one of the finest feats of English arms in modern times.

IN THE INDIAN MUTINY.

Lord Frederick S. Roberts was born in 1832 and was educated at the Royal Military College at Sandhurst. He was only 19 years old when he went to India and entered the Bengal artillery as a lieutenant. Here he labored unknown to fame until the Indian mutiny when he was attached to the column which was sent to attack Delhi, the forces of the rebellion. The position of the small British force before the capital of the insurrection was for months a perilous one. Fighting was of daily occurrence, the mutineers having an unlimited number of guns and an inexhaustable supply of ammunition. Roberts came under fire for the first time in a skirmish, when 8 of his party were killed and 30 wounded. Soon afterward, in another of the engagements near the walls of the city, the young lieutenant was hit by a bullet near the spine as he was helping the drivers keep the horses quiet while limbering up the guns. A leather pouch has somehow slipped behind his back and prevented the bullet penetrating deeply.

AT THE RELIEF OF LUCKNOW.

After the capture of Delhi Roberts joined the army of Sir Colin Campbell, which advanced to the relief of Lucknow. When the relieving army got close to the rebel lines outside Lucknow Sir Colin, wishing to let the British commander, Outram, know of his progress wanted a flag raised on the mess house. Within plain view of the mutineers Lieut. Roberts climbed to the top of the building, and, amid a rain of shot, raised the flag on the turret nearest to the foe. It was shot away, and he replaced it. Again it was shot away, and he raised it again. But it was not for this deed that Roberts won his Victoria Cross. That was done at Khodagunge January 2, 1858. He saw in the distance two sepoys going away with a standard. Putting spurs to his horse, he overtook them. They turned and presented their muskets at him, and one of the men pulled the trigger. It snapped, missing fire, and the sepoy was cut down by Robert's sword. The other mutineer rode away, and the young lieutenant brought the standard back to camp. The same day he rescued a wounded comrade under almost similar circumstances.

In the years that followed the mutiny Roberts saw almost contirual service. He was at Umbeyla, in the frontier campaign, in 1863; in 1867 he had charge of the embarkation of the force for the Abyssinian campaign. In 1871 and 1872 he was the senior staff officer in the Lushai campaign, and from 1875 to 1878 he was quartermaster general. All his promotions were "for merit."

It was toward the end of 1878 that the great opportunity of Gen. Roberts' career came to him. The Ameer of Afghanistan rebelled against the authority of Great Britain and Roberts was sent at the head of the army to subdue him. He carried the enemy's stronghold at Peiwar Kotal with a splendid rush at odds of almost ten to one. The next year the news of Sir Louis Cavagnari's murder in Kabul horrified all England and Roberts was called upon to lead another avenging party. With 6,000 men he cut his way straight through the hostile land, and in 30 days placed the British flag above the citadel of Kabul, after routing the Afghan army, which outnumbered the British by twelve to one. Then after reinforcements had been sent to him he began one of the most famous marches in history—over towering mountain ranges and through hostile territory, straight from Kabul to Kandahar—300 miles in 20 days. At the end of the march he crushed Ayoob Khan and the whole empire rang with the praises of the man who a few months before had been almost unknown.

Since then Roberts has advanced through successive stages to the position of commander-in-chief of the forces in Ireland. Now in his 67th year he is called upon to face the hardest task of his military career and a pathetic thing about his departure is the fact that his orders came to him simultaneously with the news of the death of his son, a bright young officer, who fell in the battle of the Tugela river.

KITCHINER, HERO OF THE SOUDAN.

Lord Kitchiner, chief-of-staff to Lord Roberts is England's latest and most popular war hero. His successful conquest of the Egyptian Soudan won for him a fame in England to be compared with that of Admiral Dewey in the United States. In return for the services Gen. Kitchiner rendered his country in Egypt he was raised to the peerage and was voted a gife of $150,000 by the House of Commons.

He was born in Kerry county, Ireland, in 1851, and at the age of 20 received his commission as lieutenant of engineers. For a long time he was in the civil service in Egypt under Sir Evelyn Wood, who was then engaged in the reorganization of the Egyptian army. He received an appointment on the intelligence staff when the troubles in the Soudan made necessary the despatch of trustworthy English officers to Dongola in advance of Lord Wolseley's Nile expedition 15 years ago. There Kitchiner was always the one selected for any work that demanded great force of character, combined with tact and resourcefulness in dealing with intrigues of disloyal officials or winning over the chiefs who wavered between fear of Egyptian power and a hankering after the good things promised by Mahdism.

With the Nile expedition Kitchener's promotion was rapid. He became one of the two mayors of cavalry in 1884, was made lieutenant colonel in 1885 and became colonel in 1888. He was in command of a brigade of the Egyptian army in the operation near Suakim in December, 1888, and was present in the engagements at Gemaizah and at Toski, in 1889.

At the beginning of the campaign of 1896 for the reconquest of the Soudan Kitchiner was made commander-in-chief of the forces in Egypt. He led a successful expedition up the Nile against the Khalifa, safely conducting his troops up cataracts and through marauding tribes and burning deserts until Omdurman was reached. Here was fought a terrific battle between the Anglo-Egyptian troops and the Dervishers, the latter being cut down like grass before the scythe. In one charge the Dervishers lost 4,000 men and when the battle was over 16,000 of their dead and dying strew the ground. The Khalifa and his chiefs were fugitives and have recently been killed. Kitchiner on returning home after this brilliant expedition became the popular idol. He is the youngest major general in the British army.

Robbed a Station.

Preston, Ont., Dec. 30.—A sensational and daring burglary occurred in Preston early yesterday morning, when B. W. Zieman's merchant tailoring and gent's furnishing establishment in the Opera House block was entered by two men who evidently were familiar with the premises. They first brooke into E. Shantz's foundry where they secured a long screwdriver and chisel. With these instruments they drove uptown in a single rig and left their vehicle standing in front of Zieman's store.

They quickly forced the door open, and one of the men rushed to thetailor shop at the rear, where Gideon Zieman, a nephew of the proprietor, was sleeping. He grabbed him by the throat, and, placing a revolver close to his face, said he would shoot him if he made an outcry.

In the meantime his pal lit a lamp and cooly commenced to sort out the best stock in the store, consisting of fur caps, ties, clothing, etc.; which was loaded into the rig waiting outside. The clothing of the captive on the bed was also hidden, unknown to him, as the revolver was kept in close proximity, to his head during the whole time the stock was being looted, and when the thieves drove away with their booty it took him some time to get out to give the alarm.

Detective Klippert of Berlin is working on the case.

Daring Thieves.

Joliette, Dec. 30.—Robbers again broke into the Canadian Pacific station here last night, but his time, as far as canbe ascertained, secured nothing of great value. They succeeded in badly demolishing the safe, and secured a number of tickets and express parcels.

This is the third time within two years that the Joliete station has been forcibly entered. A few months ago the robbers secured a haul of several thousand dollars, which was never recovered.

Uneasiness in Paris.

Paris, Dec. 30.—The virtual seizure by British offivials of vessels laden with American flour, consigned to the Boers, and the statement of the Lokal Angeiger regarding an alleged Anglo-German-Portuguese treaty for the division of Portugal's colonies between Great Britain and Germany, have aroused new interest in Paris. While there is a desire to discredit the Lokal Anzeiger's statement, its publication has occasioned undoubted uneasiness, because the consummation of such a plan would be a diplomatic stroke unfavorable to France and Russia. The possession of Delagoa Bay is believed to be essential to British success in South Africa, as a victory over the Boers is essential to Great Britain's international prestige. Therefore it is felt that, if necessary, Great Britain will take extreme measures.

A Brave Boy.

Hamilton, Dec. 30.—Percy Burrows, a 12-year-old boy, whoi lved on Cannon-st., east, was drowned while trying to save his younger brother's liufe this morning. Young Burrows, his brother Willie, and several companions were skating on the bay near the smelting works. Willie ventured t o far o t, and went through the ice which was thin at that point. The lads immediately went to his rescue. Without taking time to remove his skates or overcoat Percy plunged into the water. Jas. Clendenning was one of the first boys to arrive on the scent. He succeeded in saving Willie Burrows, but was unable to save Percy. Willie suffered from the cold and was almost completely exhausted. The body of the other lad was subsequently found by the police. It is believed that his skates got stuck in the mud and held him down.

A Good Suggestion.

Editor Morning Times:

Dear sir,—While seated at the Red Cross Fund entertainment last Friday evening it was with pleasure that I noticed some of the ladies in the audience sitting with uncovered heads, thereby enabling those sitting in their rear to see the entertainment without obstruction and at the same time adding to the beauty of the fair ones and manifesting a thoughtfulness that none could fail to appreciate. When not the least beautiful and select part of the audience voluntarily inaugurated such a boon, I think we might fairly ask the whole sex to adopt it as an established custom. A move along this line is being made in other places. The Rev. Thomas Dunlop, of the Methodist Church, in Midland, does not feel inclined to wait on the pleasure of the ladies, but is seeking to establish the custom on arbitratory lines. He has issued a decree making it incumbent upon the ladies attending his church to remove their hats or bonnets during divine service on and after next Sunday. I think the cause would be better advanced by appealing to the good common sense of the fair ones, who appear to possess such a commodity in a prominent degree, yours,

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 27, 1899

THE ATTITUDE OF FRANCE TOWARD ENGLAND.

Although it is denied that Dr. Leyds has requested France to mediate between his country and Great Britain, there seems to be no doubt that he was last week received officially as the agent of the Transvaal Government by M. Delcasse, the French Minister for Foreign Affairs. Not much significance, however, attaches to the fact that the Transvaal agent should receive at Paris a recognition given to him nowhere else, except at The Hague. The good sense and discretion with which M. Delcasse handled the Fashoda incident may be accepted as proof that England has nothing to fear from French interference so long as he remains in office.

The Cabinet, however, of which M. Delcasse is a member, has a precarious lease on life; on one occasion last week it was upheld by a majority of only three votes. So heterogeneous and inharmonious are the elements composing it that few observers expect it to survive long the opening of the new year. The fall of Premier Waldeck-Rousseau will be regarded as a triumph of the anti-Revisionists, and his successor, whether M. Meline or another, will choose representatives of that faction for his colleagues. Now, it cannot be denied that the anti-Revisionists are bitterly hostile to Great Britain; it is their organs in the Paris press which insult Englishmen and exult over the British reverses in South Africa. It does not follow that their leaders, once clothed with the responsibility of office, will give any overt expression to anti-Revisionist rancor. No doubt they would gladly take advantage of England's actual predicament if they could see their way to striking an effective blow. In what quarter, however, could such a blow be delivered? Unlike Russia, the French Republic cannot hope to attack successfully any British possession, by land. Any French expedition despatched to the Upper Nile from West Africa or from Algeria would encounter almost insurmountable obstacles in the course of its long march, and, should it manage to arrive at its destination, could be easily disposed of by the greatly superior Anglo-Egyptian force which is master of the Soudan. Mr. W. T. Stead suggests in the Daily Chronicle that, in the absence of the Channel fleet, a raid might be made on London by 60,000 Frenchmen. From the preparations going on, however, for mobilising the whole British Navy, it is evident that, long before a large body of troops could be consentrated near Boulogne or any other French port, a number of warships sufficient to protect the Channel could be provided, without recalling any of the vessels now stationed or cruising in the Mediterranean. The project of invasion, which Napoleon Bonepart was unable to carry out, is not likely to be executed by the present French Republic.

The one certain outcome of hostilities between France and England would be that France would lose all her insular colonies, with the possible exception of Madagascar, all of her warships that ventured out of fortified harbors and almost the whole of her ocean-borne commerce, while the utmost that she could do by way of reprisal would be to inflict some injury upon England's mercantile marine. No government, we may feel assured, however sympathizing with the Anglophobia of its supporters, would venture to plunge France, single-handed, in a contest which would threaten to be as disastrous to her [illegible] as was the war of 1870 on land. Suppose, however, that the Czar could be induced by the Russian military party to seize the present opportunity for a movement against British India. There is no reason to suppose that the so-called alliance between France and Russia binds the former country to take part in an aggressive war against Great Britain. In the absence of a treaty obligation it would be an act of gross folly for a French Ministry to join Russia in a venture, the gravest risks of which would have to be confronted by France. As we have previously pointed out, Russia might be deprived of Vladivostock and Port Arthur, though it is by no means certain that those strongly fortified harbors would not be able to resist a naval attack. France, on the other hand, if the contest were prolonged, would be likely to lose every island and coaling station which she possesses on the globe. Then, again, the Navy and the ocean-borne commerce of France are vulnerable points for which there are no Russian equivalents. In a word, France would burn her fingers, while if any chestnuts were secured, they would fall to Russia's share exclusively.

We conclude, then, that although M. Meline or some other representative of anti-Revisionist sentiment may become Premier to-morrow, and although the Russian military party may possibly persuade the Czar to sanction a movement against India, there is no likelihood that the French Foreign Office will pursue any course likely to embroil France with England.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

While Ladysmith's fate is uncertain, those stockbroking rumors show it offers room for a great deal of speculation.

•• • ••

One way it might be said, in view of this change of commanders, the Boers put another head on the British army.

•• • ••

Wanting to impress the fast sea-going steamers for transportation purposes would indicate England thinks the dogs of war should include ocean greyhounds.

•• • ••

Another objection to selling short tons of coal is that the dealers otherwise might do business on a larger scale.

•• • ••

The history of war is always the same. One side under-estimates the strength of the other. Abraham Lincoln called for 75,000 volunteers to subdue the southern rebellion, and after two regiments had been accepted from Michigan others were declined. Yet that State sent some eighty thousand men to the front before the war ended in the triumph of Appomatox. The British Government has under-estimated its task in the Transvaal. It has accepted but ten thousand volunteers from the colonies, when it might have had thirty thousand as well.

•• • ••

The British nation is becoming aroused to the true danger of the crisis in its history, and will take steps to place itself in a position to meet the world in arms if necessary. There is just a question whether the outlaying portions of the empire should not be similarly. In case of continental interference the British fleet will have its hands full watching the enemy's fleets, protecting the lines of food supply from the depredations of privateers, seeing that communication is preserved between Great Britain and her army, now practically all in South Africa, and incidentally preventing a hostile army being thrown into Britain, which is, or will be shortly, only garrisoned by militia and volunteers. This is a big contract even for the ruler of the waves.

•• • ••

In discussing the subject of lynching, the Lindsay Post asks—"Does lynching prevent crime?" Yes, my dear boy, it does. We never heard of a man committing a crime after he had been thoroughly lynched.

•• • ••

Mafeking, Kimberley and Ladysmith will certainly be bitter pills if the Boers can't take them.

•• • ••

Among other hardships England feels it must endure is not to be able to use its armored fleet.

•• • ••

Still, Buller might get over his defeat if he could only get over the Tugela.

THE Canada Business College
CHATHAM, ONT.
CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institution has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, [illegible] twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

235 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave [illegible] the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to hit his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

FORCE FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

Major Greenwood, of Peterborough, Receives Instructions.

Major Greenwood, commanding the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, has received a copy of the general militia orders relative to the enlistment and equipment of the second Canadian contingent for service in South Africa. It contains considerable matters of interest.

For the enrollment of the second troop of A squadron of the "Canadian Mounted Rifles" the stations will be Peterborough, St. Catharines, Toronto and Ottawa. Three squadrons of a total strength each of 160 of all ranks are to be enrolled. As there are four troops in A squadron of 161 only 43 men will be required from the four recruiting stations of Peterborough, St. Catharines, Toronto and Ottawa. For this squadron recruiting stations extend from St. John, N. B., to London. B and C squadrons will be enrolled from Winnipeg to the Rocky Mountains. As yet no orders have been received as when recruiting will begin at Peterborough. Major Greenwood has received a number of letters from which it is evident that the writers are under the impression that recruiting is going on. This is not correct and the time will be made known.

To qualify for service the applicant must reach the height of 5 feet 6 inches with 34 inch chest measurement, age to be not less than 22 years and not more than 40. Men are invited to offer their own horses, which will be purchased if suitable. The horses are to be 15 to 16 1-2 hands high and sound.

The non-commissioned officers and men of the permanent force or of the Northwest Mounted Police will be allowed to count their service in this regiment as a portion of a period of their enlistment.

Authority is also given in the same orders for the formation of a Brigade Division of Field Artillery of three batteries. C battery will be mobilized at Kingston, D at Ottawa, and E at Quebec. Port Hope is one of the places of enrollment for D Battery. The qualifications for service are practically the same for artillery men as for the mounted rifles.

Sergt. Scully, of town, of the 14th Field Battery, has returned from Port Hope, where he has passed the medical examination necessary for acceptance in the contingent.

To-day's Globe says—The Christmas lull in the preparations for sending the second Canadian contingent was followed by the greatest activity at Stanley Barracks yesterday. Practically the whole of the first troop of A squadron mounted infantry was selected, of whom thirty [illegible] were sworn in. The orders received since the last working day also gave the details to be observed in the enrollment of the second troop of A squadron, and recruiting for this troop will begin at the Armories this morning at 11 o'clock. The notice in this case is rather brief, but as none will be finally be chosen to-day, but rather after two days' volunteers have been looked over this will not be such a serious matter. Col. Kitson will be at the Armories to-day, accompanied by Surgeon-Major Nattress and other staff officers. Some disappointment has been expressed at the fact that only 41 men are to be selected in Toronto, in addition to the Dragoons for the Mounted Infantry, though added to the 43 Dragoons in the first troop, the total will be brought up to 84. This number may be increased if it is found that the quota asked for at the other recruiting stations is not reached. Of the 43 only [illegible] men and two farriers will belong to the second troop, the other 31 being wanted for the headquarters staff. The balance of the second troop will be made up of ten men from the 2nd Dragoons, St. Catharines, ten men from 3rd Dragoons, Peterborough, and seven men from the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, Ottawa. It is understood of course that volunteer civilians may be included in those enrolled at any of these points.

Sergt.-Major E. H. Hutchinson, of the 14th Field Battery, and Messrs. Herb. Snowden and Bruce Chowen have volunteered and went down to Port Hope at noon to-day for medical examination.

Landslide in Ireland.

New York, Dec. 29.—A London cable says that the English Metropolis has decided to adopt the underground electric street car system, such as is now in use in Washington, Boston and New York, and will use American built and American equipped vehicles. The county council has taken steps to appropriate about $15,000,000 to instal the system.

The Famine in India.

Calcutta, Dec. 29.—About three million persons are receiving famine relief. The Government is spending nearly two lakhs of rupees daily. It is estimated that the cost of the relief to the end of March will be three crores of rupees. Owing to the rapid increase in the number of people asking relief, the Viceroy, Lord Curzon, of Kedleston, invites a closer scrutiny of the claims of the applicants.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sung it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

FAMINE FOLLOWS WAR.

Deserted Cities of the Republic and Free State.

AWFUL STATE OF AFFAIRS.

Exodus of Uitlanders Unprecedented in The History of the Country.

Consul General Stowe Sends a Lengthy Despatch to the American Government—The Transvaal's Troubles are Only Beginning.

(Special To The Times.)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 30.—Consul Gen. Stowe wires from South Africa—The exodus of Uitlanders from the South African Republic and Orange Free State, has, I believe, [illegible] in history. Many of the people—the mining population, the bone and sinew of the country—have scattered over the world. Numbers of them, too poor to get out of the country, are subject to charity in the cities of Cape Colony and Natal, and [illegible] a few days or [illegible] will in time have to be supported by the public, and this country, that can not, or does not, produce the foodstuffs for its own people. The English army is fed with supplies from other countries, and while much of these may have originally come from the United States, they reached here via England. The customs, duties and railroad and telegraphs are owned by the government, a very large source of government [illegible] of the employes thrown out of work.

Johannesburg, in the Transvaal, and Bloemfontein, in the Free State, are to all intents and purposes deserted cities. Johannesburg, the largest commercial center in South Africa, has, so far as trade is concerned, ceased to exist. This once busy [illegible] goods have reached the Transvaal via Delagoa Bay, but it is not supposed that they will long be permitted to enter. The two republics must then live on their own resources. Their crops are ready for the sickle, but can not be cut, as the men are with the war. Prices are so high that the trade papers refrain from publishing the usual column of 'market prices'. Large quantities of gold in route to seaports in this colony for shipment to England have been taken by the Boers. Representatives here of export commission houses of the United States are constantly [illegible] orders, particularly of foodstuffs, but word comes from the [illegible] of meat and fish, makers of flour, oatmeal, etc., that they have about all they can do to supply the home demand, and are many weeks or months behind orders.

That famine will follow war is no secret. Already the price of breadstuffs is advancing, and things will soon be at famine prices.

[illegible]

[illegible]

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they keep the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have [illegible] the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, [illegible]

[illegible]

Ottawa, Dec. 30.—The Government plan is to keep the two squadrons of Mounted Police and Rough Riders under separate command. Colonel Steele will occupy the same post over them as Colonel Lessard holds over the two squadrons of mounted rifles of the eastern provinces. This will allow the Mounted Police to be used as scouts, for which their training in the West so admirably fits them.

The Government has given the Ottawa Car Company a contract to construct fourteen express waggons for field service. They will be perfectly equipped with the most modern appliances and will be ready in ample time for the embarkation of the contingent.

Col. Hutchinson, of Nashville, Tenn., has written to Mr. Geo. C. Holland, of Hotel Senate reporter, offering to enroll 200 horsemen to go along with the second Canadian contingent. The men served in the Cuban war and are all experienced. [illegible] eager to go. Mr. Holland has handed the letter to the Minister.

MORE FENIAN FROTH.

Unanimous Vote in Favor of Running All Over Canada.

New York, Dec. 26.—The following despatch from Worcester, Mass., is published in one of the "yellow" journals this morning.

Division 36 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians has voted unanimously in favor of an invasion of Canada, if the opportune moment should arrive. President James Noonan had spoken on the Boer war, and urged all to be ready for action if an emergency should arise. Then he called for a show of hands from all in favor of a raid on Canada, and who would go. Every one of the hundred or more men present raised his hand in a tumult of enthusiasm. The officers of the division were appointed a committee to consult with officers of other Irish societies and arrange a mass meeting to express sympathy for the Boers. There are over 1,500 members of the Hibernians here.

MORE PIE FOR THE "YELLOW."

New York, Dec. 26.—The same "yellow" which contains the Worcester, Mass., despatch regarding a proposed raid on Canada, prints another similar story from Omaha, Neb. It says: The leading Irish-Americans of Nebraska are moving in the direction of a raid on Canada, now that the province is being denuded of her troops for service in South Africa. The statement is made that an extensive correspondence is being carried on between Fenians in the leading cities of the United States, and that the Omaha meeting called for next Sunday is a part of a preconcerted, widespread movement whose object is to enlist Irish-Americans everywhere in a grand effort to aid the Boers by causing trouble in Canada. The arms that were used or intended for one of the Fenian invasions of Canada were bought in Nebraska.

There is a story in Lincoln that for many years a lot of these arms was stored somewhere in that city under the care of the late John Fitzgerald, who is said to have contributed the money to buy them. It is also known that these arms, or others for the same cause, were used as equipments for one or two companies of Irish militia in Omaha, of which many prominent men of the city were once members.

Trains Running at Colenso

Pretoria, Dec. 25.—General Schalkburger reports, under date of Dec. 23, that trains are now running to Colenso, indicating that the Boers have built a connection around Ladysmith. General Cronje reports from the Modder river, Dec. 24, that the Boers captured two British forts at Kuruman, Dec. 17. It is rumored that General Methuen's big naval gun has exploded.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

EGIMENTS THAT HAVE RUN AWAY---

re are, no doubt, very many cases ndividual cowardice on the battle- , said an old army officer who had in a score of battles, but very have come under my immediate not- and the world rarely hears of them. e are, however, cases on record in h a whole regiment has turned tail fled from sheer fright before a e shot has been fired; and some of regiments have atoned for their from bravery by a reckless cour- which has later covered them with glory.

of the bravest of all the regiments fought in the American civil war to a man the very first time they face to face with the enemy. It at Shiloh that the Fifty-fifth Illi- Regiment received its baptism of In that battle it was detached from main body to take up a position on Tennessee river on the extreme left of the army, and a mile distant supports. It was the regiment's first rience of battle, and not a man of all had probably ever seen blood in anger.

regiment had scarcely taken up its tion when Chalmer's brigade was sent rive it out, and made a furious on- ght on it, to the accomplishment of a derous fire of shells. The Fifty-fifth, ever, did not wait for the attack, but, by panic, bolted "like one man" to shelter of a neighboring ravine. Here were with the utmost difficulty form- again and again with heavy loss. ring the rest of the campaign there no braver men in Sherman's army the Fifty-fifth; and, although in than three years' fighting they lost men, they were always the most eager the enemy and the most difficult withdraw.

was in the same battle that another brave regiment, the Thirty-second ana, showed the white feather, and perilously near to disgrace. It fell this regiment to clear the front line battle, a task calculated to make the est soldiers blanch. They were med into double column, with skirmish- and plunged into a wood, where they immediately greeted with a hail of lets from the main body of the enemy the right and from men in ambush the left. As man after man fell the mn faltered and broke, and began to [illegible] were rallied with difficulty, and [illegible] and fly a second time. this stage Colonel Willich again his men, held them at attention, then made them go through the usual drill as coolly as if he were the parade ground, although a perfect of bullets was whistling and about their heads. This steadied men as nothing else could have done, when they had recovered their nerve [illegible] to shoulder they proceeded with their task as cooly as if they were taking part in manoeuvres.

In the Franco-Prussian war one of the finest and bravest of the Prussian cavalry regiments was seized with an unaccountable panic. It found itself unexpectedly ambushed by the French infantry, and without the slightest attempt at retaliation turned tail and fled pell-mell leaving its colors and its colonel behind to take care of themselves. And yet this very regiment in later battles covered itself with almost more glory than any other in either of the contending armies.

It is a curious thing, but I have never yet met a brave soldier who has not confessed to a feeling of positive fright when he first faces the enemy; just as, I understand, the most eloquent speaker always feel nervous when they first face an audience. Of course, the feeling quickly vanished under the influence of excitement, and the men who are naturally most nervous are usually the most daring and reckless in action. I remember a confidential chat I had a day or two before the battle of Tel-el-Kebir with a young subaltern fresh from Sandhurst. He was a small, delicate-looking fellow, fitter for the study that the battlefield, and he was full of all kinds of nervous fears. He was "a born coward," he told me, with tears almost starting to his eyes. At Eton he had been bullied all round, and never had the pluck to retaliate: he had never struck a blow in anger in his life, and he "was sure he would disgrace himself forever" in his first fight, which was then imminent.

Of course, I tried to cheer him up as best I could, but he had absolutely no confidence in himself. I saw him just before the fight began, looking pitifully white and haggard, and I never saw him again alive; but I heard that he fought like a hero, and that he had lost his life in a gallant effort to save one of his men who had been unhorsed and was surrounded by the enemy.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked in and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you'm been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

In the mythology of Ancient Greece Hymen, the god of marriage, was the half brother of Esculapius, the god of medicine. The ancients believed that marriage and health should go together, and as a result the Greeks of that time have ever since been looked upon as types of physical perfection. Sickly mothers cannot bear healthy children. The prospective mother should use every precaution to preserve and foster her health. Not alone for the sake of the little one to come but for her own sake. A perfectly healthy woman is in no danger and in very little pain at her time of trial.

There must be due preparation for this time. Nature makes the preparatory period three-fourths of a year and women who take the hint from nature and use the time properly need have no fears of the outcome. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a medicine designed to cure all distinctly feminine ailments and taken during the period of gestation it renders childbirth easy, safe and comparatively painless.

It is the invention of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., a regularly graduated physician and skilled specialist in the cure of all diseases of woman.

Mrs. Orrin Stiles, of Downing, Dunn Co., Wis., writes: "I cannot praise your 'Favorite Prescription' enough, for I have not been as well for five years as I now am. In July last I had a baby boy, weight 11 lbs. I was only sick a short time, and since I got up have not had one sick day."

Sick women can consult Dr. Pierce by letter free of charge. Every letter is held strictly private and sacredly confidential.

Designing men work on women's feelings, by advising women to "write to a woman who understands woman's needs." It is useless to seek advice about disease of any woman who is not a physician. So far as known no qualified woman physician is connected with any proprietary medicine establishment.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder, "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that [illegible]"

Electors of Ashburnham

In casting your votes to-day for Public School Trustees for the municipality of Ashburnham, remember that Mr. Harry Morgan is a worthy candidate, in whose keeping the interests of your public schools will be perfectly safe. His aim will be to act consistently for the best possible results, and he promises economy in all expenditures. Mr. Morgan's irreproachable conduct as councillor of the village strongly recommends him for the position he is now seeking.

ATTACKED THE WRONG MAN.

Friday nights meeting added greatly to the estimation in which Ald. McWilliams is held among the voters. Although standing alone against six opponents he easily held his own and impressed every impartial listener as much the stronger and most capable of the speakers. His remarks were straightforward and business-like and while necessarily dealing with individual opponents, were in no sense unduly personal. The Review has been harping for two weeks on the terrible vindictiveness of Mr. McWilliams actions and words but anybody present at the meeting would have come to the conclusion that it had been attacking the wrong man. The speeches of Mayor Davis and Ald. Neil Langford and Dawson displayed a personal spite and a desire for revenge which would amply qualify them for objects of the Review attacks. Mr. Kendry deserves credit for his moderation and fairness but it is always to be remembered that this contest is not really one between the rival candidates but between Mr. McWilliams and a set of men who have pulled Mr. Kendry into a fight which they had not the courage to enter in person.

The noisy demonstration of about a score of Kendry supporters were in marked contrast to the quietness and attention of the great bulk of the audience. The voters were there to listen and to size up the men with the honest desire to fairly judge between them. The friends of Mr. McWilliams were delighted with the result for on all hands the most favorable comments were made on his showing. The only pity is that there are not more such meetings for it is the best opportunity the voters have to form their opinions of the men

VOTE FOR McWILLIAMS.

Here are some reasons why every vote in Peterborough should be cast in favor of J. B. McWilliams for Mayor.

1. As the first member of the council, both in ability and influence, for the last three years he was entitled to the promotion to the Mayoralty on the retirement of the present Mayor.

2. He has lived all his life in Peterborough and no man can say one word against hi integrity or fair dealing.

3. He has for many years filled a public office of the greatest responsibility, and both in that and the Council has shown himself eminently worthy of the honor which he is now seeking.

4. He has the energy and force of character to be the head of the council and to carry out a strong, progressive policy.

5. He comes before the people with a clear, definite statement of opinions and policy. His opponent offers absolutely nothing.

6. He has shown himself to be a steady friend of the workingmen and to have looked after their interests at every opportunity. The workingmen know how Mr. Kendry has treated his own employees in the Auburn Mills. Let them judge between the men.

7. He has fearlessly insisted upon an investigation into every charge of wrong doing or incompetence against any official or other person dealing with the town.

8. He has in all cases looked after the interests of the general public and not been subject to any man's religion, politics or position.

10. Mr. Kendry has already had his full share of municipal honors, and is now running simply as the candidate of a clique whose schemes Ald. McWilliams thwarted.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN

Vote early.

Vote for McWilliams.

This is the day the contractors bet their deserts.

Peterbrough cannot afford to have men in the council who are looking out for "crumbs."

The law governing municipal elections provides that the principle of one man one vote shall govern in the choice of a mayor, and that the vote shall be cast in the ward in which he resides, but in the case of school trustees the voter is entitled to a vote in every ward of the town in which he has property.

The Polling Places.

Electors will to-day commence the year of 1900 by terminating the municipal campaign at the polls. During the past week the several candidates have kept up an incessant bombardment of Peterborough's citizens—through the press, in personal canvass and on the public platform—but to-day the whole line of voters will advance and settle the question of municipal government for another year. Electors, this is your day; your turn has come; make the most of it. Everyone should fall in line and vote for the candidates they honestly consider most capable of furthering the interests of our own bright little town. The polling places are as follows—

No. 1 Ward—Pollind division No. 1, at M. H. Halpin's shop, corner of George and Perry streets; division No. 2, at shop of Thos. Laplante, Rubidge street.

No. 2 Ward—Polling division No. 3, the Town Council Chamber; No. 4, at Greene's shop, corner of Charlotte and Downie streets.

No. 3 Ward—Polling division No. 5, at J. and W. Metheral's shop, Aylmer street; No. 6 at Wm. McCall's shop, corner McDonnel and Reid streets.

No. 4 Ward—Polling division No. 7, at Wm. Lee's shop, Smith street.

Was Incorrect.

In reference to a statement credited to Ald. McWilliams in which he stated that Ald. Langford drew $213 from the town and $215 from the other side in connection with the arbitration, as well as asking for a $50 additional fee. Alderman McWilliams stated Friday evening that this statement was incorrect. Alderman Langford has received a letter from Mr. W. H. Moore, Commissioner, stating that the total [illegible] was $112 and that he did not apply for an extra fee of $50.

Do you propose to make the paving contractors a present of several thousand dollars? If you do then vote against Ald. McWilliams. It is safe to assume that if Ald. McWilliams is not elected, there will be no effort made to compel the contractors to disgorge. With Mr. Kendry in the Mayor's chair, and contractor Langford, his chief supporter, in the council, the unfortunate taxpayer will come out at the small end of the horn in the town's settlement with the contractors. Vote for McWilliams, therefore, as a public duty.

Curling Competition.

The annual competition for the Kendry cup between the Granite and Thistle clubs will take place on New Year's day, and the following draws has been made for the Thistle players—

Morning—J. Connal, W. O. Ferguson, J. Stanger.

Afternoon—D. Davidson, T. Rutherford, D. Belleghem

Evening—J. S. Knapman, S. Ray, Geo. Fitzgerald.

COFFEE HEADACHES

Left When Change Was Made to Postum Food Coffee.

"As long as I drank coffee, once every month regularly, I had a bilious sick headache. I had often read in the papers about Postum Food Coffee, but, like lots of people, I thought [illegible] to sell them.

"Finally I asked my husband to buy me a small package to try. I boiled it not quite as long as your directions said, and did not like it. The next morning I had coffee for breakfast and had a sick headache.

"The third morning I tried Postum again, boiling it about twenty minutes. Then it tasted good, and the longer I drank it the better I liked it. That was about three months ago. We have had Postum ever since, and never in all this time have I had the least sign of a headache or been sick in any way.

"I told a brother-in-law of the experience. He suffered with bilious headaches, and was threatened with nervous prostration. He stopped coffee and began using Postum Food Coffee, which he did not like at the first [illegible] very much indeed, when they learned to make it right. It has cured him also.

"The following friends have been helped by leaving of coffee and using Postum; D. B. Wicatt, his wife and sister; J. H. Mathews, his wife and daughter. We are naturally very strong advocates of Postum Food Coffee." Lille K. Mathews, 466 24th St., Detroit, Mich.

THE MAYORALTY.

To the Ratepayers of the Town of Peterborough:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

At the request of hundreds of the ratepayers of the town expressed in a requisition presented to me. I have accepted nomination for the Mayorality for 1900, and am in the field seeking your sufferages. I do not believe that it will be necessary to assure you that I did not seek the office, but only entered the contest because in the face of the request made of me by so many of our citizens I felt that it was a duty I owed to the public which I have been privileged to serve in different capacities so frequently. It was from no desire to monopolize offices that are within the gift of the people, but simply because I was made to feel that at the present time the citizens wanted my services and that when the demand was made so forcibly I would indeed be lacking in my duty if I did not respond, even though the response meant much personal sacrifice to myself.

Having accepted nomination I respectfully solicit your votes and influence, and if elected I promise to give my best attention to the duties of the office. I will give my time and what ability I possess to the advancement of the town's best interests. The town's interests are my interests, for I have, as you are aware, no small stake here, and economy and progress will be my watchwords. All questions coming before the Council will receive my careful and unprejudiced attention, and my aim will be to maintain that harmony and unity in the consideration of civic business that will allow the best results to be realized.

It will be impossible owing to the short time between now and election day for me to call personally on all of you, and I therefore solicit your support in this way, hoping for a renewal of the confidence expressed in me as a member of the Council and as Mayor in former years.

I desire to thank those who have already expressed their confidence in me by signing the handsome requisition presented to me.

Wishing you one and all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

I am ladies, and gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

JAS. KENDRY.

WELLAND CANAL

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed tenders, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvement at Port Colborne," will be received at this office until 16 o'clock on Friday, the 26th day of January, [illegible] for the works of improvement at the upper entrance to the Welland Canal.

Plans and specifications of the work can be seen on and after the 28th day of December, 1899, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Superintending Engineer's office at St. Catherines. Printed forms of tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned. In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of same, and further an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $10,000 must accompany the tender. The accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the conditions requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of June, 1902, will be regidly enforced and all penalties for delay enacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary Dep't Railways and Canals.

Pretoria, Jan. 1st.

ree British prisoners who were taken at Malagre say that Capt. Gordon Chesney-Wilson, husband of Lady Sarah Wilson, and five other officers, whose names they refuse to give, were wounded in the recent sortie from Mafeking.

Belmont, Cape Colony, Monday, Jan. 1 despatch from Dover farm, dated Jan. 1, says—"The colonial troops, who have been longing to be allowed to meet the Boers, have at last been given an opportunity to do so and scored a brilliant success. The raid conducted by Colonel Pitcher was very difficult owing to the fact that the movements of the troops were immediately communicated to the Boers by natives. In order to prevent this Col. Pitcher, in making his forced march from Belmont, sent a trooper of the British at every farm house with instructions not to allow the natives to leave their huts, the patrols calling the names of the natives hourly in order to prevent their escape. In the manoeuvers at Cook's farm Colonel Pitcher sent mounted patrols east, one of them, consisting of four men commanded by Lieut. Adie, suddenly encountered fourteen Boers, who opened fire. The Lieutenant was severely wounded, and private Butler gave up his horse in order to carry the Lieutenant out of range. Another private, whose horse had bolted, pluckily returned to render assistance. He was wounded in the leg and his horse was killed. Meanwhile Lieut. Ryan, who had worked magnificently, reported that the vale on the right of the enemy was clear, whereupon Major Derougemont ordered the guns to a trot. They arrived to within 1,500 yards of the laager and planted five shells in as many minutes within the laager. The enemy would be seen streaming over the kopje. They were completely surprised, but quickly managed a well directed fire.

representative of the Associated Press had the privilege of carrying an order to the Toronto company to double quick into action. The order was received with great satisfaction. The company rushed forward until within a thousand yards of the enemy's position, when it opened a hot fire upon the kopje and completely subdued the Boer fire. The British artillery shelled the position with wonderful accuracy, while Lieutenant Ryan with mounted infantry worked round and completely uncovered the fire of the Boers, who had been hidden in the bushes. Meanwhile Colonel Pitcher with the Queenslanders taking advantage of every cover made a direct attack, the Australians moving slowly, but surely, and shouting when they saw the enemy retiring under their steady fire.

The Queenslanders behaved with great coolness, laughing and chaffing even at the moment of greatest peril. During the advance the Boer fire suddenly ceased. Thirty-five Boers hoisted a white flag and surrendered. A portion of the Torontos moved across the front of the guns and entered the laager. The Boers had fled. Fourteen tents, three waggons, a great store of rifles, ammunition, forage, saddles and camp equipment, and numerous incriminating papers were captured.

The Boers lost six killed and twelve wounded. The Torontos stood the galling fire with admirable patience, never wasting a shot.

Pretoria, Jan. 1.

Last night, Sunday, the British in great force attacked Commandant Schoeman's commando in the Colesburg district and tried to storm the position. They repeated the attack in the morning but were forced to retreat; the Boers holding the position.

The loss of the British is not known but it is expected to have been heavy. The Boers consider it a great compliment to the Transvaal that Lord Roberts should have been selected to supreme command of the British forces.

London, Jan. 3.

The morning papers are unaminous in praising the gallantry of the colonial troops. The Times says: "The Mother Country will share with the Canadians and Australians in the pride and gratification they must feel at the fine qualities displayed by the troops in this dashing little engagement."

The Standard says: "The Canadians and Australians have been spoiling for a fight. Now they have had their opportunity and they have greatly distinguished themselves by their coolness and discipline.

From the view point of Imperial Unity the little fight may fairly be described as one of the most gratifying events recorded in the recent history of the British race.

MAY SECURE THE BRIDGE.

London, Jan. 2.—General French's success will undoubtedly have a good moral effect, and it is added, if promptly followed up, as seems likely from the fact that Remington's guides are already advancing upon Atcherland, it may result in securing Norval's pont bridge, thus gaining another important strategic advantage, as thence General French would probably be able to threaten Bethulie bridge, which is the main line of retreat for the Boers facing General Gatacre. Other official despatches, dated January 1, say General Methuen's position is unchanged.

ENGLAND WAS JUSTIFIED.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—The Berliner Tageblatt thinks that the English man-of-war was justified in confiscating goods belonging to the Transvaal Government, and calls attention to the alleged fact that neither England or the United States signed the treaty of Paris which laid down the principle that a neutral flag covers an enemy's goods unless they are contraband of war. It goes on to say, however, that the seizure of the Bundesrath was undoubtedly a breach of international law.

TWO CREDITABLE ENGAGEMENTS

Starkstroom, Jan. 2.—A party of scouts under Milford, in a donga south west of Lambugh's Nek, six miles north of Dordrecht, were cut off by the enemy owing to an incorrect report. The error was discovered too late for action that evening, but a pretty fight resulted in the morning, when Captain Goldsworthy reached the eastern edge of the plateau under the Boer position, and scouts, loaded with ammunition, mounted the cliffs on the south side. The Boers by this time were pressing heavily against Milford, whose ammunition was running short. On the appearance of the reinforcements the Boers fled hastily, firing from the hills at long range. The party were rescued. Our guns opened fire, and the enemy replied without effect, although their shells burst by percussion instead of falling dead. The remainder of the force having withdrawn, artillery followed. Our loss was only two wounded. The Boers lost about thirty, including 6 killed. The enemy tried the white flag trick without effect, while our reply killed two of them, including the bearer of the flag. The enemy crept down and shot Milford's horses. They dared not come to close fighting with his men. The engagements were most creditable to our troops.

FRENCH TELLS OF HIS VICTORY.

London, Jan. 2.—The success of General French's column is at length confirmed officially, the War Office this afternoon issuing a despatch from Cape Town, dated Monday, Jan. 1, as follows—

"French reports at 2 p. m. to-day from Colesberg by heliograph as follows—

"Leaving at Rensburg, holding the enemy in front, half of the 1st Suffolks and a section of the Royal Horse Artillery I started thence at 5 in the afternoon of Dec. 31, taking with me five squadrons of cavalry, half of the second Berks and eighty mounted infantry, infantry carried in [illegible] for four hours at Maldore farm and at 3.30 this morning occupied the kopje overlooking and westward of Colesburg. The enemy's outposts were taken completely by surprise. At daylight we shelled the laager and enfiladed the right of the enemy's position. The artillery fire in reply was very hot from a 15 pounder using royal laboratory ammunition, and other guns. We silenced the guns on the enemy's right flank, demonstrating with cavalry and guns to the north of Colesberg towards the junction, where a strong laager of the enemy was holding a hill, and a position southeast of Colesberg as far as the junction. Our position cuts the line of retreat via the road and bridge. Some thousands of Boers with two guns are reported to be retiring towards Norval's Pont. All Remington's scouts proceeded towards Achterlang yesterday morning. Slight casualties. About three killed and few wounded. Details later."

BOERS SUFFERED HEAVILY.

London, Jan. 2.—Brief independent messages from Rensburg filed the evening of January 1, supplement General French's despatch but slightly. According to them the British were still shelling the Boer position at five o'clock on Monday evening and expected to enter Colesberg to-day.

The British losses were three men killed and seven wounded, none of them being an officer. The Boers are supposed to have suffered heavily from the accuracy of the British artillery fire. Gen. French's statement that the Boers were using a fifteen pounder and Woolwich ammunition evidently refers to one of the British guns captured at Stormberg.

The Boer strength in the engagement with General French was estimated at from five thousand to seven thousand men.

SOME YANKEE BOSH.

Yale Historian Declares the Empire Faces the Gravest Peril.

New Haven, Conn., Jan 2.—Professor Arthur M. Wheeler, an authority on European history and head of the history department of Yale, to-day said—"I cannot but look upon the present trouble of the English in South Africa as brought upon themselves and merited. They bungled other wars, such as the American revolution, when they had no need to. This Boer matter has never been handled with diplomacy. Had it been left to Salisbury it would have been averted.

"The Boers have as much right to independence now as we had in 1776, but it will be a fight for England now to get what she might have had by peaceful means. The South African problem means the ultimate overthrow of British rule in Africa and the assertion of independence by the native states. If England loses much in Africa it means trouble elsewhere for her.

"England is in a position of great peril just now as regards her colonial possessions. If all the blacks should rise it would mean a terrible ending of the British dream of 'civilizing South Africa.'"

PETERBOROUGH BOYS OFF TO THE WAR!

Local Members of the Contingent Get a Royal Send-off From the Citizens.

Peterborough's representatives on the second Canadian contingent left last night on the midnight train for Ottawa. The names of the heroes are:

Major Greenwood, Prince of Wales Dragoons.
Adam J. Hall, 57th Battalion.
Daniel M. Spence, 57th Battalion.
Percy Wasson, Norwood.
W. J. Hampton, Peterborough.
Percy R. Price, B.O.W.D., Otonabee.
Ira Brown, P.O.W.D., Colborne.
Sergt-Major Terrill, P.O.W.D., Prince Edward.
Sergt-Major Willoughby, P.O.W.D. Colborne.
A. E. Hillyard, P.O.W.D., Peterborough.
Geo. E. Fleming, Bewley.
R. G. Johnston, Cavanville.

The heroes were entertained at McCallum's resturant to a supper at 8 o'clock, and were afterwards escorted to the drill shed, where a couple of thousand citizens were awaiting them

Mr. R. M. Roy was on hand and secured a very good flash light photograph of the members of the contingent, after which Col. Bell, in a brief address, presented each of the three members of the 57th Battalion on the contingent with an envelope containing $25.

Rev. Mr. Simons, delivered a short address, reminding the members of the contingent that they were going to fight th ebattles of their country, and were doing so of their own free will. In this they were following the example of the Great Master who gave his life for others.

Cheers were then given for the heroes, after which they were escorted to the station by several thousand citizens, headed by the band. Patriotic songs were sung, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed.

Members of the 57th Battalion chaired their three departing comrades from the drill shed to the station. On the way down other members of the contingent were raised on the shoulders of enthusiastic citizens, and carried in truimph to the depot, where they took the train, amidst the wildest enthusiasm.

Too much credit cannot be accorded Col. Bell and officers of the Battalion for their generous donation of $75 to the departing men.

The men will join the Ontario section of th econtingent in Ottawa, and subsequently leave for Halifax, N.S., where they will sail for South Africa about the 15 instant.

CANADIANS IN BATTLE.

Belmont, Cape Colony, Jan. 2.—A despatch from the Associated Press representative at Dover Farm, dated January 1, says:

A mounted force consisting of 100 Canadians of the Toronto Company and 200 Queenslanders, commanded by Colonel Rickards, two guns and a horse battery under Major DeRougemont, forty mounted infantry under Lieut. Ryan, and 200 of the Cornwall light infantry, the whole commanded by Colonel Pilcher, left Belmont yesterday at noon on a march westward, covering 20 miles before sunset.

The force encamped at Cook's Farm where the troops were welcomed enthusiastically. At 6 o'clock this morning the force approached a spot where a laager of the Boers were reported. Colonel Pilcher, on approaching the position, which was a line of strong kopjes, detached Major de Rougemont with the guns, Torontos and mounted infantry, to work towards the right, making a turning movement himself with the Queenslanders, towards the south position.

The manoeuvre was a complete success. The British shells were the first indication of the presence of the troops. The Boers left their laager and opened fire, but the Queenslanders, completing the movement, the laager was captured with 40 prisoners.

The British casualties were two men killed, three wounded, and one missing. The whole force worked admirably. The two men killed belonged to the Queensland contingent.

ANOTHER BRITISH VICTORY.

London, Jan. 2.—The War Office has received the following from Cape Town under to-day's date—

"Colonel Pilcher reports through the officer commanding at the Orange River "I have completely defeated a hostile commando at the Sunnyside laager this day, Jan. 1, taking the laager and forty prisoners besides the killed and wounded. Our casualties are two privates killed and Lieut. Adie wounded. Am encamped at Dover farm, 20 miles northwest of Belmont and ten miles from Sunnyside."

A Shocking Accident.

A shocking accident occurred in Ashburnham on Saturday morning, when Celina the fourteen year old daughter of Stephen Huart, Driscoll Terrace, was frightfully burned, as the result of her nightdress taking fire. It appears that the little girl was sitting in front of the stove in her bedroom, having just arisen, and must have stood too close to the fire, as her night dress suddenly burst into flames. The frightened child rushed shrieking down stairs where the rest of the family was assembled, but before the flames could be extinguished she was badly burned about the face and head, the hands and the legs. The sufferer was removed to St. Joseph's hospital and placed under the care of Drs. Moher and McCullough. The little sufferer had improved considerably, being able to open her eyes for the first time yesterday, and her recovery is now assured.

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

SEAPORT FOR THE BOERS

Germans Declare the New Frontier Must Reach the Ocean.

EXPULSION UNNECESSARY.

Dutch Allies Deemed Superior to England's Soldiers.

Many Subjects of William Enlist in the Army of Queen Victoria.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—The German press continues to comment upon the war in South Africa. The Militair Wochenblatt, the military organ, contains a severe critism by a high officer, in which the writer claims that hitherto Boers, both leaders and men, have proved far more efficient in every way than the British. The National Zeitung publishes a similarly severe article. The Kreuz Zeitung says editorially—

"The best solution for Germany would be a peace guaranteeing the Boers their independence and securing the future—that is, creating a state whose frontier touches the sea, in order to enable it to adapt itself to the new times upon which Africa is entering.

"That must be the policy of the Boers. We do not desire the British to be expelled wholly from Africa, but we do not see the necessity for making the entire African continent British. The ideas of Cecil Rhodes will split upon the rock of Boer courage."

Many Germans Aid the British.

Proofs accumulate that not all the Germans sympathize with the Boers. Gottfried Hagen, in Kalk, a suburb of Deutz, Prussia, has accepted an order from England for the immediate manufacture of forty tons of lead bullets. At the English embassy large numbers of Germans apply daily for enlistment in the British army. The applicants, when desirable, are told that they may go to London, where they are sure of enlistment.

The British embassy in Berlin authorizes a denial of the report that the duke of York and the duke of Connaught will attend the chapter of the Order of the Black Eagle next month and be created knights. There is also no foundation for the story that Emperor William will attend the century celebration of the Berlin high school of techology and there be created first doctor of engineering. This is denied by the minister of education and by the rector of the high school.

The new school of technology will be abolished in Jena for the Thuringian schools.

In Great Demand.

The Times did not appear yesterday on account of the holiday on Monday, and notwithstanding the fact that notice was given to this effect in the paper scores of our subscribers called at the office and dozen more telephoned to know why their paper had not been delivered. One man said he would sooner go without his breakfast than not get his times. Yesterday twenty-three new subscribers were added to our lists. Everybody reads The Times.

Canadian Patriotism.

As a sample of the patriotic sentiment which exists in regard to the war in South Africa, we may mention an incident that occurred yesterday. Mr. John Green, barrister, of this town, received a despatch from his son George, a lad sixteen years of age, who is attending school at Kingston, as follows:

"Please write immediately permission for me to go to South Africa with contingent." Mr. Green wired in reply, "Yes, go, I would go too if eligible." This illustration shows the patriotic feeling of the Canadian people.

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 27, 1899

A LARGE ARMY.

Some idea of the magnitude that the present war in South army is assuming, and of the determination of England to bring it to a successful issue, may be gleaned from the announcement that the army which General Lord Roberts will have under his command next month will aggregate 180,000 men. This is about four times the number of troops that it was originally intended to transport to Cape Colony, and it is more than three times the strength of the allied army that was pitted against Russia in the Crimea in 1854.

Some of our hypercritical friends across the border apparently regard this as a pretty large army to fight two small republics, but they simply base their calculation on the relative numerical strength of the two combatants and ignore the circumstances that have to be taken into account in considering the question. Every man in the Transvaal and the Orange Free State is a soldier, and a soldier also of undoubted skill, intrepidity and endurance. Then the Boers have been preparing for this war for ten years past, and when they got completely ready for it they threw down the gauntlet and compelled England to fight. They were at this time masters of the situation, holding all the passes and natural fortifications on an extended frontier, and were in a position to bid defiance to an army three times their own strength. Great Britain only a small force at her command when war was declared, and this has since had all it could do to maintain their position intact. The main body of men and all the paraphernalia of war had to be conveyed a distance of 7,000 miles, and in the history of the world so large an army was never before transported to so great a distance in so short a time or with such few casualities. But the force proved inadequate for the task required of it, and it is for this reason that so many additional men are being sent out. Assurance is to be made doubly sure, and if any further "miscalculation" is made it will not be on the side of under, but rather of over estimation of the force essential to lead the "Soldiers of the Queen" to victory.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No tr- of any kind should be left on the bot-

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, noting his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tarateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tarateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heaviest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to werk, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 35 cents each, but with $85 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had resumed his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE Canada Business College

CHATHAM, ONT.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institution has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, which is twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st, seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

236 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

DEATH OF DAVIDHOGG.

A Former Resident of Peterborough Dies in London England.

Montreal, Que., Dec. 30.—The death of David H. Hogg, of this city, is announced from London. Mr. Hogg while crossing the Atlantic on the Majestic from New York fell on the deck and broke his collar bone. An operation in London resulted fatally. Mrs. Hogg was cabled for and reached the other side two days later after her husband's death. Mr. Hogg was a wholesale dealer in photographic supplies and before coming to this city resided in Peterborough.

The deceased will be remembered by a number of the older residents as coming to town from Aberdeen, Scotland, in the fifties wit hhis brother James. He took a position in a general store kept by Nicholls and Hall and James was employed in th elocal branch of the Bank of Montreal of which Mr. Ront Nichols was agent at that time. Mr. Hogg was afterwards employed in the post office and left Peterborough about 30 years ago. Of late years h ehas been very prosperous in business, owning photographic supplies depots in both Montreal and Toronto. His brother James who was afterwards manager of the Bank of Montreal in Stratford and other places now resides in western Ontario having been superannuated some years ago.—Examiner.

Bright Page in History.

London, Dec. 30.—Sir Robert Gillespie, presiding at a meeting of the Canada Company, remarked on the splendid evidence of loyalty exhibited by Canada during the present South African troubles. He was sure that all were identified with Canada, as well as the nation at large, felt proud of Canada's enthusiastic and glorious desire to help to support the mother country in th ecrisis. No action could prove more strongly their desire to maintain the unity of the empire. Their loyalty to the Queen was indeed a bright page in the history of Great Britain and the colonies. These remarks were enthusiastically received.

Liner Ashore.

London, Dec. 30.—The Hamburg and South American lines Peletas, from Santos for Rotterdam, having 629 passengers on board, struck on the sand on the east side of Dungeness, the southern extremety of Kent, soon after midnight, in the midst of a terrific agle, which raged all around the coast.

The storm was the worst of the winter and seas immediately began breaking over the steamer. For a time it appeared as though no one on board of her could be saved.

The Dugness coast guards seeing the Peletas' signals of distress, made desperate and for a long time unsuccessful efforts to launch the life boat in the heavy surf beating on the shore.

Finally the coast guardsmen succeeded in reaching the Pietas. They remained alongside the steamer all night and eventually put the rocket apparatus in operation. During the whole time the wind blew with hurricane force, accompanied by heavy rain and hail. The passengers had a terrifying experience. When day broke the gale slightly moderated, enabling the life boats to transfer the passengers, who were safely landed at New Romnew.

NO PASSENGERS ON BOARD.

London, Dec. 30.—It now turns out that the Peletas carried no passengers only carrying grain.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" is to be found in almost every European language but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

Joliette, Dec. 30.—Robbers again broke into the Canadian Pacific station here last night, but his time, as far as canbe ascertained, secured nothing of great value. They succeeded in badly demolishing the safe, and secured a number of tickets and express parcels.

This is the third time within two years that the Joliette station has been forcibly entered. A few months ago the robbers secured a haul of several thousand dollars, which was never recovered.

A Good Suggestion.

Editor Morning Times:

Dear sir,—While seated at the Red Cross Fund entertainment last Friday evening it was with pleasure that I noticed some of the ladies in the audience sitting with uncovered heads, thereby enabling those sitting in their rear to see the entertainment without obstruction and at the same time adding to the beauty of the fair ones and manifesting a thoughtfulness that none could fail to appreciate. When not the least beautiful and select part of the audience voluntarily inaugurated such a boon, I think we might fairly ask the whole sex to adopt it as an established custom. A move along this line is being made in other places. The Rev. Thomas Dunlop, of the Methodist Church, in Midland, does not feel inclined to wait on the pleasure of the ladies, but is seeking to establish the custom on arbitratory lines. He has issued a decree making it incumbent upon the ladies attending his church to remove their hats or bonnets during divine service on and after next Sunday. I think the cause would be better advanced by appealing to the good common sense of the fair ones, who appear to possess such a commodity in a prominent degree, yours,

STERNER SEX.

NOT AGAINST ENGLAND.

Paris, Dec. 30.—France has at last defined her attitude toward England. It has not been done without much fear on all sides that something radical might occur which would throw the French republic into tumult and perhaps ruin the great exposition of 1900. Wise counsels have prevailed, however, and it can be stated that France has turned a deaf ear to Russia's pleadings. Russia offered to support France in demanding immediate evacuation of Egypt and at the same time make energetic demonstration in the direction of India. To all this France has declined her assent. It is now the universal impression that France will take no hostile action toward England.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

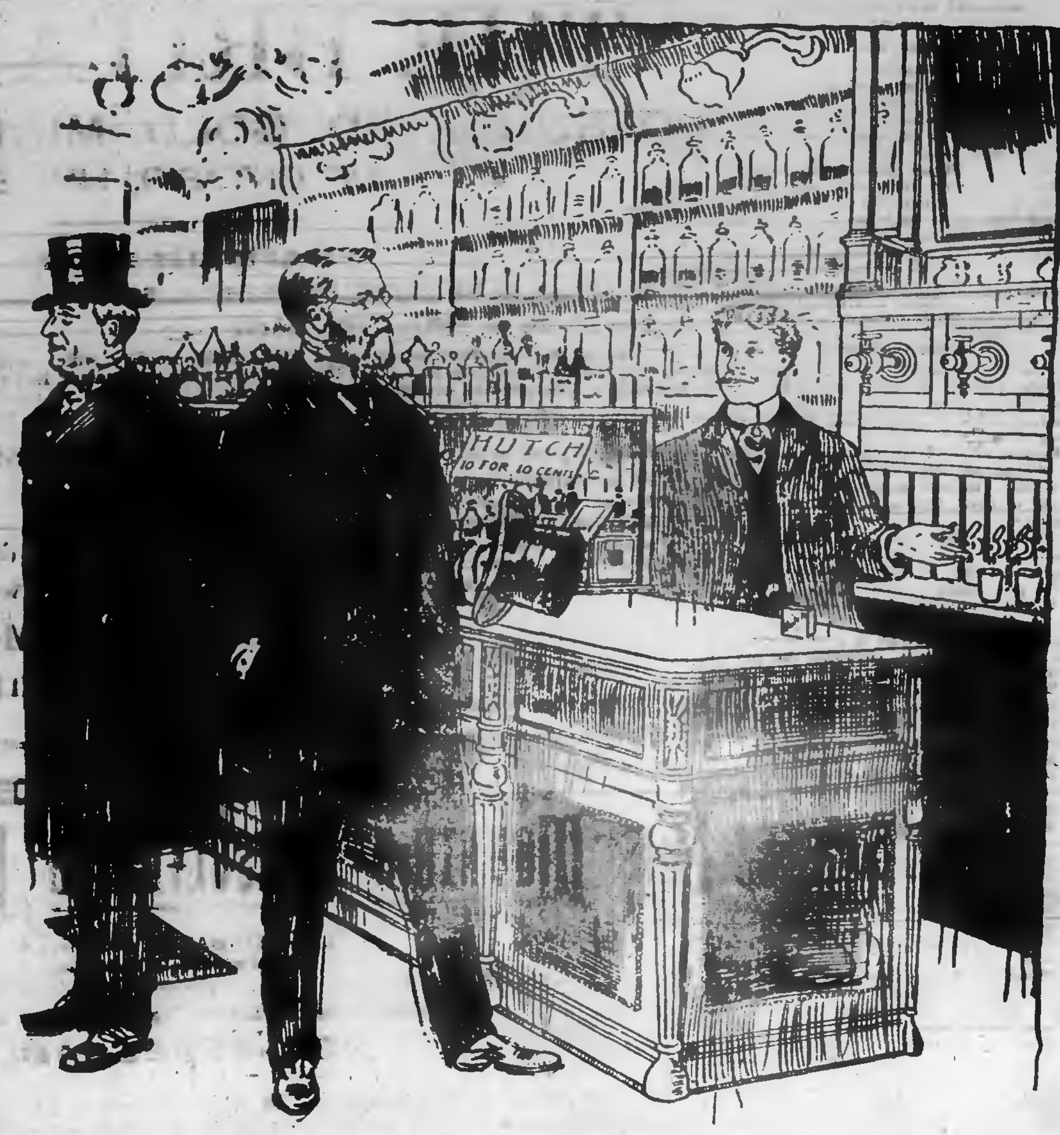
Hutch in Hamilton.



The Royal Drug Hall in Hamilton has, under the proprieto ship of Mr. Lauchland, becom one of the leading drug establishments in that city. Mr. Lauchlan can boast of a trade patronize by the best and most prominen Hamiltonians.

Mr. Lauchland's policy is to handle only standard treatments. No quack can expect to impose on the public with Mr. Lauchland as a medium. He is a firm believer in Hutch and loses no opportunity in extoling the merits of that dyspepsia cure. "It is hardly necessary for me to say a good word for Hutch," said Mr. Lauchland, "there are such a great number of people using it, but whenever a purchaser asks me as to the respective merits of the different treatments I tell him plainly that Hutch is by far the most efficacious cure on the market. I base my judgment on the wonderful recoveries from stomach disorders Hutch is effecting. To me its power is almost miraculous. A ten-cent package means a customer."

Ten Hutch ten cents or two hundred for one dollar. At all druggists or by mail from the Woodward Medicine Company, Limited, 11 Colborne St., Toronto. 19 to 27 Gull St., Buffalo, N.Y.

ROBERTS AND KITCHENER

TWIN HEROES OF TWO BLOODY EASTERN WARS.

One Reaped Undying Fame in the Famous March to Kandahar; the Other on the Bloody Sands of the Soudan.

The seriousness of the war situation in South Africa has stirred up England as she has not been stirred before in three-quarters of a century and has led to her ordering to the scene of hostilities two of her ablest generals, Field Marshal Lord Roberts and Maj. General Lord Kitchener, the one the hero of Kandahar, and the other the hero of Omdurman, in Africa.

Lord Roberts, who will assume chief command in South Africa, is the idol of the British army and is popularly known as "Bobs." He is regarded by the military authorities of the leading countries of Europe as the foremost British commander of the Victorian era, his celebrated forced march to Kandahar constituting one of the finest feats of English arms in modern times.

IN THE INDIAN MUTINY.

Lord Frederick S. Roberts was born in 1832 and was educated at the Royal Military College at Sandhurst. He was only 19 years old when he went to India and entered the Bengal artillery as a lieutenant. Here he labored unknown to fame until the Indian mutiny when he was attached to the column which was sent to attack Delhi, the forces of the rebellion. The position of the small British force before the capital of the insurrection was for months a perilous one. Fighting was of daily occurrence, the mutineers having an unlimited number of guns and an inexhaustable supply of ammunition. Roberts came under fire for the first time in a skirmish, when 8 of his party were killed and 30 wounded. Soon afterward, in another of the engagements near the walls of the city, the young lieutenant was hit by a bullet near the spine as he was helping the drivers keep the horses quiet while limbering up the guns. A leather pouch had somehow slipped behind his back and prevented the bullet penetrating deeply.

AT THE RELIEF OF LUCKNOW.

After the capture of Delhi Roberts joined the army of Sir Colin Campbell, which advanced to the relief of Lucknow. When the relieving army got close to the rebel lines outside Lucknow Sir Colin, wishing to let the British commander, Outram, know of his progress wanted a flag raised on the mess house. Within plain view of the mutineers Lieut. Roberts climbed to the top of the building, and, amid a rain of shot, raised the flag on the turret nearest to the foe. It was shot away, and he replaced it. Again it was shot away, and he raised it again. But it was not for this deed that Roberts won his Victoria Cross. That was done at Khudagunge January 2, 1858. He saw in the distance two sepoys going away with a standard. Putting spurs to his horse, he overtook them. They turned and presented their muskets at him, and one of the men pulled the trigger. It snapped, missing fire, and the sepoy was cut down by Robert's sword. The other mutineer rode away, and the young lieutenant brought the standard back to camp. The same day he rescued a wounded comrade under almost similar circumstances.

In the years that followed the mutiny Roberts saw almost continual service. He was at Umbeyla, in the frontier campaign, in 1863; in 1867 he had charge of the embarkation of the force for the Abyssinian campaign. In 1871 and 1872 he was the senior staff officer in the Lushai campaign, and from 1875 to 1878 he was quartermaster general. All his promotions were "for merit."

It was toward the end of 1878 that the great opportunity of Gen. Roberts' career came to him. The Ameer of Afghanistan rebelled against the authority of Great Britain and Roberts was sent at the head of the army to subdue him. He carried the enemy's stronghold at Peiwar Kotal with a splendid rush at odds of almost ten to one. The next year the news of Sir Louis Cavagnari's murder in Kabul horrified all England and Roberts was called upon to lead another avenging party. With 6,000 men he cut his way straight through the hostile land, and in 30 days placed the British flag above the citadel of Kabul, after routing the Afghan army, which outnumbered the British by twelve to one. Then after reinforcements had been sent to him he began one of the most famous marches in history—over towering mountain ranges and through hostile territory, straight from Kabul to Kandahar—300 miles in 20 days. At the end of the march he crushed Ayoob Khan and the whole empire rang with the praises of the man who a few months before had been almost unknown.

Since then Roberts has advanced through successive stages to the position of commander-in-chief of the forces in Ireland. Now in his 67th year he is called upon to face the hardest task of his military career and a pathetic thing about his departure is the fact that his orders came to him simultaneously with the news of the death of his son, a bright young officer, who fell in the battle of the Tugela river.

KITCHINER, HERO OF THE SOUDAN.

Lord Kitchiner, chief-of-staff to Lord Roberts is England's latest and most popular war hero. His successful conquest of the Egyptian Soudan won for him a fame in England to be compared with that of Admiral Dewey in the United States. In return for the services Gen. Kitchiner rendered his country in Egypt he was raised to the peerage and was voted a gift of $150,000 by the House of Commons.

He was born in Kerry county, Ireland, in 1851, and at the age of 20 received his commission as lieutenant of Engineers. For a long time he was in the civil service in Egypt under Sir Evelyn Wood, who was then engaged in the reorganization of the Egyptian army. He received an appointment on the intelligence staff when the troubles in the Soudan made necessary the despatch of trustworthy English officers to Dongola in advance of Lord Wolseley's Nile expedition 15 years ago. There Kitchiner was always the one selected for any task that demanded great force of character, combined with tact and resourcefulness in dealing with intrigues of disloyal officials or winning over the chiefs who wavered between fear of Egyptian power and a hankering after the good things promised by Mahdism.

With the Nile expedition Kitchener's promotion was rapid. He became one of the two majors of cavalry in 1884, was made lieutenant colonel in 1885 and became colonel in 1888. He was in command of a brigade of the Egyptian army in the operation near Suakim in December, 1888, and was present in the engagements at Gemaizeh and at Toski, in 1889. At the beginning of the campaign of 1896 for the reconquest of the Soudan Kitchener was made commander-in-chief of the forces in Egypt. He led a successful expedition up the Nile against the Khalifa, safely conducting his troops up cataracts and through marauding tribes and difficult country until Omdurman was reached. There was fought a terrific battle between the Anglo-Egyptian troops and the Dervishes, the latter being cut down like grass before the scythe. In one charge the Dervishes lost 4,000 men and when the battle was over 16,000 of their dead and dying strew the ground. The Khalifa and his chiefs were fugitives and have recently been killed. Kitchiner on his return home after this brilliant expedition became the popular idol. He is the youngest major general in the British army.

Robbed a Station.

Preston, Ont., Dec. 30.—A sensational and daring burglary occurred in Preston early yesterday morning, when E. W. Zieman's merchant tailoring and gent's furnishing establishment in the Opera House block was entered by two men who evidently were familiar with the premises. They first broke into R. Shantz's foundry where they secured a long screwdriver and chisel. With these instruments they drove up town in a single rig and left their vehicle standing in front of Zieman's store.

They quickly forced the door open, and one of the men rushed to the tailor shop at the rear, where Gideon Zieman, a nephew of the proprietor, was sleeping. He grabbed him by the throat, and, placing a revolver close to his face, said he would shoot him if he made an outcry.

In the meantime his pal lit a lamp and cooly commenced to sort out the best stock in the store, consisting of fur caps, ties, clothing, etc., which was loaded into the rig waiting outside. The clothing of the captive on the scene was also hidden, unknown to him, as the revolver was kept in close proximity to his head during the whole time the stock was being looted, and when the thieves drove away with their booty it took him some time to get out to give the alarm.

Detective Klippert of Berlin is working on the case.

Uneasiness in Paris.

Paris, Dec. [illegible].—The [illegible] official seizure by [illegible] of vessels laden with American flour, consigned to the Boers, and the statement of the Lokal Angeiger regarding an alleged Anglo-German-Portuguese treaty for the division of Portugal's colonies between Great Britain and Germany, have aroused new interest in Paris. While there is a desire to discredit the Lokal Anzeiger's statement, its publication has occasioned undoubted uneasiness, because the consummation of such a plan would be a diplomatic stroke unfavorable to France and Russia. The possession of Delagoa Bay is believed to be essential to British success in South Africa, as a victory over the Boers is essential to Great Britain's international prestige. Therefore it is felt that, if necessary, Great Britain will take extreme measures.

THE LINE IS OPEN.

London, Dec. 30.—The War Office has received this despatch:—

"Cape Town, Thursday, Dec. 28.—The Indwe colliery line is now working again."

A Brave Boy.

Hamilton, Dec. 30.—Percy Burrows, a 12-year-old boy, who lived on Cannon-st., east, was drowned while trying to save his younger brother's life this morning. Young Burrows, his brother Willie, and several companions were skating on the bay near the smelting works. Willie ventured too far out and went through the ice which was thin at that point. The lads immediately went to his rescue. Without taking time to remove his skates or overcoat Percy plunged into the water. Jas. Clendenning was one of the first boys to arrive on the scene. He succeeded in saving Willie Burrows, but was unable to save Percy. Willie suffered from the cold and was almost completely exhausted. The body of the other lad was subsequently found by the police. It is believed that his skates got stuck in the mud and held him down.

80,000,000 for War Purposes.

Paris, Dec. 30.—The Government will submit to the Chamber of Deputies at the beginning of January a bill providing for the defence of the French coasts and colonies, and to increase the strength of the fleet. This does not involve an increase in the expenditure.

The costs of the defence of the coasts and colonies is estimated at $24,000,000, spread over two and a half years. This sum will be provided for by 50,000,000 francs annually, set aside to pay off certain bonds, and which become free this year by the final repayment of these bonds.

The expense of the increase of the fleet will be met by utilizing 56,000,000 francs out of the 105,000,000 francs annually devoted to the construction of new vessels. At the end of two years the whole 105,000,000 francs can be devoted to the new naval program.

The total outlay, which is estimated at 400,000,000 francs will provide; it is understood, for the construction of 12 first-class ironclads, several torpedo boat destroyers, and a large number of torpedo boats.

Already the press denounce the scheme as inadequate.

La Patrie says:

"It is tantamount to a rejection of the proposal of M. Lockroy, former Minister of Marine, to expend 500,000,000 francs for the immediate reconstruction of the French navy, because the present scheme only asks that 400,000,000, francs be expended within the next six years, while the building of the proposed ironclads will be almost as long."

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for Talking Machines and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

w It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

It was a toothache," said the veteran, at won me a reputation for daring at battle of Bull Run. That was the only t I was ever in where I didn't wish I ld find a hole to crawl into. All this about coolness on the eve of battle is sense, invented by people who have er been there or old soldiers whose gues get away with their memories. men and officers were as brave as any the war and made good records, but y all had the ague and longed for sick e just about the time the bullets be to fly. But I had the toothache for days before that battle, and if there is aggravation on earth that will make a n want to bat his best friend in the that is it.

On the night before the fight I did not p a wink. The old tooth got to jump like a goat, and I couldn't have suf d more from an amputated leg. I was furiously mad. I felt that I'd either to bolt for the rear in search of relief encourage some rebel to put a ball ough my head.

We'd been waiting in battle line for an r, and the boys had grown white and e all choked up. I had been entirely upied with the old tooth, and the first g I knew the fight was on. We were ding them in check, but that didn't fice me. As I got hold of my gun and led the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled for the boys to follow, and we struck hole brigade and whirled it around sent it back half a mile. I felt that I ld lick the whole of Lee's army for an r or two! They told me that I yelled dodged death a thousand times, I remember nothing but the jumps of tooth. To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce ves? A most simple process, but one ely adopted judging by the wilted ff we generally see served. A gentle an of the old school was my teacher, d while yet a mere maid I was pro oted to the proud dignity of crisping e lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from e stalk, discarding discolored and im rfect ones and leaving untouched the y hearts; lay them all in cool, clear ater for awhile, all morning if you oose; pick them over a couple of times fore serving; wash one by one and lay a wire basket if you have one; if not, clean, soft towel will answer; gather e ends and sides loosely in your hand d lightly shake the lettuce; then put e leaves in a colander, which you set the refrigerator, but not on the ice, eave until needed, when you will find e lettuce deliciously cool and crisp ough to crack. Never cut the leaves. very large, divide with the fingers into aller pieces.—What to Eat.

Proud of Him.

When he was 80, he returned to his na ve town "just to see how the old place oked." He found it unchanged. The d store, where as a lad he had clerked it d sold calico and groceries to the old rmers, was just the same. He contrast d the sleepy old place with himself and lt a glow of satisfaction when he thought w much those 80 years had done for m. "They ought to be proud of me," said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhab tants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, din't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the West.—

An Unprecedentable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable cover till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. When ever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the gar den, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to ex tract the pasty portions from the shell.—

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but those things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourn-

SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

A man dragged by a wild horse would cut himself loose if he could. He would not have his flesh bruised and torn for a minute if he could prevent it. But many a man is dragged along by disease when he might just as well be well.

The man who is losing flesh and vitality—who is worn-out, run-down, tired all the time—is on the road to death. He is holding out an invitation to disease. Consumption comes by neglect. Heart disease is a growth from other disorders. Nervous prostration doesn't come in a day.

Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery at the first sign of failing health and you will seldom be very sick. The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the best blood-maker—flesh-builder—nerve-vitalizer. It frees the body from all disease germs. It invigorates the whole digestive system and strengthens heart, lungs and brain. Hundreds of thousands of grateful patients have testified to its value.

George H. Belcher, Esq., of Dorton, Pike Co., Ky., writes: "Thirteen years ago I was wounded by a ball passing through my lung. I had a bad cough almost ever since with shortness of breath; the slightest change of weather would cause the cough to be so bad I would have to sit up in bed all night. A few months ago I began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and now can eat, sleep and work, and I feel like a new man."

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder, "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that righ sahib?"

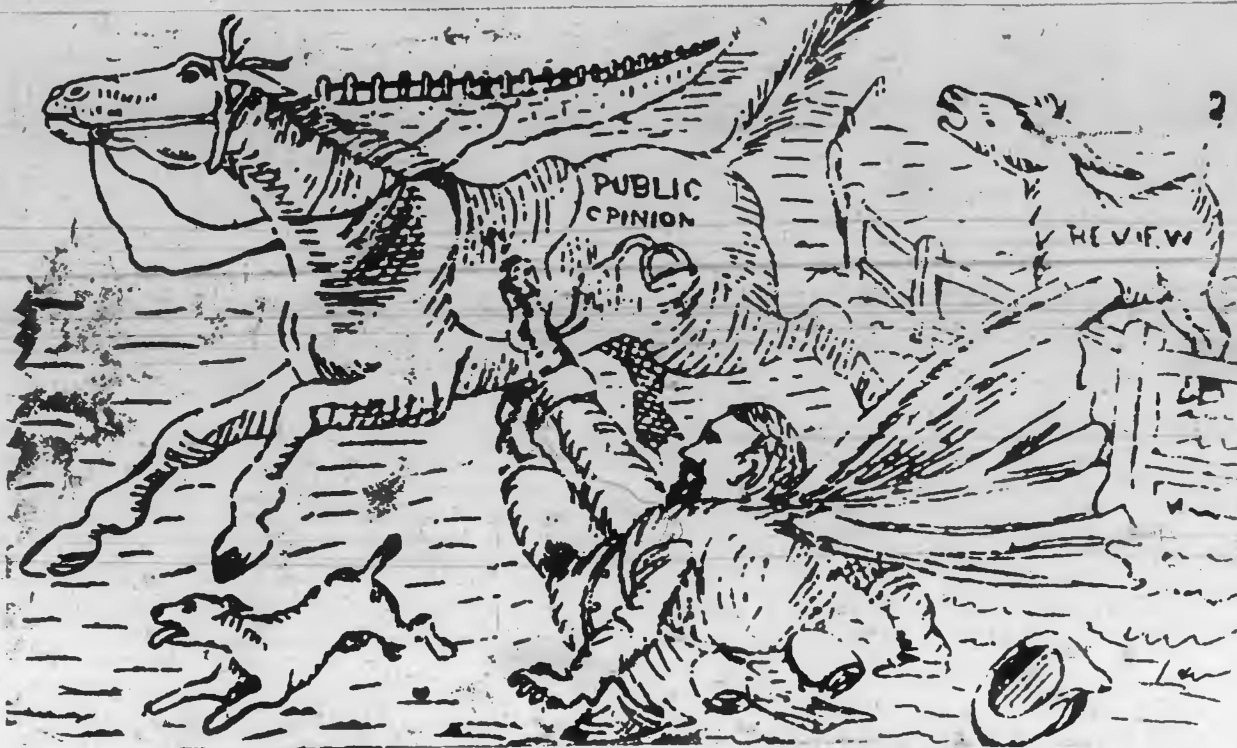
THE MUNICIPAL JOHN GILPIN.

(BRO. LANGFORD.)



Ah, luckless speech and bootless boast,
For which he had to pay full dear;
For while he spake a braying ass
Did sing most loud and clear.

Whereat his horse did snort, as he Had heard a lion roar,
And galloped off with all his might
As he had done before.

Sham Rock

Is a name given by some to our granolithic pavements. Some shoes have sham soles, which when wet are taken off very easily by the sham rock, and thus the sham sole is lost. To avoid the latter buy your shoes from Kidd—the price is no more, but less, and trading stamps given as well.

A New Year's Wedding.

THE MAYORALTY ELECTION.

The result of the election for Mayor was not a great surprise, although it looked at the close of last week as if Mr. McWilliams might succeed in pulling out a majority in spite of the heavy odds against him. Under the circumstances he can be congratulated on making a splendid showing, and his conduct during the whole campaign has added greatly to the respect in which he is held by the citizens of the town. He has this satisfaction at least, that if he was defeated it was by the only one of his opponents who could have had the slightest chance against him. Mr. Kendry also deserves credit for the fair and reasonable manner in which he personally conducted his campaign, but the gutter methods of the Review and several of his chief supporters were simply disgraceful. There can be no possible excuse for such a crusade of abuse, especially when coupled with the fact that only one of the men who were at the bottom of it had the courage to face the electorate. Both parties worked very hard, but the vote polled was not as large as expected. It would seem that the holiday is not a good day for the elections, for a great number of people make a practice of going out of town on New Year's day, and the workers on both sides sought them in vain.

There were two main reasons for Mr. McWilliams' defeat. In the first place he is a man who usually takes strong ground in any contest he enters into, and the vigor and sometimes bitterness with which he fights have made for him a number of personal enemies who made common cause in a strenuous effort to defeat him. In the second place the leaders of the Conservative party succeeded at the last moment in rallying almost all their whole party to Mr. Kendry's support. They realized that his defeat in this election would involve so great a loss of prestige that he would be an impossible candidate in the coming Dominion elections, and with their strongest man out they would run a great risk of losing their last position in Peterborough county. This argument had its effect at the last minute, and regardless of the considerations which alone ought to influence in municipal matters, the great bulk of the party both voted and worked for Mr. Kendry. At the same time great praise is due to a number of Conservatives who, in spite of strong pressure, stuck manfully to their principle that party politics should not be considered at all in municipal affairs. Another force, which contributed largely to the result, was that in a number of manufacturies the employers or foremen wer strongly opposed to Mr. McWilliams, and their influence had great weight with the workmen. Still another cause of the result will be found in the liberal use in certain quarters of an "influence" which had a great effect in the latter part of the afternoon, and which could have just as readily been worked on the other side had Mr. McWilliams been willing to stoop to such means.

The chief openly acknowledged ground of opposition to Mr. McWilliams was his controversies with Mayor Davis and two other members of the Council. It is significant that not one of these gentlemen will be members of this Council. Mr. Langford was the only one who had the courage to face a test, and he met with a crushing defeat. Mr. McWilliams has been bitterly attacked for his share in the pavement investigation, and especially for his attack on Ald. Langford, and that gentleman publicly declared that his sole reason for running this year was that his character might be vindicated by the voice of the people. Th eresult was an ignominous defeat—a popular verdict which amply justifies Mr. McWilliams' course in this regard. It speaks volumes for Mr. McWilliams that after a life of over forty years in Peterborough the meanest personal spite and hostility could find almost nothing in his actions to criticize or question. The sole fault his enemies have been abl eto find is that he is over-energetic in the pursuit of wrong-doing.

The election is now over and we have entered upon a new year, the last of the century. It behooves us all to join hands in support of the new Mayor and Council and each do everything in our power to contribute to the prosperity and good government of the town. We are sure that Mayor Kendry and his associates will find no more willing or more active supporter in all measures that are for the benefir of the general public than the gentleman who so ably contested the Mayoralty contest.

ELECTION NOTES.

Now that the fight is over, let's bury the hatchet and be as kindly disposed to each other as if there had been no unpleasantness.

•• • ••

The only reason why greater slaughter of the Aldermen did not take place, was because there were no new men to vote for.

•• • ••

Ald. Langford paid the penalty of his contempt of public opinion throughout the year. He would have the grades to suit himself and the people have shown him what they think of it. There are two kinds of men—One sort blaze; the other smile and smokeless, laughing what the novelists describe as a Sardonic laugh. The people ultimately do all the laughing, however. Mr. Kendry put up a great fight for a week's work.

A COFFEE SALVE

Released by Postum Food Coffee.

"To my surprise I discovered that the coffee habit was fixed upon me, and I looked forward to the beverage at meals as indispensable.

"I felt that I would rather do without the balance of the meal than the coffee, and became impressed with the fact that my free, independent manhood was practically gone.

"My heart gradually became weaker and weaker until it was so crippled that my feet and hands were always cold, except immediately after drinking coffee; and after the effect of the coffee wore off, I had that horrible, relaxed, rung-out-like-a-dish-rag feeling that made me feel like an old, decripit man at the age of thirty-five.

"When I awakened to my condition, I quit the coffee, and took up Postum Cereal Food Coffee, finding it a most palatable and perfect beverage. My heart has recovered its normal strength, and I am again a young and healthy man. It is very plain to me now that coffee was robbing me of my strength and vigour. Postum helped he quit and built up my nervous system.

"My wife, also, has been wonderfully benefitted by the use of Postum Food Coffee, and we have been engaged in an active crusade in its behalf. Have found many people who had turned down Postum solely on account of not making it properly. It is easy to make if one will use four heaping teaspoons to the pint of water, and allow it to boil long enough. We always use good, rich cream, and sweeten the cup to taste. It is a delicious beverage.

"The following persons were affected very much as I was and have recovered their health by the use of Postum Food Coffee—Dr. J. A. Schuelke of the United States Army, also Mr. John Corcoran of South Omaha, with the Cudahy Packing Co.

"With best wishes." W. H. Spaulding, 1010 Cass St., Omaha, Neb.

WELLAND CANAL

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed tenders, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for improvement at Port Colborne," will be received at this office until 16 o'clock on Friday, the 26th day of January, 1900, for the works of improvement at the upper entrance to the Welland Canal.

Plans and specifications of the works can be seen on and after the 26th day of December, 1899, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Superintending Engineer's office at St. Catherines. Printed forms of tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned. In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of same, and further an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $10,000 must accompany the tender. The accepted bank cheque must be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the conditions requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of June, 1902, will be regidly enforced and all penalties for delay exacted.

By order, L. K. JONES,
Secretary Dep't Railways and Canals.

Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, Dec. 21, 1899.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the Ratepayers of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I desire to return to you my sincere thanks for the honor you have done me in electing m the position of mayor by such a l majority. I appreciate the honor m deepyl than I would under ordi conditions, because I did not seek office, and because it has come to with such an emphatic endorsat from the people. This endorsatio especially gratifying in the face of the circumstances of the contest.
I also desire to state that I pleased that politics were kept of the fight, and I can assure those who supported me, no mat what their political sympathies be, that I attach no political sign cance to the election, and will know one name in my relations w you in the discharge of my duties
Mayor, and that name will be the n of "citizen." It includes you all.
I will give the office my best tention, and will act in all thing what I deem to be the best inter of the town, and for the town's vancement.
Again thanking all my friends w supported me so loyally in the conte and wishing you one and all a Hap and Prosperous New Year.

I remain,
Your obedient serv

JAMES KEND

WANTS REINFORCEMENTS.

Jan. 2.—The War Office this af sued a despatch received from rench, under yesterday's date, position was the same as on the y, that with small reinforce- could dislodge the Boers from and, in the meantime, he con- neuvering.

AIN FORCED TO RETREAT.

nsport, Cape Colony, Jan. 2.— brisk fighting to-day in the d Colesburg. The Boers stub- sted the British at every point lly retreated. The British hold e position to the south and oking the town.

S ATTACK MOLTENO.

m, Cape Colony, Jan. 2.—The cked Molteno this morning. A n is now in progress.

HING FROM MOLTENO.

Jan. 2.—Nothing further has from Molteno, which was re- n Sterkstroom to have been y the Boers this morning. So wn there is only a small force ch from Sterkstroom announ- [illegible], the Boer commandant rg, has died of his wounds.

R HARASSES THE BOERS.

Jan. 2.—General Buller con- night bombardments and pa- ons. As the Tugela river is ble and the stretcher-bearers been requisitioned at Dur- ietermaritzburg there is a dis- believe that the British ad- not be long delayed.

ORK OF A TRAITOR.

Jan. 2.—A special despatch from dated Tuesday, January 2, pply train without a locomo- t in motion within the Brit- near Colesberg and proceeded e Boer position that it was to recover it, and British guns. destroyed the trucks. It is sus- this was the act of a traitor. l British casualties about n two days were six men kil- enty wounded.

WILL COMMAND 200,000 MEN.

London, Jan. 2.—Yesterday the Admiralty chartered eight more large transports. With all the troops destined for South Africa, and those already there, Lord Roberts will be in command of about 200,000 men. Thirty thousand are now afloat or ready to embark.

REBELS ARE DEMORALIZED.

London, Jan. 2.—A Cape Town despatch reports that the rebels in Barkly district are demoralized by the British occupation of Dordrecht." Should it turn out that the Dutch rebellion is thus being diminished, it will be a matter of great relief for the British campaign. The Standard, however, remarks—"Until the Tugela has been crossed and Ladysmith relieved it will be idle to deny that the political position in Cape Colony is one of very great danger."

London, Jan. 2.—The London Daily Mail makes the following statement this morning—"We understand that the Defence Committee of the Cabinet after careful consideration of the question of the defence of the empire, particularly with regard to artillery, will shortly call for the expenditure of £5,000,000 to make good deficiencies and to place the nation on a par with other great powers."

GUNS, SHELLS, ARTILLERYMEN.

London, Jan. 2.—It is reported at Durban that the captured German steamer Bundesrath had on board five big guns, fifty tons of shells and 100 trained artillerymen.

THE FRENCH SHORE QUESTION.

Paris, Jan. 3.—The opinion has been expressed in official circles to a representative of the Associated Press that the modus vivendi between Great Britain and France regarding Newfoundland will be extended for another year There seems to be no disposition upon the part of France to take advantage of Great Britain's uncomfortable position in the Transvaal to force an unfair settlement of a matter she regarded as vital. France is in the position of being willing to sell her fishing rights, but she considers it proper for Great Britain to make the first proposition. Thus the matter stands in abeyance.

BRITISH AGENT ARRESTED.

Berlin, Jan. 3.—It is reported that a British enrolling agent has been arrested at Korbetha, Prussia.

ADOPTED AMERICAN SADDLES.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 3.—The Globe Democrat says:

"E. F. Hutchings, president of the Great West Saddlery Company, Limited, of Winnipeg, Man.; who secured a contract with the British Government for furnishing the equipment for a portion of the 10,000 new cavalry troops called out after Gen. Buller's reverse at the Tugela river, has sub-let most of the order in the United States. Three leading army saddle manufacturers of the United States—located at St. Louis, Chicago and Cincinnati—secured the business. The British Government has accepted for its rough rider service in the Transvaal the United States cavalry saddle and bit."

BOERS RETURN TO THE ATTACK.

Rensburg, Cape Colony, Jan. 2.—It was discovered this morning that the Boers, who had apparently been reinforced, had returned during the night and reoccupied the position from which General French drove them. Their quick-firing guns which were believed to have been disabled yesterday, reopened to-day, shelling the British cavalry with considerable accuracy, though their shells did not explode and were ineffective. The British hold all the positions they took yesterday.

OWNERS OF THE BUNDESRATH.

Berlin, Jan. 3.—The Berlin press is discussing the seizure of the Bundesrath with much calmness. Confidence is expressed that the German Government will maintain all the legitimate interests involved. It is generally regarded as improbable that the Bundesrath carried contraband of war. The owners of the steamer say that it has in no way infringed the obligations of neutrals and had neither ammunition nor intending combatants on board.

TO WATCH DELAGOA BAY.

London, Jan. 3.—It is reported that the particular service squadron now at Gibraltar will be ordered to South Africa as soon as the channel squadron returns to Gibraltar. It is added that this squadron of cruisers is just suited to watch Delagoa Bay.

TRAIN WAS WRECKED.

London, Jan. 3.—The supply train, says another despatch from Rensburg, ran into a broken culvert and was wrecked. The Boers began looting it and another Rensburg train was despatched to the spot in an attempt to recover the provisions. The Boers opened fire upon the troops and natives accompanying it, forcing the second train to retreat after several of the natives had been killed.

DELAGOA BAY AWARD.

London, Jan. 3.—A despatch to The Pall Mall Gazette from Berne says the award in the Delagoa Bay question is being draw up and that it is positively stated that it will be published towards the end of the month.

ANOTHER VESSEL SEIZED.

Hamburg, Jan. 3.—The Hamburger Correspondenz announces that the German bark, Hans Wagner, of Hamburg, was seized by the British at Delagoa Bay on Dec. 31, and that her owners have lodged a complaint with the British Foreign Office.

HARSHNESS FOR IRREGULARS.

Lorenzo Marques, Jan. 3.—Twenty-five British residents of northern Natal arrived here last night. They speak most unfavorably of the harsh treatment accorded by the Boers to the prisoners captured from the South African irregular forces. They are lodged in the felon's jail and placed on ordinary criminals' diet. Military prisoners from the regulars, however, are treated with every consideration. A considerable number of expelled British are expected to arrive from the Transvaal this week. Among the released prisoners is George Lynch, the correspondent of the Morning Herald, who was captured at Ladysmith. Major Daly and 41 men of the Medical corps, who were left at Dundee at the time of evacuation, are on the way from Pretoria to Delagoa Bay.

ANXIETY REGARDING LADYSMITH.

London, Jan. 3.—There is a deepening sense of anxiety regarding Ladysmith whence most disheartening reports of the the prevelance of sickness are received. General White reported a list of nearly twenty deaths yesterday from enteric fever and dysentery, and seventy-one serious cases in the hospital. Dr. Jameson has all the work he can do in that fever nest. It is evident that the garrison can not hold out long, and that General Buller will not allow many days to pass before striking a second blow.

Several transports with fresh battalions and batteries arrived at Durban yesterday, and within 48 hours General Buller ought to be in readiness for a supreme effort. The Boer line of defense is now described as sixteen miles in length, having been extended up and down the Tugela to prevent a turning movement. There are many despatches of minor interest from Gen. Buller's camp this morning but no details indicating the direction of the next attack. The scouting has evidently improved, for the Hussars, Thorneycroft's Horse and other patrols are described as having brushes with the enemy. The naval guns remain in constant practice, but the Boer guns are silent.

Murderer Fears Death.

Windsor, Jan. 3.—Levi Stewart, the condemned murderer at Sandwich jail, has at last commenced to realize the awful doom that awaits him on February 8th, and devotes most of his time to religious matters. All of the bravado which he exhibited after his arrest and all through the trial has deserted him, and as the time draws near his fear of death increases. Rev. Mr. Armstrong, of the Wellington avenue Methodist mission, is Stewart's spiritual adviser, and he visits the condemned man regularly. He takes great care in explaining the passages of Scripture which he reads to him, and Stewart listens very attentively. His face will brighten up when the minister comes to him and he is always depressed after his departure.

Mud Volcanoes Spout.

Sandiego, Cal., Jan. 3.—Reports received from interior points show that the recent earthquake was the cause of a number of strange happenings. The mud volcanoes on the desert near the Colorado river have become active after a long rest and are now spouting mud again. The natural gas wells near Yuma are also in working order since the heavy quake. They have been lighted and the glare at night can be seen for many miles.

A correspondent from Moosa writes that a number of fissures were made in the ground at that place twenty or more feet in length.

What Uncle Sam Means.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Representative McRae, of Arkansas, introduced to-day the following joint resolution:

"Be it resolved, etc., that the United States hereby declare that their purpose in acquiring jurisdiction and control of the Phillippine Islands was and is to secure to the inhabitants thereof as soon as practicable after the suppression of the existing rebellion therein, a free, independent; stable government, republican in form, and that the United States guarantee to said inhabitants protection against all foreign invasion.

Joe Martin Will Fight.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 3.—Joseph Martin, M. P. P., spoke for an hour and a half last night to his provincial supporters. He said that he intended to go to Victoria to do his utmost to defeat the Semlin Government, of which he was formerly a member. He claims that Mr. Semlin has obtained the Premiership by dishonest means and went into the whole question of political history at great length. He would fight from the start of the session with a view to another general election, and he offered to resign if he was not supported by the electors.

GENERAL LORD KITCHENER SPEAKS PLAINLY.

The Sirdar Said to Have Predicted a Long Struggle Before the Boers Are Completely Defeated.

Berlin, January 4.—The Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten publishes a sensational interview given by Lord Kitchener to Dr. Emil Naubert prior to his departure for South Africa.—

"You ask me," the Sirdar is reported to have said, "what will happen after my arrival at the Cape. Well, in the first place, it will be our task to concentrate the scattered forces as much as possible Above all, it will be necessary to relieve Methuen, for whom I entertain the utmost respect. His march close up to Kimberley was a performance which would have earned universal admiration had it only been crowned with success, but the general who fails invariably is a blunderer in the eyes of the world.

"Almost without exception our generals are capable, experienced officers, and not they, but the writers of the jingo press of Great Britain, are responsible for our defeats. These people, headed by certain Ministers, depicted the war in South Africa, as a military promenade, and they well nigh stoned brave Sir William Butler when he referred to the gravity of the situation and admonished them to moderate their foolish shouting. They brought our brave generals into confusion and drove to death our heroic officers and troops who were compelled to achieve forsuccesses for the sake of a clique of stock exchange speculators.

"Troops have been hurled at Africa without any but the barest preparations for harmonious co-operating and victualling.

"A TERRIBLE OPPONENT."

"It was supposed we had to deal with savages, whereas we are confronted by a terrible opponent having a perfect military organization, supervised by Prussians. It is ridiculous to imagine that the people of London could know nothing of the armament of the Transvaal. They simply neglected to read the reports sent from the Cape. It is the same spectacle which predicted the fall of Khartoum. Then as now there was a failure to appreciate the strength of the enemy, and a self-deception that lasted until Gordon had been killed and the black flag of the Prophet was floating over the ramparts at Khartoum.

"I am confident however, that it is not too late to mend matters in South Africa. When the concentration of troops has been affected my main task will consist, first, in accustoming the men to a reflective, cautious manner and fighting. In this way alone will we possibly achieve successes against a foe so mobile.

"The Transvaal must be crushed by encircling it with an iron band.

BRITAIN MUST HAVE PATIENCE.

"Military operations will progress slowly, very slowly. To the cries of the London press no attention will be paid; they will have to learn patience. Great Britain herself must have patience.

"I do not believe the republics will be subdued within a year. This is my view of the task awaiting me, and I cannot execute it in less time. It is true that the situation might undergo a change, and pressing political reasons may at a later period render it essential for us to inflict a rapid series of blows for the purpose of creating a basis of negotiations that had become necessary. As to this I can form no judgement. I am not a politician, but a soldier. I have to execute my orders, and, as a soldier, I can only say it is possible now for Great Britain to overcome the republics, and though her progress may be slow, and a year may be necessary for its completion, yet at the end of that time we should be in a position to dictate our own terms of peace.

"All my calculations, however, will be upset if I am subjected to interference in the execution of my plans.

"Natal is not adapted for the advance of large masses of troops, the hilly districts tending to the dispersion of forces and rarely permitting the delivery of ponderous blows."

At this point, concludes the interviewer, the General sprang up, saying, irratably—

"It is time, gentlemen; it is time; I must go. War is a thankless occupation, a most thankless one when one's task is to drag a cart out of the mire.

"The whole affair in South Africa has been bungled. If it had been properly begun we might have tranquilized South Africa with half the present expenditure of time, money and blood. Now we need 150,000 men, and a whole year."

CANADIANS RECEIVED WITH ENTHUSIASM.

They Entered Douglas Unopposed Amid Great Cheering and Scenes of Loyalty.

DUTCH REBELS HAD EVACUATED THE TOWN.

Quantities of Ammunition Were Captured and Destroyed—Inhabitants Overjoyed at Their Deliverance—Still More Rebels at Hand.

London, Jan. 3.—Undoubted tribute is paid to the prowess of the Canadians and Australians, and graphic accounts are published of the enthusiasm in Douglas as the victorious troops entered that place. The representative of the Associated Press with the flying column says—

"The immediate result of Colonel Pilcher's success is the entire dispersal of the rebels who have been governing the country for the past six weeks.

"After Sunnyside was captured the Torontos occupied the laager for the night and joined the main body the following morning, bringing the whole of the Boer tents, waggons and loot, and leaving the Cornwalls in garrison at Sunnyside. The British force then started for Douglas, the Torontos bringing up the rear in waggons. In the afternoon the troops entered the town unopposed and amid extraordinary scenes. The inhabitants were overjoyed and crowded about the soldiers, shaking hands with them, and when they learned that their deliverers were Canadians and Australians the enthusiasm became frenzied. There was loud cheering as the troops traversed the main street, and it was almost impossible for them to make progress, the crowds being so eager to shake hands with the colonials.

"It appears that the Landrost and all the mounted rebels evacuated the place on the previous night. The unmounted rebels are reported to be entrenched in the vicinity. Quantities of ammunition were captured and destroyed."

TREATED AS TRAITORS.

London, Jan. 3.—A despatch from Modder river intimates that the Sunnyside prisoners will not be treated as prisoners of war but as British subjects caught in open rebellion.

At the Modder River camp the conduct of the colonials is greatly admired and all are delighted that they have struck the first blow on the western frontier since the battle of Magersfontein. It is believed the relief of Kuruman will very quickly follow.

CHAMBERLAIN CONGRATULATES.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—The following cablegram was received by His Excellency the Governor-General this morning from Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies—

London, Jan. 3.—I congratulate you on gallant behavior of contingent in engagement at Sunnyside.

(Signed) CHAMBERLAIN.

AN AMERICAN PROTEST.

United States Objects to the Seizure of Vessels by British Cruisers

Washington, Jan. 3.—The State Department yesterdy received from U. S. Ambassador Choate at London by cable a statement of the facts he had developed in connection with the seizure by British warships of American goods on the three merchant vessels Beatrice, Mashona and Maria.

The goods comprised not only flour, but miscellaneous articles of common trade, and while they were shipped for Lorenzo Marquez in British and German ships, as soon as Mr. Choate's statement came to hand to-day an instruction was cabled to him to inform the British Government that the United States could not admit the right of seizure in these cases.

This is the preliminary step usually taken in such negotiations. Next in order will be a report from the United States Consular representative at Lorenzo Marques respecting the present condition of the seized or detained goods, and the damages sustained. The State Department is not yet fully informed on these points, though they will be necessary to the further presentation of the cases. It is not even known where the goods are, or if they have all been seized or only in part. The State Department has not the slightest doubt that the British authorities will make full amends to the owners of the goods when the facts are all laid before them.

France Claims $56,000.

Santo Domingo, Jan. 3—via Haytian cable—The French Consul here is pressing the Boismare-Caccavelli claim of $56,000, payment of which is overdue. He threatens to embargo the Government revenues. According to rumors the improvement company has failed to comply with its contract with the Government regarding the payment of the claim. As the local lawyers refused to attend to the matter the Supreme Court has named a lawyer to act for the French consul.

Teamsters Blown Up.

Calumet, Mich., Jan. 3.—Two team loads of powder, each carrying 4,375 pounds of the explosive, were blown up near Eagle river last night. Two teamsters, Alexander Harmstrom and Jos. St. Louis, and their teams are lost. No explanation has been given.

Danced a Jig at 110.

Prescott, Mich., Jan. 3.—Mrs. Helen Burrick, of Tyre, Sanilac County, celebrated her one hundreth and tenth birthday anniversary on New Year's day at the home of her great grand daughter, Mrs. John Stanley, when the centenarian danced a Highland fling.

A Bell Boy Wanted.

Detroit, Jan. 3.—The police have been notified that a bell boy in a Toronto hotel had skipped out with a package of one thousand dollars in bills, and the police of the Canadian city think he is on his way to Detroit. Detective Tuttle notified the local banks to look out for the boy.

Deroulede Found Guilty.

Paris, Jan. 3.—The High Court, rendered to-day its verdict on the conspiracy cases not previously disposed of. It was decided by a vote of 126 to 37 that M. Deroulede was guilty and by a vote of 200 to 1 extenuating circumstances were included in the decision.

Leyds Enjoys Himself.

The Hague, Jan. 3.—Dr. Leyds, the diplomatic agent of the Transvaal, attended the New Year's ball at the Palace yesterday evening. Queen Wilhelmina conversed several times with him. He was received by the Foreign Minister to-day.

Committed for Trial.

London, Ont., Jan. 3.—John Cavanagh appeared before the police magistrate yesterday charged with the murder of his mother, Mary Cavanagh, and was committed for trial at the spring assizes.

HOW THE TROOPS WILL SAIL.

Division of the Contingent Among the Three Chartered Transports.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—A military order issued to-day announces the provisional allotment of troops to the transports for conveyance to South Africa.

The Montezuma will carry the first battalion of the mounted rifles along with one field battery.

The Laurentian will carry the other two field batteries with the brigade division staff.

The Pomeranian will accommodate the second battalion of the Canadian mounted rifles.

It is added that the Montezuma and Laurentian will probably sail on the 18th instant and the Pomeranian on the 20th. The exact date will be given out later.

French Defeat Chinese.

Paris, Jan. 2.—News has been received here of a battle between a column of French marines and Chinese militia on November 16th. The day after the arrangement concluded by Admiral Courrejolles with respect to the boundary of Kwan-chewan, the French marched to Vonglick, the residence of one of the chief instigators of the assassination of two Frenchmen at Mantao. There they met 1,500 Chinese militia strongly entrenched and by a flank movement put them to flight. The French had 15 killed and wounded, and the Chinese left 200 dead on the field.

M. C. R. Well Blows Up.

St. Thomas, Jan. 3.—The Michigan Central Railway well at Fargo blew up at 7 o'clock last night, demolishing the pumping house and fatally injuring Pumper Hough. The explosion was caused by gas entering the well from the natural gas wells which were recently sunk in the neighborhood.

Pitch In at St. Thomas.

St. Thomas, Ont. Jan. 3.—A pitch in occurred in the Michigan Central yards at Windsor this morning. The westbound freight was run into by a train following. Three cars were ditched and demolished. No person was injured.

James Baxter in Court.

Montreal, Jan 3.—James Baxter, the private banker arrested in connection with the bank Ville Marie case appeared before the Police Magistrate this morning, pleaded not guilty and was remanded until to-morrow morning at eleven o'clock.

The specific charge against him is conspiring to assist a crimnal to evade justice. Other sensational arrests are hourly expected, and it is not unlikely that by the time the last chapter is written the history of the Ville Marie bank will be the most interesting in the annals of the banks of Canada.

Greenway Will Step Out

Winnipeg, Jan. 2.—Things are very critical here politically. The Lieutenant-Governor telegraphed for Mr. Greenway on Monday, and on Tuesday sent his son, Mr. Charles Patterson, out to Crystal City.

Mr. Greenway arrived in town yesterday afternoon, when a Cabinet meeting was held, and it is highly probable that to-morrow the resignation of the Ministry will be handed to his Excellency.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

As far as can be judged from the at present somewhat mixed-up figures and estimates, the British army in South Africa, regular and colonial, will by the middle of February total 180,000 men and trade more. It will be observable that the Boer strength has not been any more of a surprise to Britain than the British strength will be to foreign critics of all brands.

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 27, 1899

ENGLAND HAS LEARNED HER LESSONS.

The rugged stubbornness of England in adhering to the methods of the past has had a rude shock in the repeated disasters the best commanded and bravest of English troops have suffered in the Transvaal. The Boers have been fought just as Braddock attempted to fight the Indians at Fort Duquesne before the revolution.

England has learned her lesson, and the war will be stopped unless aggressive movements shall be made by the Boers, until an army of nearly or quite 150,000 men shall be ready to overrun the whole of South Africa and big enough to turn positions which cannot be assaulted. England has no choice now but to prosecute the war against the Boers until Boer authority is exterminated in South Africa. She must either efface Boer authority in that whole country, or sink to a second-class nation among the governments of the world.

It will require two months are more for the English to have an army in the Transvaal sufficiently large to make a successful aggressive movement, and in the meantime the English commanders, all of whom have been defeated in open assaults against the hidden enemy, will accept the methods of the Boers and remain in their entrenchments which the Boers will be quite too wise to disturb. The English commands are all now in reasonably safe positions, and there is no likelihood that the Boers will imitate English folly by attempting to assault where they must sacrifice five men or more for one.

England has learned her lesson, and it is marvelous that her generals have not learned it long ago. They have seen how the United States had to fight the Spanish and how they now have to fight the Filipinos, where if the ordinary rules of open warfare had been maintained they would simply have offered their men as sacrifice to Spanish and Filipino bullets. The Indian fighters are the men who understand how to fight the Spanish and the Filipinos, and what the English army needs is Indian fighters, or men who thoroughly understand the methods necessary to meet savage warfare.

England has had a sad experience, but when the English people come face to face with a grave peril that threatens the power of the English empire, she will speedily overwhelm the Boers and Free State warriors of South Africa, and make that whole region an English colony. There is no middle ground for England; she must either possess South Africa or confess defeat.

DELAGOA BAY.

A country without a seaport is at a great disadvantage in peaceful progress, but in the event of a war with a maritime province its isolated position is not without compensations. The natural outlet from the Transvaal to the sea is through Portuguese territory, and any provisions or munitions of war the Boers may import must come by Delagoa Bay. If Lorenzo Marques belonged to them, they could not get a scrap, for the English navy would blockade the port completely. As it is, they are probably getting a good deal, and it is difficult for the English to cut off their supplies without encroaching on the dignity of Portugal.

The war would be quickly settled if Lorenzo Marques were not a neutral port. If a British army could land there, the way to Pretoria would be short and easy, with no such obstacles to be overcome as are offered by the mountain ranges to the south. It is this strip of Portuguese territory that makes the Transvaal unapproachable by the only direct and open route and compels the difficult approach through Natal.

In English stories of Boer aggressions toward Delagoa Bay, the wish is father to the thought. If they only would violate Portuguese neutrality, with any appearance of Portuguese connivance, the fleet would settle the business in short order. As things are, the fleet is having a hard time to keep out contraband with due respect to neutral commerce. Thus the turning away of cargoes of American flour, consigned to Lorenzo Marques, but presumably intended for Pretoria, has raised questions that may prove perplexing. If the Transvaal extended to the west, there could be no question about it. In this respect the Boers are fortunate, for the time being, that their seaport is not their own.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

One of the latest is a brick trust. The opponents of the idea will hardly say there's nothing square about that.

Within a few weeks the Canadians and Australians fighting in South Africa for the British flag will number five thousand. Not bad.

Colonel Long, the man who lost the guns, doubtless realizes by this time that the range of the Boer rifles is very like his paternal name.

The Toronto Evening News says —"Something that is badly needed in Ontario is the inspection of barber-shops. Barbers are capable of transmitting skin disease of a most loathsome character and extremely difficult to cure. A barber-shop may be the centre of contagion from which many persons may be infected, and in view of the possibility of such a thing, it would seem to be the duty of the Provincial Health authorities to take such measures as will afford effective protection to all who have occasion to place themselves regularly under the barber's hands."

Those lyddite affairs are serious, but no shells are more dangerous for the British army than the barnacles in the War Office.

As far as can be judged from the at present somewhat mixed-up figures and estimates, the British army in South Africa, regular and colonial, will by the middle of February total 150,000 men and 150 guns. When the facts begin to protrude more, it will be observable that the Boer strength has not been any more of a surprise to Britain than the British strength will be to foreign critics of all brands.

A DRUGGIST'S FAITH.

What's Most Called for Must be the Best Remedy.

A druggist's testimony of the popularity of a remedy is the strongest kind of a proof that it will do what it promises. Paul Livingood, druggist, of Allentown, Pa., says: Dr. Agnew's remedies have sold away beyond my expectations. You can quote me for saying that Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder is the best seller for catarrh I have in the store. Many of my customers praise it highly." It is a great remedy and has a continental reputation. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

WILL LAST TWO YEARS.

British Will Pay an Enormous Price for the Present Boer War

If the predictions of Albert H. Holder, mining engineer, and who for many years was inspector of public works in the South African Republic, come true the British, if they conquer the twin Boer republics, will pay an enormous price in blood and treasure. He predicts that the war in the Transvaal will last at least two years, and before giving up Johannesburg the Boers will destroy mining property worth £600,000,000. Mr. Holder is an artillery officer, holding the rank of mayor in the German army, and he was an artillery instructor to the Boers two years ago. He states that the Boers had then 15 German officers, 40 French and 40 Russians, who were all well paid.

The Transvaalers, Mr. Holder says, have got the country thoroughly fortified. Pretoria itself is defended by five powerful forts, and there are five lines of mines and enormous intrenchments, and the ground all around and about the Transvaal capital is furrowed with mines of lyddite and other high explosives. The seige of Pretoria will be another Metz. That stronghold kept the German army, numbering 200,000 at bay for eight months. The seige of Pretoria will last much longer.

Johannesburg is not so well fortified, but the last thing the Boers will do before they are entirely vanquished will be to raze that city of the Uitlanders to the ground, to leave not a building standing. They will also blow up the mines and ruin the machinery to avenge themselves upon the capitalists, who, they claim, have provoked the war. This has for years been the pre-arranged plan, and steps were long ago taken to effectively carry it out whenever the time arrived to compel that course.

Wearers of the Victoria Cross.

The holders of the Victoria Cross, that proud decoration which every British soldier strives to gain on the battlefield, have been slowly dwindling in number for some years, but there will undoubtedly be many additions to the list on account of the Boer war. Seven years ago the number of those on whom this honor was conferred was 196, and just before the outbreak of hostilities in the Transvaal there were only 155. The Indian mutiny still accounts for the largest number of names on that roll of honor, no fewer than 42 recalling that year of heroic struggle. The Crimean war, which started the roll, now ranks second with South Africa, each claiming 25 names. Afghanistan contributes 11 names, and Egypt and Soudan together make up the same number. For the rest of the names one must follow the Union Jack to all parts of the globe.

Most Costly and Precious Wine.

The most costly and precious wine in the world is that contained in a cask named the Rose, in the Bremen Town Hall cellars. This Rudesheim, of the vintage of the year 1653, is of the color of old ale. It is never sold, but is used exclusively for the sick of Bremen, the only exceptions having been when a small bottle was presented to Emperor William I, another to Frederick III, and one to Prince Bismarck.

Heard on the Street.

"I never heard such a Boer sympathizer as Mr. C., of Ashburnham," said a man yesterday to the Times. "In what way?" our reporter enquired. "Why he actually intends to bycott England. He began by trading his eight blade knife for a made-in-Germany two-blade affair. Next thing he will increase his interest on cash discounts from 70 per cent. to 100 per cent."

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

THE Canada Business College

CHATHAM, ONT.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institution has prepared over seventy teachers for other Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ont.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST! You must decide.

236 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of our students still continues.

SOME YANKEE BOSH.

Yale Historian Declares the Empire Faces the Gravest Peril.

New Haven, Conn., Jan 3.—Professor Arthur M. Wheeler, an authority on European history and head of the history department of Yale, to-day said—"I cannot but look upon the present trouble of the English in South Africa as brought upon themselves and merited. They bungled other wars, such as the American revolution, when they had no need to. This Boer matter has never been handled with diplomacy. Had it been left to Salisbury it would have been averted.

"The Boers have as much right to independence now as we had in 1776, but it will be a fight for England now to get what she might have had by peaceful means. The South African problem means the ultimate overthrow of British rule in Africa and the assertion of independence by the native states. If England loses much in Africa it means trouble elsewhere for her.

"England is in a position of great peril just now as regards her colonial possessions. If all the blacks should rise it would mean a terrible ending of the British dream of 'civilizing South Africa.'"

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boles's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Elison's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover;
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich Birmingham took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.

The Committee on Appointments reported through Mr. W. H. Hill, chairman pro tem, as follows —

To the Chairman and members of the Board of Education,

Gentlemen,—

The Committee on Appointments met on the 19th December and considered the various matters submitted to them.

(1) In the case of the janitor of the George Street School the Committee recommend that his salary be increased $20 a year, dating from January 1st, 1900.

(2) The report of the Public School Inspector was submitted to the committee showing that the most perfect harmony prevailed in the different schools, and that the work done by the teachers is entirely satisfactory.

(3) The question of corporal punishment especially in the Collegiate Institute has several times been brought before the attention of the Board. Your committee while recognizing the fact that in most cases the complaints are of less importance than they at first appear, in order to avoid further trouble, recommend that the whole question of punishment be settled by a conference between the Chairman of the Board and the principal of the Collegiate Institute.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. H. HILL,
Chairman, pro tem.

On motion the report was adopted.

TEACHER APPOINTED.

On motion of Mr. McBain, seconded by Mr. Eastwood, Miss N. Hall was appointed to the position of first assistant in the Kindergarten of the Central School.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

Heard on the Street.

"I never heard such a Boer sympathizer as Mr. C., of Ashburnham," said a man yesterday to the Times. "In what way?" our reporter enquired. "Why he actually intends to bycott England. He began by trading his eight blade knife for a made-in-Germany two-blade affair. Next thing he will increase his interest on cash discounts from 70 per cent. to 100 per cent."

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing as rare as charity, easily impaired or often lost — envy of all and the grandest jewel in the [illegible] of life is vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of his bread [illegible] the pain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the faltering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. SEAPORT FOR THE BOERS

Germans Declare the New Frontier Must Reach the Ocean,

EXPULSION UNNECESSARY.

Dutch Allies Deemed Superior to England's Soldiers.

Many Subjects of William Enlist in the Army of Queen Victoria.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—The German press continues to comment upon the war in South Africa. The Militair Wochenblatt, the military organ, contains a severe critism by a high officer, in which the writer claims that hitherto Boers, both leaders and men, have proved far more efficient in every way than the British. The National Zeitung publishes a similarly severe article. The Kreuz Zeitung says editorially—

"The best solution for Germany would be a peace guaranteeing the Boers their independence and securing the future—that is, creating a state whose frontier touches the sea, in order to enable it to adapt itself to the new times upon which Africa is entering.

"That must be the policy of the Boers. We do not desire the British to be expelled wholly from Africa, but we do not see the necessity for making the entire African continent British. The ideas of Cecil Rhodes will split upon the rock of Boer courage."

Many Germans Aid the British.

Proofs accumulate that not all the Germans sympathize with the Boers. Gottfried Hagen, in Kalk, a suburb of Deutz, Prussia, has accepted an order from England for the immediate manufacture of forty tons of lead bullets. At the English embassy large numbers of Germans apply daily for enlistment in the British army. The applicants, when desirable, are told that they may go to London, where they are sure of enlistment.

The British embassy in Berlin authorizes a denial of the report that the duke of York and the duke of Connaught will attend the chapter of the Order of the Black Eagle next month and be created knights. There is also no foundation for the story that Emperor William will attend the century celebration of the Berlin high school of techology and there be created first doctor of engineering. This is denied by the minister of education and by the rector of the high school.

The new school of technology will be abolished in Jena for the Thuringian schools.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the hentedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $25 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

It is plain from the lawsuits that he is bringing that Mr. Kipling has a due appreciation of the white man's boodle.—Pittsburg Times.

It was right and proper for Mary Anderson Navarro to come back to America on the Majestic. She is that kind of a woman.—Kansas City Star.

It is reported that Grover Cleveland has purchased a plover field. This will furnish amateur poets with another base of attack on Mr. Cleveland's first name.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No tr[illegible] of any kind should be left on the bot[illegible]

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return as much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather grewsome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourners.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up [illegible] Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Fine Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the [illegible] government official, "I was a husky young fellow, cheeky and easy about my [illegible] ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in a gymnasium for about [illegible] and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a sporting lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Steevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that [illegible]"

A strictly temperance medicine; there is no alcohol, morphine or other narcotic in it.

SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. 'This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tarateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tarateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing.

Sham Rock

Is a name given by some to our granolithic pavements. Some shoes have sham soles, which when wet are taken off very easily by the sham rock, and thus the sham sole is lost. To avoid the latter buy your shoes from Kidd—the price is no more, but less, and trading stamps given as well.

Douro Elections.

The following is the result of the Municipal elections in Douro township.

Dennis Maloney	219
James Condon	197
John Quinn	192
Thomas E. Jory	146
Mark Edwards	89

Mr. James McCliggot was re-elected Reeve by acclamation. The first four of the above are members of the Council for 1900.

Man Wanted.

A good live man wanted to take the contract of delivering the Daily Morning Times in Peterborough and Ashburnham by the year. Man having two or more boys of his own preferred. The work will take from one to two hours every morning. For the above work we will pay $300 per year. Apply at Times Bookstore.

Back to Atlin.

Mr. James Regan, who has been visiting his mother here, leaves for his home in Seattle, Wash., this morning. Mr. Regan has spent two years in Atlin mining district, where he conducted a general store. He sold out his business last fall, but proposes to go back again, purchasing six tons of groceries in Vancouver, together with a yoke of oxen which he will take into the country with him.

Wedding Stationery.

We have just received direct from New York a large stock of Crane's wedding stationery. Invitations printed to order in the latest styles. Also, wedding cake boxes of latest designs. The Times job rooms make a specialty of printing at home cards—the very best and nobbiest patterns.

Ourselves.

Without vainglory, we especially desire to call the attention of the readers of the Times to the special telegraph service which is now a leading feature of this great family journal. More than one full page of space is occupied with bright and crisp telegrams of the newsiest character, mostly from the seat of war. Now is the time to subscribe for the Times, Peterborough's brightest daily newspaper.

LADY FORESTERS.

Companion Court of the I. O. F. Formed in Town.

There was organised at the last meeting of Court Chemong, an I.O.F. companion court with 21 ladies as charter members. Much enthusiasm was shown by the members of Court Chemong when the ladies were ushered into the hall and installed into the respective offices by Deputy Miss Lydia Hill, assisted by Bro. Hetherington, D.H.C.R. The following officers were chosen:—

Dr. Jessie Birnie	Physician
Mrs. Geo. Swain	C.C.
Mrs. A. Dunsford	P.C.C.
Mrs. H. Smith	V.C.C.
Miss M. Bullen	Rec.-Sec.
Miss E. Noble	Fin.-Sec.
Mrs. A. P. Melrose	Treas.
Mrs. J. Wright	Orator
Miss M. Bullen	Organist
Mrs. G. Reid	S.W.
Miss J. Chatten	J.W.
Mrs. J. Chatten	S.B.
Mrs. M. Wainwright	J.B.

The success of the gathering was largely due to the untiring efforts of the organiser, Miss Lydia Hill, who has shown herself to be a worthy descendant of the renowned Captain Joseph Brant of early Canadian history. This court will not only give a mortuary and disability benefit, but will also endeavor to practice the triple virtues of liberty, benevolence and concord.

All Honor to the Officers

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It was a very creditable act on the part of the officers of the 57th Battalion to present each of the departing members of the 57th Battalion with a purse of $25.00.

Where was our Mayor? Why did he not show up at the drill shed, and supplement the gift with at least $25 additional? Surely the town could afford the paltry sum of $75, or even double this sum, in such a cause?

Col. Bell, in his brief address, said that the civic authorities had been approached in the matter, but without success. It is not yet too late to do something, as Major Greenwood will be back before the contingent takes its final departure.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am &c.,

LOYALTY.

Purchasing the Water Works.

The town of Lindsay has given fresh evidence of its progressiveness of its inhabitants. On Monday a by-law was submitted to the ratepayers in connection with the purchase of the water works by the town, and it was carried by a good majority. The town also voted a bonus for a railway connecting with the C.P.R., another excellent move. Our Lindsay friends are determined to make their town a city, and are certainly going the proper way about it. Peterborough prefers taking the other course. She is spending vast sums of money, but on works that will bring her no prosperity. We should own our water works system as well as our electric light. Not only this but we should endeavor to get a road north to Apsley before Lindsay cuts us off entirely from the back country.

Why Not in Peterborough?

We understand that Hon. Mr. Stratton has in view the establishment of a separate Provincial asylum for the treatment of epileptics and mild forms of lunacy. The Times would suggest that Peterborough be selected as a suitable place for the asylum. Cobourg is after it, and it behooves Peterborough to get a move on. We are splendidly situated, geographically, and it is time some of the good things came our way. That Mr. Stratton will do all in his power for Peterborough goes without saying.

Financial Report Left Over.

The annual statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Board of Education as well as the estimates of the present year, presented at the meeting on Tuesday night, are held over from to-day's issue and will be published to-morrow.

Indian River.

We have had a very cold snap this last week, but sleighing is fine. Farmers are busy drawing grain to the elevators.

We are glad to hear that our friend Mr. J. H. Brown, is elected to the Otonabee Council by a very large majority.

Miss Annie Duff is home to spend her holidays.

Mr. Wm. Collins, of Douro, is home from Nebraska, to spend a few weeks with his friends.

Mr. Thos. Calvert and his bride have returned from their wedding trip.

Mr. Thos. Nelson is visiting friends in Hastings this week.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Stanley Piano Company took place yesterday when reports of the year's operations were submitted. The business done has been most satisfactory, and the outlook for the future could not be better. This popular institution is bound to become, at an early date one of our leading industries.

The Fire Brigade.

The annual meeting of the Fire Brigade was held last evening at the room Simcoe street. The following officers were elected:—Captain—J. D. Craig; 1st Lieut.—J. Haggart; 2nd Lieut.— W. R. Turner; Secretary—Jos. H. Yelland; Treasurer—C. Rutherford.

A woman pushed a baby carriage containing a crying baby into the Times Bookstore yesterday afternoon. One of the sharp reporters on this g. f. j. quietly remarked to our house editor that the carriage was evidently bawl bearing.

An enterprising young man came into town on Saturday driving a cow. He was all covered with mud and wore his working clothes. After disposing of the cow he donned a new suit and went to the residence of one of our ministers with his best girl, and they were joined in wedlock. When asked if he were going for a trip he said he was going home to dig post holes.

There is a man in our town
  Who thinks he's wonderous wise;
And when there is an argument
  He is willing to advise.
But when there's labor to be done
  This man with smile so bland,
Looks wiser yet and shakes his head,
  But he never lends a hand.

How are your good resolutions holding out?

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The selections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

PERSONALS.

Mr. Frank Stanley, Vice-President of the Stanley Piano Company, accompanied by Mrs. Stanley, returned to Toronto after spending New Year's with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stanley, Hunter street.

Dr. McNulty, an honor graduate of Toronto University, will take up his residence in Peterborough in a few days.

Dr. King has returned from Clifton Springs improved in health, although not entirely recovered. The Times, in concert with the entir ecommunity, hopes that his health will continue to improve.

Mr. Lewis Turnbull, son of Mr. J. C. Turnbull, returned to Nyack Missionary Training Institute, New York, to finish his final term of his three years' course, after spending a vacation at home. Mr. Walter Turnbull, his brother, left with him for New York for the Nyack Institute, and will return to town next May. Mr. Will Turnbull is home from the Northwest for the winter, taking his brother's place in the store during his absence. While away last summer he purchased a homestead near the hom eof his uncle, Mr. Wm. Turnbull, near Hartney.

Burglary in Ennismore.

A burglary was comitted at Ennismore on Sunday night last, New Year's eve. The premises of Mr. D. J. Scollard, postmaster, who also keeps a store in connection, were entered and a quantity of candies stolen and others were thrown about the place. Mr. Scollard states that as yet he does not know his exact loss. The thieves gained entrance by cutting out a pane of glass and then evidently used a lever to pry up the bar by which the door was fastened. The matter was not discovered until the morning, when Mr. Scollard found the door open, and there was no trace of the thieves. It is suspected that the act was committed by local parties and an effort is being made to discover them and bring them to justice. The crime is a serious one.

DOCTOR'S PROPHECY.

About Grape Nuts.

Dr. J. H. Hanaford, one of the oldest physicians in Reading, Mass., says in the Practical Age—"I firmly believe that Mr. Post has rendered a greater service to humanity than any other man living in the matter of food.

He claims, with propriety, I think, that his new food, Grape-Nuts, made from the most nourishing elements of the grains, contains nourishment in one pound equal to ten of meat, wheat, oat or bread. From the acquaintance that I have had with thus unusually nutritious article, I am satisfied the statement is truthful and demonstrative. I am inclined to believe the food will effect considerable of a revolution in society, to the extent that it is introduced.

This was written by Dr. Hanaford several months ago. The rapid spread of the use of Grape-Nuts all over the country has demonstrated that the doctor's prophecy has already come true, to an extent, at least. Perhaps never before in the history of food manufacture has such rapid progress been made as with Grape-Nuts. It especially appeals to brain workers.

All first-class grocers furnish Grape-Nuts, and the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., are the makers.

Heroes on the Start.

The Times received the following, written on a post card: "If the boys are heroes before they reach the station here, what will they be at Pretoria?" Why that is easy. Any bloke can walk up to the front of a cannon, but it takes a brave man to tear himself away from home and friends, as the members of the contingent are doing.

A Serious Accident.

Mr. John Gillis, an employee of the armature department of the Canadian General Electric works, met with an accident which came dangerously near to terminating his career. While engaged at his work he received an electric shock, 2,000 volts passing through him. He was unconscious for two hours. His arms were badly burned and he is likely to lose the right hand and perhaps part of the other. Dr. Young attended his injuries.

WELLAND CANAL

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Sealed tenders, addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Improvement at Port Colborne," will be received at this office until 16 o'clock on Friday, the 26th day of January, 1900, for the works of improvement at the upper entrance to the Welland Canal.

Plans and specifications of the works can be seen on and after the 26th day of December, 1899, at the office of the Chief Engineer of the Department of Railways and Canals, Ottawa, and at the Superintending Engineer's office at St. Catharines. Printed forms of tender can also be obtained at the places mentioned. In the case of firms there must be attached to the tender the actual signatures of the full name, the nature of the occupation and residence of each member of same, and further an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $10,000 must accompany the tender. The accepted bank cheque will be endorsed over to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and will be forfeited if the party tendering declines entering into contract for the work at the rates and on the terms stated in the offer submitted.

The accepted bank cheque thus sent in will be returned to the respective parties whose tenders are not accepted.

The department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

Contractors are specially notified that the conditions requiring the works to be wholly completed by the 30th day of June, 1902, will be rigidly enforced and all penalties for delay enacted.

By order,
L. K. JONES,
Secretary Dep't Railways and Canals,

An army order has been issued directing the embodyment of sixteen additional battalions of militia.

DORDRECHT EVACUATED.

London, Jan. 4.—The War Office has received a report from Cape Town, dated Wednesday, Jan. 3, reporting the situation in General Gatacre's district. It says—"Dordrecht is now evacuated by Montmorency, who occupies Bird's Siding on the Idwe line.

"Molteno is being attacked to-day by the enemy, who move or less surrounded the police station, but who, according to reports, are being forced back. Reinforcements of mounted infantry and field artillery have been sent by General Gatacre. The result is not known.

"A company of mounted infantry, under Alderson, has reconnoitered to Prieska and exchanged shots with the rebel force on the north bank.

"No movement of Generals Methuen or French is reported."

A DASH FROM LADYSMITH.

Hoofd Laager, Ladysmith, Tuesday, Tuesday, Jan. 2.—Six horsemen made a dash from Ladysmith a few nights ago, and, though pursued, they escaped. It is believed the party included Colonel Rhodes, brother of Cecil Rhodes, and Dr. Jameson.

BOERS DRIVEN FROM CYPHERGAT.

Sterkstroom, Jan. 3.—General Gatacre to-day met the invading forces at Cyphergat, near the British advance camp at Bushman's Hoek. The Boers retired hurriedly after the British artillery opened fire. The enemy occupied Molteno and Cyphergat to-day, but the latter place is now re-occupied by the British.

SIX HORSEMEN MISSING.

Frere Camp, Jan. 3.—Captain Thorneycroft's patrol found the enemy in some force at the Little Tugela bridge. Their presence was discovered by scouts. It is reported that five men and a lieutenant of the party have not returned.

BOERS SHIFT THEIR POSITION.

Frere Camp, Jan. 4.—A vigorous shelling of the Boer trenches on the plain this morning forced the burghers to shift their position after their horses had stampeded.

GATACRE DRIVES BOERS BACK.

London, Jan. 4.—Further details of the fighting between General Gatacre and the Boers at Cyphergat to-day show that 2,000 Boers with artillery attacked a British outpost between Cyphergat and Molteno. General Gatacre with mounted troops and field artillery moved out in front of Sterkstroom and found the Boers strongly posted at Coperberg, whence they were quickly dislodged. The Boers fled in the direction of Stormberg. The Boers used the British guns captured on Dec. 10 and shot well, but the British kept under cover and there were no casualties on their side.

FRENCH FIGHTS INCESSANTLY.

London, Jan. 4.—There is great satisfaction here at the news that De Aar has been able to send Gen. French reinforcements of guns and infantry, of which he appears to be so much in need.

The fighting in the hills is incessant. The latest telegrams say General French has almost surrounded Colesberg, but that the Boers are stiffly defending their positions close to the town, preventing the British from capturing it.

A despatch from Rensberg this morning says the heavy artillery duel commenced at daybreak.

FRENCH HAS BEEN REINFORCED.

Naauwpoort, Jan. 3.—Major-General French was reinforced by infantry to-day and it is expected that he will soon occupy Colesberg. He still holds the hill commanding the Colesberg bridge and road and continued to shell the enemy's strong position at Colesberg all Monday afternoon until sunset. To-day there has been little firing on either side. Casualties are slight.

TRIED TO RUSH KLOKFONTEIN.

Orange River, Cape Colony, Jan. 3.—There was a small skirmish near Belmont this morning. The British fired a few shells and the Boers did not respond.

A detachment of about forty Boers attempted to rush Klokfontein this morning but was beaten back by the mounted infantry.

Possibly this force consisted of fugitives from Sunnyside,

Reinforcements of infantry and artillery have been despatched to Gen. French from De Aar.

LARGE ORDER FOR GUNS.

London, Jan. 4.—The War Office has authorized the equipment of the new battery attached to the London volunteer corps with Vickers and Maxims and has ordered one hundred of these 12 1-2 pounder quick-firers built immediately. The officers and men of the new battery will be supplied from the Honorable Artillery Company.

Eight additional militia regiments have been called out. Seven of these will serve in Ireland, replacing the regulars sent to South Africa.

All parts of England and Scotland report lively volunteering, a leading feature being the great sums raised by private subscriptions for volunteer equipment. Some of the counties have given as high as £30,000. It is computed that the provinces have already raised nearly £800,000, while London is raising £120,000 for the city corps.

SEIZED A GERMAN STEAMER.

Berlin, Jan. 4.—The Imperial mail steamer General has been detained at Aden and occupied by British troops, with the object of searching her cargo which is to be discharged. The General is owned by the German East African line, the owners of the Bundesrath, previously captured by the British cruiser Magicienne off Delagoa Bay.

COMPELLED TO DISCHARGE.

Hamburg, Jan. 4.—Although the manifests of the German steamer General seized at Aden, show their was no war material on board, she was compelled to discharge her cargo.

New York, Jan. 4.—The steamship Sabine, according to The Times, will leave this port to-day bound for Delagoa Bay, with a miscellaneous cargo, and it is believed that she has on board an immense quantity of provisions, arms and ammunition, army blankets and general supplies for the British army in South Africa.

JOUBERT PREACHES IN CAMP.

Hoofd Laager, Ladysmith, Jan. 1.—The garrison of Ladysmith during the night threw out feelers on all sides, exchanging shots with the Boer pickets. At midnight a couple of shells fell into the Boer camp and killed a burgher.

General Joubert preached in camp on Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Meiring, who has just arrived here from America, addressed the burghers this afternoon, dwelling on the expiring century witnessing the life struggle of a people.

This morning shells filled with confectionery and containing the season's greetings were sent into Ladysmith.

Federal shells are selling in Ladysmith at from thirty shillings to five pounds sterling.

It will be remembered that Rev. Mr. Meiring referred to above passed through Toronto some months ago and spoke strongly on behalf of the Boers

MANY BOERS WOUNDED.

New York, Jan. 4.—A Kimberley despatch to the Herald, dated Dec. 29, says that pains are being taken by the Boers to conceal their losses in the recent battles; that Boshof is full of wounded men, and that at Jacobsdal there are at least two hundred and fifty. There is a field hospital containing another hundred attached to the camp at Oldfantsam.

Banished for Ten Years.

Paris, Jan. 4.—The High Court, Senate, in secret session to-day, condemned M. Andre Buffet and Paul Deroulede to ten years banishment.

The prisoners were accused of conspiring to overthrow the republic. M. Buffet is the official representative of the Duke of Orleans, the pretender to the throne and Deroulede is a journalistic agitator. The trial of the conspirators proved the republic to be much stronger than had been thought

The Favor Now Returned.

New York, Jan. 4.—The open door principle was the foundation of British policy in China during the protracted negotiations which followed German and Russian acquisition of harbors and territories on the Chinese coast, says the London correspondent of the Tribune. Nothing came of it, and the British Government ended by taking possession of a harbor opposite Port Arthur.

What England was unable to bring about at the time the United States has virtually done, and the British press is slowly awakening to a sense of England's obligations to America. Certainly, if the Americans were under obligations to England for friendly services during the war with Spain the favor has been returned and in a characteristically American way.

Restored to Liberty.

Madrid, Jan. 4.—The Spanish Consul at Manila telegraphs to the Foreign Office that the steamer Uranus, from Panay, has arrived there, having on board the Bishop of Vegea, 117 priests five officers and 115 civilians who had been restored to liberty. The consul adds that Aguinaldo has promulgated a decree ordering the liberation of all Spanish prisoners without distinction. The consul distrusts Aguinaldo's motives on account of the attitude of the Filipino chiefs, who he believes place difficulties in the way of the liberation of the prisoners.

Queen's Yacht Righted.

London, Jan. 4.—The new royal yacht Victoria and Albert, which listed thirty degrees to port when an attempt was made to unlock her at Pembroke yesterday, her starboard bilge keel becoming jammed and the strain on the vessel being so great that her position was considered critical, was successfully docked this morning after being partially righted with ballast. Her designer, Sir William White, director of naval construction is present.

The Paris Fills Again.

London, Jan. 4.—When water was let into the dry dock at Milford Haven to-day the American line steamer Paris, which is to be taken to Belfast for a thorough overhauling after running ashore near the Manacles May 21 last and being refloated, began to fill, owing to an undiscovered leakage

Fire at Hespeler.

Hespeler, Ont., Jan. 4.—William Zimmerman, a farmer in the outskirts of the town, went up into the loft of his barn with a lighted lantern, which he hung up. The lantern in some manner became loosened and fell through the trap door into the basement, igniting the straw below. The building was totally destroyed, with a quantity of hay and feed. The loss is partially covered by insurance in the Perth Mutual.

Incidentally it may be said the reason why many cannot carry out their New Year resolutions is because they take too big a load.

GATACRE DROVE BOERS BACK TO STORMBERG.

Cape Mounted Police and Irish Rifles Held Them Until the Artillery Arrived.

STERKSTROOM, Cape Colony, Jan. 3, 9.30 p.m.—General Gatacre drove back the Boers who attacked the British position at Molteno, with considerable loss. There were no British casualties.

A large force of Boers advanced on Molteno early in the day and occupied the town. They made a vigorous attack on the camp of the Cape mounted police, the advance guard of General Gatacre's army. Another large body of Boers took a position commanding the camp of the Irish Rifles.

General Gatacre was at once notified of the attack and quickly sent reinforcements, accompanied by a detachment of Royal Horse Artillery. The Police and Rifles succeeded in holding the Boers in check until the arrival of reinforcements, and as soon as the guns were in position, they opened a hot fire on the Boers, who retired to their laager at Stormberg.

A CRUSADE AGAINST THE BRITISH CABINET.

London Mail Declares That the Removal of Lord Wolseley Will Not Suffice.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The London Morning Post's expert, after complimenting the colonial troops on Col. Pilcher's operations, says the news of General Buller's second attack on Colenso may be expected at any moment.

The Mail's expert remarks: We do not think that the mere substitution of a younger and more capable man than Lord Wolseley will satisfy the country. A glance at Whitaker's almanac will reveal the fact that in point of age the members of Cabinet equal in antiquity some of the records of longevity. Moreover, the names of several of them are hardly known to the public at large at all, and at least one has ruled himself out by dangering the lives of our soldiers through lack of provisions and of proper funds at the beginning of the war.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS HAVE LEFT DOUGLAS.

They Return to Belmont, Bringing Away All the Loyal Residents.

ARE CONGRATULATED BY GENERAL BULLER.

Colonel Pilcher Was Only on a Raiding Expedition, and It Was Considered Inadvisable to Keep Possession of the Town.

Belmont, Cape Colony, Wednesday, Jan 3.—Colonel Pilcher, it is officially announced, being only on a raiding expedition, and for military reasons being unable to occupy Douglas permanently, has evacuated the town, bringing off all the loyalists. He has now returned safely to close proximity to Belmont. When he announced the necessity of evacuating the place the inhabitants of Douglas declared their lives were not worth five minutes' purchase after the troops left. Colonel Pilcher therefore invited them to accompany him to Belmont. The preparations were speedily completed, but the vehicles of the town were totally inadequate to convey the refugees, so the troops gave up the transport wagons to the women and children. The Toronto company acted as an estcourt of the refugees, carried babies for the women, and kept everybody lively by singing as they marched pluckily along in spite of sore feet occasioned by the heavy sand. The force received General Buller's congratulations on the success of the expedition with great satisfaction.

HUTTON PRAISES THE TROOPS.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—General Hutton was highly pleased with the news of the success of the Canadian company which took part under Colonel Pilcher in the action at Sunnyside. Seated in his office with a war map plentifully besprinkled with British and Boer flags hanging on the wall beside him, the general said that the Canadians had acted only as he had expected. "The cable says," General Hutton continued, "that the force was mounted, but what was probably meant was that the Queenslanders, the Toronto company and the 200 Cornwall Light Infantry were carried from Belmont to the scent of the action. When I said good-bye to the regiment at Quebec I told them that they had a lot to learn in the way of discipline and drill, and they have evidently read their lesson well. Not a word can be said against the Canadians as men, but the best of them need good officers. Capt. Barker, of the Toronto company, is one of the most reliable company commanders we have. I believe that the other companies, when the time comes, will do as well. They may not come out unscathed, but they must have known when they heard the news of their arrival at Cape Town that they were goint into a serious business."

THE ENGLISH PRESS.

London, Jan. 4.—The success of the colonials at Sunnyside elicits general warm congratulations. The Times says—"The mother country will share with the Canadians and Australians the pride and gratification they must feel at the fine quality displayed by their troops in this dashing little engagement. The conduct of both contingents appears to have been most soldierly. It is an earnest, we doubt not, of what the behavior of all our colonial forces will be in many a hard fought field under the old flag."

The London Daily News says—"The colonials did not go into this was as on a picnic or parade. They went prepared and hoping to fight, and, if need be, to die side by side with other soldiers of the Queen. Their only complaint hitherto has been that they have not had to bear the brunt of the battle. In this affair, however, the honors of the day were all with the colonial troops, and the empire has to thank them for a smart piece of work well carried out."

MARLBOROUGH A REAL SNOB.

New York, Jan. 4.—London cables describes the outfit which the Duke of Marlborough has prepared to take with him to South Africa, provided his services should be accepted—a contingency now in doubt.

Should he go he would take four horses, four splendid Spanish mules and a specially built Cape cart for going over the rough roads and the veldt. Besides an elaborate kit has been gotten together, every device for comfort in a compact space being utilized.

He will also take four servants, one being specially detailed to look after the baggage.

These exceptional arrangements are much discussed in society. It is a question whether the War Office would allow the Duke to transport all his belongings.

THE QUEEN IS APPRECIATIVE.

London, Jan. 4.—At the enrolling of the London volunteers at the Guild Hal this morning, the Lord Mayor, Mr. A. J. Newton, read an extract from a letter written by the Queen's private secretary, Sir Arthur Bigg, saying—"I have to assure you how much the Queen values the corps which has been so patriotically raised by the city of London for service in South Africa."

The enrollment of the second contingent of London Imperial volunteers was the occasion for a scene of popular interest and enthusiasm. The approaches to the Guild Hall were thronged with representatives of all classes, everybody cheering and the bands playing popular music. The scene at the Guild Hall was highly picturesque and impressive. It opened with a civic procession of the Lord Mayor, sheriffs and aldermen in their robes of office, headed by the sword and mace-bearers. The scarlet, grey and the green uniforms of the various battalions filled the chamber with varigated colors. The contingents comprised the honorable artillery company and detachments from the other volunteer regiments. After a speech from the Lord Mayor, at the conclusion of which he read the Queen's message, each detachment was sworn in separately, every man "kissing the Book" and receiving the Queen's shilling from the hands of the Lord Mayor.

ATTACK BY THE TIMES.

London, Jan. 4.—The Times in its leading editorial to-day refers at some length to the fact that the fullest details of the successes of Majo-General French and Colonel Pilcher have been cabled home, but only the merest mention made of the greater events of the campaign. Such a course, the Times complains, is not inconsistent with the dignity of the empire. The excuse offered by the military people that the Boers should be kept in ignorance of the British situation is belied by the fact that the Boers seem always to know rather more about the inside of British facts than the British generals do. Another cause for complaint is found in the action of the authorities of Modder River, who have shown another characteristic example of want of good sense and good feeling by refusing to allow the soldiers at the front to send their letters home without a stamp, except under the penalty of compelling their poor relatives to pay double postage.

A TORONTO HOTEL TRAGEDY.

A Chicago Man Commits Suicide by Shooting Himself.

Toronto, Jan. 4.—A very peculiar tragedy came to light this morning at the Rossin House. Shortly before dinner on Tuesday last a gentleman of very pronounced Jewish features, and named A. Finsberg, arrived at that hotel, registered as from Chicago, and was assigned to room 143. That was the last seen of him until this morning, when he was found dead on the floor of his bedroom alongside a sofa, a 32-calibre revolver lying beside him, a pool of blood surrounding his head and bullet wounds in his mouth and neck. He had apparently been dead for thirty-six hours or more, and it is believed that he took his life sometime on Tuesday afternoon or evening. No one heard the shot.

Yesterday a chambermaid endeavored to enter the room to tidy it up, but as it was fastened on the inside she failed. This morning, no sign of life having been noticed in the interval, an investigation was made, and through the key hole the feet of Finsberg could be seen on the floor. A boy was hoisted over the transom and the door opened. There lay the victim, dressed in a suit of new underclothing purchased on Yonge street.

He had apparently stood before the looking-glass as he shot himself. The revolver had five chambers. Two cartridges had been exploded, two bore marks of the hammer and had evidently missed fire and the fifth was intact.

His wordly possessions seem to be few and unimportant. He had $2.25 in cash, no clothes but those he wore, and a brass watch.

From papers in his pockets he appears to be a member of a Chicago hat firm, doing business in Canada as a traveller. He had also a letter written in Hebrew.

The police were notified, Detective Cuddy inspected the situation, and the remains were taken to the city morgue. Corner Johnston will hold an inquest.

The deceased was apparently about 30 years of age, smooth shaven, of medium height, with black curley hair.

It turns out that the name of the suicide is Abraham Finsberg and that he is a manufacturer of hats at Chicago.

DEATH WAS BLISS.

"Earth Recedes and Heaven Opened Before Me," Said Moody.

New York, Jan. 4.—Dwight L. Moody's last words, according to a Boston despatch, were—

"Earth recedes and heaven opens before me. If this is death there is nothing awful here. It is sweet. This is bliss. Do not call me back. God is calling me. I must go. There is no valley here. It is all beautiful."

These words were taken down by a stenographer, Ben. Wright, of Boston, who had them directly after the death from Mr. Moody's son.

Sultan is Terrified.

Constantinople, Jan. 2.—The Sultan is terrified at the increasing Mahommedan discontent and has decided to convoke a special Grand Council to devise measures to render his regime less unpopular.

A Serious Charge.

Jeremiah Fitzgerald, a farmer of Otonabee, was arrested last night by police constable Adams, charged with defrauding his creditors. Efforts were made by Mr. Dave Conroy to secure bail, but magistrate Dumble refused to grant it. The case will be called this morning.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Mr. Kendry and General French seemed to have started the new year successfully.

• • • • •

The seige train, which has just been embarked for South Africa, will play an important part in the capture of Pretoria. The train is manned by 1,500 officers and men of the artillery, and its armament and ammunition weigh over 5,000 tons. There are fourteen 6-inch, eight 5-inch, eight 4-inch and eight 4.7-inch quick firing guns, with gun carriages and mountain appliances complete, and 100,000 rounds of shell.

• • • • •

It is interesting to note that among the troops mustered into the service by the British war office are several companies composed exclusively of Hebrews. In Bombay there are two companies of Hebrew soldiers, and the army register shows that thousands of Hebrews have enlisted in the British army in recent years most of them being now with the army in South Africa.

That telephone between Paris and Berlin will begin working to-morrow. It was talked over for years.

It's a mystery why boys will go on a thin-iced pond; and unfortunately their way of getting to the bottom of it is not satisfactory.

Incidentally it may be said the reason why many cannot carry out their New Year resolutions is because they take too big a load.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No tr[illegible] of any kind should be left on the bo[illegible]

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tanateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tanateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have reascended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they [illegible] keep [illegible] in reserve and [illegible] exactly, while the [illegible] previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

CHATHAM, ONT.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st, seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

238 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the roses.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans

What Uncle Sam Means.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Representative McRae, of Arkansas, introduced to-day the following joint resolution:

"Be it resolved, etc., that the United States hereby declares that their purpose in acquiring jurisdiction and control of the Phillippine Islands was and is to secure to the inhabitants thereof as soon as practicable after the suppression of the existing rebellion therein, a free, independent, stable government, republican in form, and that the United States guarantee to said inhabitants protection against all foreign invasion.

Joe Martin Will Fight.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 3.—Joseph Martin, M. P. P., spoke for an hour and a half last night to his provincial supporters. He said that he intended to go to Victoria to do his utmost to defeat the Semlin Government, of which he was formerly a member. He claims that Mr. Semlin has obtained the Premiership by dishonest means and went into the whole question of political history at great length. He would fight from the start of the session with a view to another general election, and he offered to resign if he was not supported by the electors.

France Claims $86,000.

Santo Domingo, Jan. 3—via Haytian cable—The French Consul here is pressing the Boismare-Caccavelli claim of $86,000, payment of which is overdue. He threatens to embargo the Government revenues. According to rumors the improvement company has failed to comply with its contract with the Government regarding the payment of the claim. As the local lawyers refused to attend to the matter the Supreme Court has named a lawyer to act for the French consul.

Teamsters Blown Up.

Calumet, Mich., Jan. 3.—Two team loads of powder, each carrying 4,375 pounds of the explosive, were blown up near Eagle river last night. Two teamsters, Alexander Harmstrom and Jos. St. Louis, and their teams are lost. No explanation has been given.

Danced a Jig at 110

Prescott, Mich., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Helen Burrick, of Tyre, Sanilac County, celebrated her one hundredth and tenth birthday anniversary on New Year's day at the home of her great grand daughter, Mrs. John Stanley, when the centenarian danced a Highland fling.

A Bell Boy Wanted.

Detroit, Jan. 2.—The police have been notified that a bell boy in a Toronto hotel had skipped out with a package of one thousand dollars in bills, and the police of the Canadian city think he is on his way to Detroit. Detective Tuttle notified the local banks to look out for the boy.

CANADIANS RECEIVED WITH ENTHUSIASM.

They Entered Douglas Unopposed Amid Great Cheering and Scenes of Loyalty.

DUTCH REBELS HAD EVACUATED THE TOWN.

Quantities of Ammunition Were Captured and Destroyed—Inhabitants Overjoyed at Their Deliverance—Still More Rebels at Hand.

London, Jan. 3.—Undoubted tribute is paid to the prowess of the Canadians and Australians, and graphic accounts are published of the enthusiasm in Douglas as the victorious troops entered that place. The representative of the Associated Press with the flying column says—

"The immediate result of Colonel Pilcher's success is the entire dispersal of the rebels who have been governing the country for the past six weeks.

"After Sunnyside was captured the Torontos occupied the laager for the night and joined the main body the following morning, bringing the whole of the Boer tents, waggons and loot, and leaving the Cornwalls in garrison at Sunnyside. The British force then started for Douglas, the Torontos bringing up the rear in waggons. In the afternoon the troops entered the town unopposed and amid extraordinary scenes. The inhabitants were overjoyed and crowded about the soldiers, shaking hands with them, and when they learned that their deliverers were Canadians and Australians the enthusiasm became frenzied. There was loud cheering as the troops traversed the main street, and it was almost impossible for them to make progress, the crowds being so eager to shake hands with the colonials.

"It appears that the Landrost and all the mounted rebels evacuated the place on the previous night. The unmounted rebels are reported to be entrenched in the vicinity. Quantities of ammunition were captured and destroyed."

TREATED AS TRAITORS.

London, Jan. 3.—A despatch from Modder river intimates that the Sunnyside prisoners will not be treated as prisoners of war but as British subjects caught in open rebellion.

At the Modder River camp the conduct of the colonials is greatly admired and all are delighted that they have struck the first blow on the western frontier since the battle of Magersfontein. It is believed the relief of Kuruman will very quickly follow.

CHAMBERLAIN CONGRATULATES.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—The following cablegram was received by His Excellency the Governor-General this morning from Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies—

London, Jan. 3.—I congratulate you on gallant behavior of contingent in engagement at Sunnyside.

(Signed) CHAMBERLAIN.

HOW THE TROOPS WILL SAIL.

Division of the Contingent Among the Three Chartered Transports.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—A military order issued to-day announces the provisional allotment of troops to the transports for conveyance to South Africa.

The Montezuma will carry the first battalion of the mounted rifles along with one field battery.

The Laurentian will carry the other two field batteries with the brigade division staff.

The Pomeranian will accommodate the second battalion of the Canadian mounted rifles.

It is added that the Montezuma and Laurentian will probably sail on the 18th instant and the Pomeranian on the 20th. The exact date will be given out later.

French Defeat Chinese.

Paris, Jan. 2.—News has been received here of a battle between a column of French marines and Chinese militia on November 16th. The day after the arrangement concluded by Admiral Courrejolles with respect to the boundary of Kwan-chwan, the French marched to Vongliok, the residence of one of the chief instigators of the assassination of two Frenchmen at Mantao. There they met 1,500 Chinese militia strongly entrenched and by a flank movement put them to flight. The French had 16 killed and wounded, and the Chinese left 200 dead on the field.

M. C. R. Well Blows Up.

St. Thomas, Jan. 3.—The Michigan Central Railway well at Fargo blew up at 7 o'clock last night, demolishing the pumping house and fatally injuring Pumper Hough. The explosion was caused by gas entering the well from the natural gas wells which were recently sunk in the neighborhood.

Pitch-in at St. Thomas.

St. Thomas, Ont., Jan. 3.—A pitch in occurred in the Michigan Central yards at Windsor this morning. The westbound freight was run into by a train following. Three cars were ditched and demolished. No person was injured.

James Baxter in Court.

Montreal, Jan 3.—James Baxter, the private banker, arrested in connection with the bank Ville Marie case appeared before the Police Magistrate this morning, pleaded not guilty and was remanded until to-morrow morning at eleven o'clock.

The specific charge against him is conspiring to assist a criminal to evade justice. Other sensational arrests are hourly expected, and it is not unlikely that by the time the last chapter is written the history of the Ville Marie bank will be the most interesting in the annals of the banks of Canada.

Greenway Will Step Out

Winnipeg, Jan. 3.—Things are very critical here politically. The Lieutenant-Governor telegraphed for Mr. Greenway on Monday, and on Tuesday sent his son, Mr. Charles Patterson, out to Crystal City.

Mr. Greenway arrived in town yesterday afternoon, when a Cabinet meeting was held, and it is highly probable that to-morrow the resignation of the Ministry will be handed to his Excellency.

Deroulede Found Guilty.

Paris, Jan. 3.—The High Court rendered to-day its verdict on the conspiracy cases not previously disposed of. It was decided by a vote of 138 to 87 that M. Deroulede was guilty and by a vote of 200 to 1 extenuating circumstances were included in the decision.

Leyds Enjoys Himself.

The Hague, Jan. 3.—Dr. Leyds, the diplomatic agent of the Transvaal, attended the New Year's ball at the Palace yesterday evening. Queen Wilhelmina conversed several times with him. He was received by the Foreign Minister to-day.

Committed for Trial.

London, Ont., Jan. 3.—John Cavanagh appeared before the police magistrate yesterday charged with the murder of his mother, Mary Cavanagh, and was committed for trial at the spring assizes.

AN AMERICAN PROTEST.

United States Objects to the Seizure of Vessels by British Cruisers.

Washington, Jan. 3.—The State Department yesterday received from U. S. Ambassador Choate at London by cable a statement of the facts he had developed in connection with the seizure by British warships of American goods on the three merchant vessels Beatrice, Mashona and Maria.

The goods comprised not only flour, but miscellaneous articles of common trade, and while they were shipped for Lorenzo Marquez in British and German ships, as soon as Mr. Choate's statement came to hand to-day an instruction was cabled to him to inform the British Government that the United States could not admit the right of seizure in these cases.

This is the preliminary step usually taken in such negotiations. Next in order will be a report from the United States Consular representative at Lorenzo Marquez respecting the present condition of the seized or detained goods, and the damages sustained. The State Department is not yet fully informed on these points, though they will be necessary to the further presentation of the cases. It is not even known where the goods are, or if they have all been seized or only in part. The State Department has not the slightest doubt that the British authorities will make full amends to the owners of the goods when the facts are all laid before them.

Murderer Fears Death.

Windsor, Jan. 3.—Levi Stewart, the condemned murderer at Sandwich jail, has at last commenced to realize the awful doom that awaits him on February 6th, and devotes most of his time to religious matters. All of the bravado which he exhibited after his arrest and all through the trial has deserted him, and as the time draws near his fear of death increases. Rev. Mr. Armstrong, of the Wellington avenue Methodist mission, is Stewart's spiritual adviser, and he visits the condemned man regularly. He takes great care in explaining the passages of Scripture which he reads to him, and Stewart listens very attentively. His face will brighten up when the minister comes to him and he is always depressed after his departure.

Mud Volcanoes Spout.

Sandiego, Cal., Jan. 3.—Reports received from interior points show that the recent earthquake was the cause of a number of strange happenings. The mud volcanoes on the desert near the Colorado river have become active after a long rest and are now spouting mud again. The natural gas wells near Yuma are also in working order since the heavy quake. They have been lighted and the glare at night can be seen for many miles.

A correspondent from Moosa writes that a number of fissures were madein the ground at that pace twenty or more feet in length.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the hentedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicioulous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 35 cents each, but with $35 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

Proof of [illegible]

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked in and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

The sleighing is good. Wood is beginning to move, but the price still remains high.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day was taken into the country to see tapioca ots gathered and ground for use. The ults working in the grove, men and wo n, had each a rag around the loins, but e boys and girls, with their black, glossy ins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that e were from a country so far away and different from theirs that the waters re sometimes made solid by the extreme ld and we could walk upon them; that metimes it was so intensely cold that the in was frozen into particles and lay on e earth so deep that people could not lk through it, and that three and four yers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, ondered why we staid there, why we d not come and enjoy life in their favor clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with tortoise. I do not know whether our g had heard of turtle soup or whether regarded the creature as a new kind of ne that walked about; at any rate, he termined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a nstitutional down the garden path Gyp rrested it and carried it into his kennel, here he gnawed at the impenetrable rmor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in hich the tortoise resumed its interrupted romenade irritated the dog exceedingly, ut no failure discouraged him. When ver we reminded him of the tortoise, he ould go in search of it all round the gar n, peering into every crevice, till even ally the creature was found, and then esh but futile attempts were made to ex act the meaty portions from the shell.—

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce aves? A most simple process, but one rely adopted judging by the wilted uff we generally see served. A gentle an of the old school was my teacher, d while yet a mere maid I was pro oted to the proud dignity of crisping e lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from e stalk, discarding discolored and im erfect ones and leaving untouched the ny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear ater for awhile, all morning if you hoose; pick them over a couple of times efore serving; wash one by one and lay a wire basket if you have one; if not, clean, soft towel will answer; gather e ends and sides loosely in your hand d lightly shake the lettuce; then put e leaves in a colander, which you set the refrigerator, but not on the ice. eave until needed, when you will find e lettuce deliciously cool and crisp ough to crack. Never cut the leaves. very large, divide with the fingers into aller pieces.—What to Eat.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be ound in almost every European language, ut it is doubtful if one in a thousand of ose who use it have an idea of its origin. e are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume Clerc that when the crocodile finds an nwary traveler it devours him, but after ard weeps over him all the rest of its life. his is very evidently the allusion in Othello," "Each drop she falls would ove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, owever, which is more often referred to literature, and according to which the rocodile sheds tears in order to allure the aveler to destruction. Shakespeare al des to this in the passage where he tells w

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "In that

A MAN LOST.

Lost! No man understands the full meaning of that word like the man who has been lost. He will tell you: "I was in the woods going ahead steadily when I realized I'd missed the trail. With a cry of 'Lost!' I broke into a run heedless or ignorant of the direction I was going."

The first impulse of a man lost in the woods is to run. The only safe thing is to sit right down and reason out the position.

Sometimes a business man gets up at the usual hour, breakfasts, kisses his wife and starts for the office. He has for sometime seen signs that he was off the trail of health. To-day the signs multiply. His brain is dull and dizzy, his heart does not beat right, his breathing is difficult, his limbs feel tremulous. He is scared. He realizes that he's far away from the trail of health, and suddenly like a panther from a tree, the thought leaps on him, "You are a lost man." The first impulse is to run for help, though the way is honey-combed with pitfalls of quackery. But the rational man faces the facts, sits down and thinks over the position and its probabilities.

That is the man we want to talk to. Disease in almost any form is generally accompanied by the failure of the organs of digestion and nutrition. Re-establish these organs in healthy action, the blood is at once enriched, the body nourished and the general health restored. This result is invariably accomplished by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a stomach-strengthening, nerve-nourishing, muscle-making, blood-purifying medicine. It has cured thousands who thought their health entirely lost. The "Discovery" is not a stimulant and contains no alcohol or whisky. Sold at all medicine stores.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 35 cents each, but with $35 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

BIRTH.

GLIDDEN.—On January 2nd, 1900, the wife of R. Glidden, College street, Peterborough, of a son.

Sham Rock

is a name given by some to our granolithic pavements. Some shoes have sham soles, which when wet are taken off very easily by the sham rock, and thus the sham sole is lost. To avoid the latter buy your shoes from Kidd—the price is no more, but less, and trading stamps given as well.

Red Cross Fund.

Mr. L. M. Hayes, treasurer of the General Committee which had charge of the Red Cross Fund Concert, has handed the sum of $190.85, being the net receipts accruing as the result of that entertainment. The money is being placed in the Montreal Bank, together with the amount previously contributed by personal subscribers to the fund, which now totals $212.85.

Man Wanted.

Who will take the contract at $300 per year for the delivery of the Morning Times in town. Delivery must be made between 6 and 8 o'clock a.m., in winter, and 6 and 7 in summer. This is a good job for a man with two or more boys of his own who are going to school. Apply at Times Bookstore.

Death of Mr. Geo. Dunsford.

One of Peterborough's best known and oldest citizens passed away yesterday morning, in the person of Mr. George Dunsford. The deceased suffered from a stroke of paralysis a few days ago, and gradually sank until death took place, as above. He was 73 years of age, and came to Peterborough when a young man. The funeral will take place on Saturday next at 2 p.m.

Local Firm's Enterprise.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons yesterday morning received a telegram from New Glasgow, N. S., ordering a large sized bunting Union Jack. The message was received at 10 a.m., and an hour later the article was on its way to New Glasgow.

Separate School Trustees.

Elections for Separate School Trustees for 1900 took place on Wednesday. There was no contest except in the case of No. 3 ward, where Mr. Jas. Bogue was nominated in opposition to the sitting member, Mr. T. B. McGrath. In the election yesterday Mr. McGrath was again returned, the vote being, McGrath 42, Bogue 25, majority 17. The Board will, therefore, be the same as last year. It meets to-night to elect a chairman for 1900.

Broke His Leg.

An unfortunate accident occurred at the rink when Arthur Hall, the little seven year old son of Mr. George Hall corner of Simcoe and Aylmer streets broke his leg. Arthur was being swung around one of the corners by a few of his companions, and was thrown against the side of the rink in such a manner as to break his right leg. The little fellow was removed to his home and Dr. Greer summoned. The injured limb was set and the patient is now doing nicely.

FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

A Couple of Artillerymen Leave to Join at Port Hope.

Sergt. Fred Scully and gunner Richard Boyle, of Peterborough, leave on the nine o'clock train for Port Hope, where they will join the detachment enrolled there to proceed to Montreal.

Sergt. Scully has had experience as a soldier. When a boy he joined the 57th battalion. He spent five years in the Northwest Mounted Police, three years in the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons and has served three years with the Durham Field Battery. He is of splendid physique and is a decided acquisition to the regiment. He resides near Jackson Park.

Gunner Boyle is well known in town He is a young man and has served a year with the Durham Field Battery He has been goalkeeper for the junior Peterborough lacrosse club and is not unaccustomed to facing hot shots

In addition to these, Private Walter H. Reynolds, known in Peterborough as Harold Reynolds, has volunteered in the artillery department at Montreal. Harold is a brother of Mrs. J. A. McCellan, Gilmour street, and has legions of friends in Peterborough who will wish him good luck.

Mr. J. J. Turner received a telegram yesterday from Major Greenwood, at Montreal, asking him to allow his son Achilles to join the second contingent for South Africa, and consent was given. Mr. Achilles is the youngest son, and will leave at once with the mounted infantry section.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Rev. Father Murphy, of the Paulist Order, New York City, will deliver a temperance lecture at vespers in St. Peter's cathedral next Sunday. The lecture is given in connection with a temperance society which it is proposed to organize at an early date.

The chief would like the owner for a gentleman's glove.

The Provincial Poultry Show opens in the market hall on Tuesday next.

At the police court yesterday Magistrate Dimble gave judgment in the case of the hotel proprietor charged with selling liquor to a man on the black list as a heavy drinker. The proprietor was fined $10 and costs.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle was presented with an address and a handsome gold watch by his employees as a New Year's gift.

The Christmas offering at the Anglican church in Lakefield amounted to over $71, showing the high esteem in which Rev. George Warren is held by his parishioners.

Mr. Walden will resume his duties as teacher of piano, voice culture and harmony on Monday, Jan. 8th.

The Catholic Association Minstrels gave one of their unique and very creditable performances in their hall last night to a fair audience.

The annual meeting of the Y. W. C. A. took place last night.

Mr. Victor McWilliams has returned to Toronto University to resume his studies.

The rumor that a party had broken through the ice on Rice Lake appears to be unfounded.

Mr. Robert Henderson, of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, died in that city on Sunday last. Mr. Henderson is a dentist, and was formerly connected with the C. P. R. line.

Wood is being delivered by farmers in large quantities. There were fifteen or twenty loads on the market this morning, and several citizens secured short dry hardwood at $4 and $4.50.

The ringing of the dollars
And the jingling of the dimes
Is a pleasing indication
Of the improvement in the times.

Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Charlotte street Methodist church, met on Wednesday and elected the following officers—

President—Mrs. Hamilton.
Vice-President—Mrs. Goard.
Secretary—Mrs. Drew.
Asst. Sec.—Mrs. Crossley.
Treasurer—Mrs. Lyle.

The ladies of the church intend giving a congregational tea and social gathering on Thursday evening, January 18th. It will be free to the members of the congregation.

A specially attractive musical service is being prepared for Sunday next in connection with the regular song sermon by the pastor. Miss Hendren, of Lakefield, will be present and sing at both services.

The Canada Life

Hon. Geo. A Cox was elected President of the Canada Life Assurance Company on Tuesday, in succession to Mr. A. G. Ramsay, whose resignation took effect at the end of the year. The position was offered, as a matter of courtesy, to Vice-President F. W. Gates, who declined the honor on account of his advanced years and impared health. Senator Cox has been connected with the Canada Life for nearly forty years, during which period the company's business has increased from $3,500,000 to over $76,000,000. He proposes in the future to give more of his personal attention to the Canada Life, and less to the other financial concerns in which he is interested. Mr. E. W. Cox, will be associated with the Senator in the management. Senator Cox was the first representative in Peterborough of the great company, of which he is now the head.

Another Batch of Teachers

As a result of the County Model School examinations, the following candidates passed and were granted certificates to teach:—Bessie Campbell, Gertie Carter, with honors; Cassie Coughlan, Lilian Howson, Annie Martin, Gertie Moffatt, Emily Richards; Kathleen Simpson, Louisa Waterman; Lewis Bolin, R. B. Fitzgerald, E. E. Moore, W. H. McConnell, Dennis O'Brien, H. L. Smith, Archie Stewart; James Weir. Clara Dunk, Theresa Robson and Lily Simpson will be granted their certificates conditional to meeting the full non-professional requirements in July next. Miss Robson is allowed a permit until she qualifies.

Lindsay Post: The many friends of Mr. Thomas Machett, county clerk and treasurer, will learn with deep regret that his condition this morning was considered to be almost hopeless, and relatives have been summoned to his bedside.

LIVELY LAKEFIELD.

Latest Budget of News from Peterborough's Northern Suburb.

Lakefield has sent two representatives to join the contingent for South Africa—Messrs Em. Thompson and G. Hayward. The former is a veteran of the American war, and familiar with the smell of powder, while the latter is a keen young soldier, and both will without doubt render a good account of themselves if given the chance. T. Crowe from Dummer has also left to join. The newly organized band were on hand to give Mr. Thompson a send-off on Tuesday night.

The village has been lively with a large number of holiday visitors, and merchants are pleased with a satisfactory amount of business.

The unfortunate mistake made at the time of the nominations for councillors will necessitate a fresh nomination and possibly an election: two of the Council elected by acclamation, viz.: Messrs. Casement and Lillicrap, having been found to be ineligible on account of existing contracts with the Corporation.

It is hoped that two good men will be found to take their places, as great care will have to be exercised during the coming year the statement at the close of the books for 1899 showing a deficit of over $900.

The rink opened for business on Saturday last and was largely patronized on New Year's day, both curlers and skaters being out in force. The genial proprietor, Mr. Levi Payne is managing in person this year.

Bills are out for the sale of Mr. Con. Young's mill property at Young's Point, as Mr. Young is retiring and will reside in Toronto in future, an offer for the property was made by a Lakefield gentleman in connection with an American visitor, but the negotiations did not reach a conclusion the contracting parties being unable to agree on a price.

The usual Sunday school entertainments of the various churches have been successfully carried out, and concerts are being organized by the Curling Club and the local court of the Canadian Order of Foresters; the dates for which are not yet fixed.

There is also a proposal to get up a concert in aid of the Red Cross fund, so that local talent will have full scope for their energies during the ensuing few weeks.

Ev'ry Month, for January.

The opening article in "Ev'ry Month" for January is upon that ever fascinating subject to women—diamonds; and it takes us to Kimberley, which is now the centre of attention in more ways than one, and tells us the history of the mines and how the diamonds are procured. The account is profusely illustrated with unusual photographs of the unique mining operations. An interesting sketch of the life of the "Private Secretary Girl" follows, giving the details of a professional field which is increasing rapidly and cataloguing the essentials of success. "Scenes from the Plays of the Month" contains illustrations from some of the more striking situations of the new productions. "Travelling Libaries" a unique institution undertaken by several of the more progressive States are described and illustrated, and the great work they are doing outlined. There are three short stories of adventure, love and romance, and the department articles on Fashion, Books, and Interesting People. The music is of the usual popular character, consisting of 13 well printed pages—"Savanero," a Caprice for piano by J. F. Gilder, a most excellent teaching piece as well as a beautiful composition; "Your Mother's Wedding Ring," a touching vocal selection, the words unusually poetic and the melody attractive; "Happy Little Nigs," a March and Two-Step, a lively characteristic theme written with dash and brilliancy by Jacob H. Ellis; and "Molly Malone," a catchy waltz song. EV'RY MONTH, 10 cents.

OL. POWELL'S MEN ATTACK THE ENEMY.

bliged to Withdraw After All Officers and a Number of Men Were Hit.

OSSES, 21 KILLED, 24 WOUNDED, 3 CAPTURED.

ers Have Completely Retired from Neighborhood of Molteno. British Set Fire to Wrecked Train. The Boers Are Still Holding Colesberg.

London, Jan. 5.

he War Office has received through General Forestier-Walker at Cape Town, the following despatch from Col. Baden Powell, dated Mafeking, Dec. 26: "We have attacked one of the enemy's works this morning endeavoring to push back the cordon northward. Our force consisted of three guns, two squadrons of Protectorate Regiment, one of the Bechuanaland rifles, and armored train, etc. The enemy had strengthened their works during the night and doubled the garrison since yesterday's reconnaissance. Nevertheless our attack was carried out and pressed home with the greatest possible gallantry and steadiness under a very hot fire. But all efforts to gain the interior by escalade failed the fort being practically impregnable.

ur attack only withdrew after six of our officers had been hit and a large number of men. Nothing could have exceeded the courage and dash displayed.

he general situation remains unchanged and the health and spirits of the garrison are very satisfactory.

regret to report the following casualties:

illed—Capt. R. J. Verner, Capt. H. C. Sanford, Lieut. H. C. Patton. Eighteen non-commissioned officers and troopers.

Wounded—Capt. Charles Fitzclarence 23 non-commissioned officers and troopers.

Prisoners—Three troopers."

Gen. Forestier-Walker points out that while the despatch gives all the names it fails to show that six officers were hit.

London, Jan. 6.

The Times publishes the following despatch from Mafeking, dated Dec. 26—"At dawn to-day Col. Baden-Powell organized an unsuccessful attack upon a strong position of the enemy at Gametree, two miles from Mafeking, which the Boers have been maintaining a desultory fire, but annoying shell and rifle fire for several weeks. The railway has recently been reconstructed between the town and Gamestre where the Boers had destroyed it, the final repairs being made in preparation for the sortie.

During the night the armored train, with Maxim and Hotchkiss guns, under Capt. Williams and troops took up positions for attack from two sides. Capt. Lord Charles Bentinck and a squadron were in reserve upon the left, while the extreme left wing was occupied by artillery under Major Panzera and a galloping maxim of the Cape police, the whole being under Col. Hore.

Emplacements were thrown up during the night, the orders being to attack at dawn and the artillery fire to desist upon prolonged tooting from the armored train.

At daybreak the guns opened fire and rapidly drew the reply of the enemy, our shells bursting within effective range. Capt. Vernon gave the signal to cease firing and advance, his squadron leading off. Gametree is surrounded with scrub, which contained many sharpshooters, and their accuracy of fire still further confused the men who had followed Capt. Vernon, and who saw him and his brother officers killed.

Being without commanders they were driven off at one point, but they endeavored to scale the forts at others. They found the position of the Boers, however, almost impregnable."

TRAIN SET ON FIRE.

London, Jan. 5.—The Daily Mail prints a despatch from Rensburg, Cape Colony, which says that the British set fire Tuesday night to the trucks of the wrecked train which got away from them and slid down towards the Boers. The ignition was accomplished by the New South Wales Lancers under a heavy fire, which prevented the Boers from getting the goods from the cars. The despatch says also that the Boers have been surrounded, but that the British are handicapped by a lack of guns of large calibre.

The above story cannot be relied upon, as it is contradicted by despatches to the London Times.

TROOPS REINFORCED FRENCH.

London, Jan. 5.—The War Office this afternoon published a despatch from Cape Town, dated Wednesday, Jan. 3, saying that at Gen. French's special request the Household Cavalry, a battery of field artillery and the first battalion of the Essex Regiment have been despatched to reinforce him temporarily.

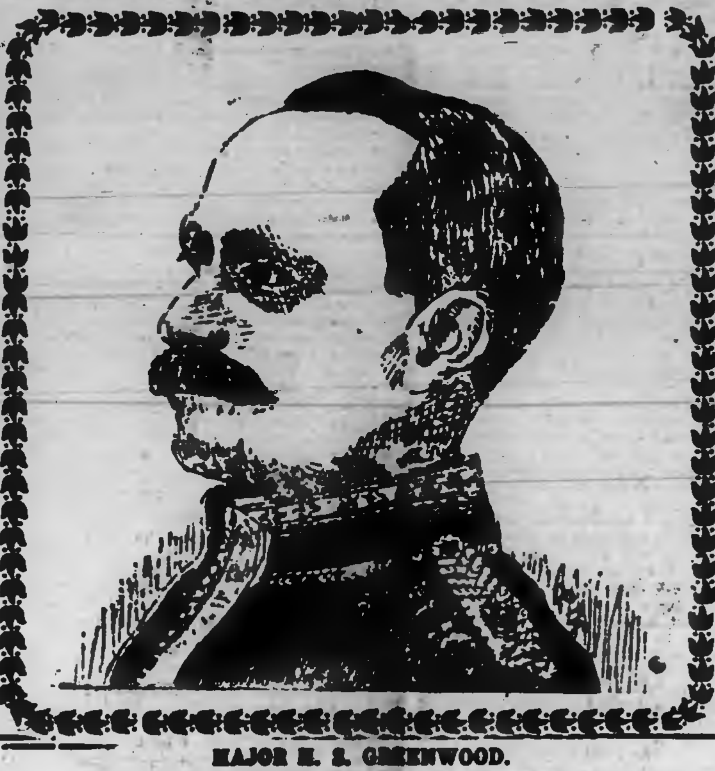
ATTACK ON AN OUTPOUST.

London, Jan. 5.—General Gatacre's report of the Molteno affair confirms the Associated Press despatch showing it was merely a determined attack on a police outpost, which was successfully repelled. There were no British casualties.

WHY PILCHER RETIRED.

London, Jan. 5.—There is still no important news from the front but the silence which has descended on Gen. Buller's hugh force at the Tugela river is believed to be the prelude of another attempt to reach Ladysmith.

In the meanwhile the extraordinary tenacity the Boers are displaying around Colesberg, even assuming the offensive, tends to detract from the success General French is supposed to have achieved. While Colonel Pilcher drove a couple of hundred rebels from Sunnyside, killing or wounding thirty and capturing forty-three, his immediate evacuation of Douglas seems to prove that he had information that there was a sufficient number of Boers in the neighborhood to make his position unsafe.



MAJOR H. S. GREENWOOD.

Commanding 3rd Prince of Wales' Dragoons, and One of Peterborough's Representatives on Second Canadian Contingent.

ZULU'S WANT TO FIGHT.

Pietermaritzburg, Jan. 5.—The restlessness of the Zulus is increasing. Many of them are on the verg of starvation and there have been several instances of looting stores. It is feared that the magistrates will not be able to restrain the warriors much longer. It is asserted that they are anxious to fight the Boers.

BULLER HAS 30,000 MEN.

London, Jan. 5.—The critics, in summing up the probalities of Gen. Buller making another attack estimate his force at nearly 30,000 men, with 65 guns, including six howitzers, against General Joubert's 25,000 men and 60 guns, but whose position and mobility will more than counterbalance the numerical superiority of the British. The critic of the Morning Post labors daily to prepare the public for heavy losses. He says to-day: "Once General Buller sets out, his object will be to win a decisive battle. His aim will be to inflict the greatest possible loss on the enemy, and, if he can, to crush or cripple the Boer army. It will be necessary for that purpose that he does not spare his own force."

CANADIANS ARE ALL WELL.

Halifax, Jan. 5.—A cable from Captain Stairs to Lady Daily, dated Belmont, Jan. 3, says: "All well."

FOOLISH GERMAN EXCITEMENT.

Berlin, Jan. 5.—Every section of the Berlin press continues to comment in an excited manner, upon the action of British cruisers in seizing German vessels suspected of carrying contraband of war.

Commenting on the seizure of the German ship General by the British and what has stirred Germany, The Berliner Tageblatt says:

"The measure of patience of the German nation is full. Does England want to drive Germany violently into the arms of the Russo-French coalition?"

The Deutsche Tageszeitung "regrets that the Emperor made a journey to England, which has not even yet prevented her open hostility."

The German Colonial Society has sent a protest to the press and intends to hold a series of indignation meetings.

BOERS HAVE FALLEN BACK.

London, Jan. 5.—According to advices from Sterkstroom, the Boers have completely retired from the neighborhood of Molteno. General Gatacre does not appear to have pursued them, as the reinforcements from Sterkstroom have returned there.

BOERS HOLD COLESBERG.

Rensburg, Cape Colony, Jan. 4.—Evening.—Colesberg has not yet been occupied. The Boers unexpectedly attacked the British left at daybreak this morning, but were repulsed. They occupied the hills to the north of the town, but were eventually driven out of their positions after an hour's shelling by our guns. They still hold the hills immediately surrounding the town and thus prevent the British from advancing along the railway.

The British loss in to-day's engagement was light, while the Boers are reported to have lost 180, including twenty prisoners, who were taken by the mounted infantry about midday.

The Boer attackers numbered a thousand men. The Inniskillen Dragoons cut their way through the Boers, who were forced to retreat by a heavy artillery and musketry fire.

ENGLAND IS WAITING.

London, Jan. 5.—The clubs were crowded until midnight with frequenters who were expecting to hear of a big battle on the Tugela River. This feeling of expectancy was enhanced by earlier bulletins telling of how vigorously the British were shelling the Boer trenches. It is believed that Gen. Buller is now ready to strike.

SEVENTH DIVISION SAILING.

London, Jan. 5.—The first battalions of the seventh division started yesterday for the Cape. Enrollment of the London Imperial volunteers continues from day to the Guild Hall with stirring scenes and no abatement of public interest. The Imperial Yeomanry corps is rapidly mobilizing, and the Prince of Wales will soon review the London contingent.

About 10,000 men will be allowed to serve out of a total of 200,000 volunteers and yeomanry, and only twelve battalions of the militia will go abroad and fifty held back in reserve. It is a mistake to suppose that Great Britain will be denuded of battalions when the eighth division is mobilized. There are more battalions on duty in Great Britain than there were at the outbreak of the war.

Rockefeller Distributes Gold.

New York, Jan. 5.—John D. Rockfeller visited Tarrytown to-day for the first time furing the holidays. One of his pockets was bulging with $5 gold pieces, which he distributed to the employees at the railway station and workmen about the village.

French Force Defeated.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 5.—Mail advices by the steamship Queen Adelaide, which reached Victoria from the Orient to-day, say that another battle between the French and the Chinese took place at Kawehawan, and that the French were defeated with a loss of thirty men.

Some days ago a French force was reported to have defeated the Chinese in Kawehawan province, the French casualties being only 15. The trouble arose over the assassination of two French naval officers.

AN EMISSARY FROM THE KAISER.

Special Messages to the Queen Regarding the Delagoa Bay Seizures.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—An emissary from the German Emperor arrived here last night with private despatches for the Queen. They are understood to refer to Delagoa Bay and the seizure of the German ships.

British official critics are startled at the unusual course of the Kaiser in directly addressing the Queen on affairs of state. The messenger took the first train this morning to Southampton, where a Government vessel will meet him and take him to Osborne, where the Queen now is.

At the urgent request of Lord Salisbury the Queen will open Parliament on February 14 in person, the first time she has done so since Jan. 22, 1886, when Mr. Gladstone's Irish Home Rule bill was introduced.

THE RUSSIANS NEARING HERAT.

Trans-Caspian Troops of the Imperial Army Are Also Being Mobilized.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The Journal publishes the following—St. Petersburg, Dec. 5.—Russian troops are reported to-day to be nearing Herat.

The trans-Caspian troops of the imperial army are also being mobilized.

These reports are confirmed by officials well informed on every movement that has been made.

Paris, Dec. 5.—Buffet and Deroulede left by the Northern Railway this morning.

SECOND CONTINGENT IS ALMOST READY.

Volunteers Are Required to Arrive in Halifax by 15th January.

TROOPS RECEIVING ENTHUSIASTIC OVATIONS.

Guelph's Hearty Send-off for its Contingent. Citizens in Winnipeg Give a Grand Concert in Honor of The Men. Quebec's Poor Showing.

Ottawa, Jan. 5.—Ottawa, Kingston and Toronto troops will arrive in Halifax at 6 p.m. on the 15th instant. Ottawa men will leave the Canada Atlantic station about 10 or 11 o'clock in the forenoon of the 13th inst., and will start from Montreal by the Intercolonial at 6 p. m. There will be 180 men and 5 officers and 137 horses leaving here. Besides, there will be five flat cars with wagons and guns, two cars with harness, and one bagge car.

The Toronto party will comprise 13 officers, 150 men and 175 horses. From Kingston there will be ten officers, 121 men and 153 horses and 6 guns.

GUELPH'S SEND-OFF.

Guelph, Jan. 5.—The contingent of 54 men from Batteries 46 and 1—1 leftl ast evening by the C. P. R. train for Ottawa. Never in the history of Guelph was there such an enthusiastic ovation given on any occasion. About 5.30 o'clock the full strength of the contingent assembled at Petrie's Gymnasium. After the roll call Mayor Nelson bade the men "God-speed," and on behalf of the citizens presented each single man with with $5 and each married man with $10; to Lieut. McCrae, and the balance of the $500 which was granted by the council to be forwarded to the general fund.

At the market square fireworks were set off. The streets were lined with people along the line of march, and the contingent was continuously cheered. When the C.P.R. statiYn was reached many found it impossible to get near the building. Both banks of the river were crowded and also the G.T.R. bridge, which commanded a fine view. In short the majority of the citizens were present, a huge bonfire was made on the river, and amid cheers and "God Save the Queen," the train steamed out.

AT QUEBEC.

Quebec, Jan. 5.—Lieut. A. T. Ogilvie, who arrived from England this week, and who has been appointed an officer on the contingent, left on Wednesday for Montreal to superintend the shipping of 35 horses to this city for B Battery. B Field Battery is supposed to supply 35 men out of their strength of 80, and about 40 have volunteered, but a number of the R.C.A. men are very anxious to go to the front. Yesterday seven of the latter passed the necessary medical examination.

NOT A VOLUNTEER.

Quebec, Jan. 5.—The Quebec Field Battery was supposed to furnish 13 men, but not one has volunteered, and their places will have to be filled by others. Lt.-Col. Jones, of St. John, N.B., Garrison Artillery, will send up eight men to join E Battery, while several old gunners have also offered their services.

HAMILTON'S FUND.

Hamilton, Jan. 5.—The contributions to the Hamilton patriotic fund yesterday amounted to $5,160.

Major Hendrie accepted three more recruits for the contingent, Gunners Bradford and H. L. Stringer and Driver Thomas.

DRAGOONS LEAVE WINNIPEG.

Winnipeg, Jan. 4.—The Canadian Pacific Railway depot was the scene of another soldier' farewell. Five members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons left for Toronto, where they join the general staff of the First Battalion of Canadian Mounted Rifles for South Africa.

A mammoth patriotic concert and demonstration was held in the drill hall to-night, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the fund for Winnipeg's contingent for the Transvaal. The affair was a splendid success.

IN THE NORTHWEST.

Calgary, Jan. 5.—Over $900 was collected here in a few hours for the Calgary contingent to South Africa (including the Police) about 60 men.

The citizens of Virden, Man., mailed $250 to their quota in the South African contingent.

Delagoa Bay.

London, Jan. 5.—The latest information possessed by Counsel for Delagoa Bay Railroad claimants is that the award will be made at the end of January. One of the chief parties to the claim said to a representative of the Associated Press—

"There are rumors current that the award will be a compromise agreeable to no one. But I attach no value to these reports. The story of the claimants getting $100,000,000 is ridiculous. The total of the American and British claims does not exceed $15,000,000. The arbitrators are not likely to award more than is claimed. The various reports are based purely on conjecture. The parties to the suit will be the first to hear the result, and no word on this subject has reached them."

Devoured by Cannibals.

New York, Jan. 5.—The Southern Presbyterian Board of Missions at Nashville, Tenn, says a special to the Times from that city, has received letters from the Rev. L. C. Vass and the Rev. H. P. Hawkins, missionaries of the church stationed at Luebo, Congo Free State, Africa, giving the accounts of burning of fourteen villages and the killing of ninety or more natives by State troops. They report that some of the victims were eaten by cannibals, and that the bodies of all who were slain were eaten their heads being cut off.

The Rev. W. H. Sheppard was sent to investigate and saw forty-seven dead, three of whom had been eaten.

The chief said that eighty or ninety had been killed and five persons eaten by the people. Mr. Sheppard saw eighty-one right hands cut off and drying over a slow fire, in order to be afterwards taken back to the State officers. Sixety women prisoners were confined in a pen, and 18 men had already been sent away prisoners.

It is said that the raid was ordered because the people could not pay the exorbitant tribute demanded by the State.

Christianity Recognized.

Yokohama, Dec. 16, via Victoria, B. C., Jan. 5.—The bill for the regulation of religious organization excites much comment because of its fairness and impartiality. Christianity is no longer merely tolerated but receives recognition. All religious property is exempt from taxation and religious teachers from conscript. The whole Buddhist sects show an unexpectedly liberal spirit and are practically united in giving support to the measure.

Greenway Resigns Today

Winnipeg, Jan. 4.—It is generally expected that Premier Greenway and his Cabinet will resign office to-morro. and Lieut.-Governor Patterson will then call upon Hon. Hugh John Macdonald to organize his Government. It is understood that Mr. Macdonald's cabinet will be composed of himself as Premier and Attorney-General; Mr. R. P. Roblin, Provincial Treasurer; Mr. J. A. Davidson, Minister of Works and Agriculture, with two other members without portfolios. Mr. Davidson has no seat in the House.

THE FENIAN INVASION

Strong Ground Taken by the Military Gazette.

SOME VERY GOOD ADVICE.

The Government Asked to Prepare for Every Emergency.

Where there is Smoke, there must be Some Fire—There are Lots of Traitors Even in our Own Land.

Ottawa, Jan. 5.—The Military Gazette says—"It is an old saying that "where there is smoke there's fire," and, having so recently seen the results of indifference and neglect of repeated warnings as to their intentions in the case of the Imperial Government in its dealings with the Boer Republics, Canada can ill afford to underestimate and disparage indications, which, while they may appear as the vaporings of irresponsible blatherskites, still show only too well the hostile spirit animating certain citizens of the United States. That Canada should be wantonly attacked by the survivors of the "I.R.A.," who attempted to violate her territory in 1866 and 1870, with the avowed purpose of confiscating and parcelling out the properties of our farmers among themselves, will scarcely be credited by some people; but, was not the same view taken of the Boers and their threats to drive all English-speaking Cape Colonists into the sea before Christmas?

Few of our people looked seriously upon the threat last September—they now have good reason to at least remember it. And, though no one would place the loud-mouthed Irish Fenian in the same class with the fanatical Boer, either in courage, resource or ability, it is still always well to be prepared for any and all eventualities. To this end we bespeak generous appropriations for our militia at the approaching session of Parliament—in all probability they will not be required against the Fenians, but it takes time and money to continue on the good work inagurated by our General Officer Commanding, and, we believe, recent events have sufficiently opened the eyes of our people to rigidly oppose any curtailment of his policy and schemes of practical military progress upon modern, up-to-date lines. In the meantime the old standing offer of Canada—free grant lands to the extent of six feet of Dominion soil—no more, no less—for Fenians or any other hostile invaders, may be presumed to still hold good.

A protest has been entered against the the return of Mr. R. C. Ennis, Liberal member for Beautiful Plains. Mr. Ennis defeated Mr. Davidson at the recent election.

HEUREAUX THE ASSASSIN

Astounding Crimes of Domingo's Dictator.

ASSASSINATION HIS VOTE.

No Man Safe, however Prominent, during his long Career.

A President that Enriched Himself and Ruined his Country—Lived and [illegible] by Murdering Prominent Citizens—The President's Death.

Santo Domingo, Jan. 6.—Ulysses Heureaux had no historian, and perhaps did not want history to go into detail concerning himself. Prior to his assassination it was death to speak ill of him. Now a terrorized people is beginning to have courage to talk. Many are the stories coming to light each day of the fearful shedding of blood by him during his reign. Toward the last when his financial policy had run its course and downfall was certain, he became more bloodthirsty than ever in an effort to maintain his worthless currency. At the same time he grew more irritable, and his death stayed the execution of scores of men. A young dentist of Santo Domingo City was unfortunate enough to incur the ill-will of Heureaux by too great politeness to one of the President's friends for whom he was doing some dental work. The woman did not complain of insult, but simply remarked that the young man was gentlemanly. This was enough to excite the jealousy of Heureaux, and a young soldier was ordered to assassinate the dentist as he came from his doorway. The soldier was a friend of the dentist, and a note was slipped under his door cautioning him to remain within. Three days before the President left for Moca, where he met his death, he sent word to the soldier that he would expect to find his order executed on his return. This soldier and the dentist had arranged to leave the country, and were on the eve of departure when the news came of his death.

Two months before a soldier was sent to Moca to assassinate a prominent man who had made some remarks about the currency. He was promised a piece of property as a reward for the deed, for Heureaux always used the double [illegible] of hope of reward and fear. The soldier went on his mission, but did not carry it out. He received a message to return to the capital for the reward, as it was taken for granted he had obeyed. He was promptly shot on his return. During his later months he had a man shot who had given some slight offense [illegible] years before, when Heureaux was [illegible]. All these executions were without trial. The President himself accused the victim of political intrigue, and ordered his soldiers to do the shooting. His order was direct to the individual soldier, so that there could be no shifting of responsibility. The period of mourning is long here, and remote relatives are mourned for with the same formalities accorded those closer. As a result, most of the women wear mourning, and much of it is worn as a result of Heureaux's political executions. Whether or not he ever had a twinge of [illegible] as he walked the streets of Santo Domingo and [illegible] testimony [illegible] is not recorded. A young lady in black attracts attention. She is mourning for the brother, who was shot two months ago by the President's orders, [illegible] information given. The offense was with a friend of the President; said this boy tried to flirt with her. Did he? Possibly, or the young lady had some grievance, or the President thought him dangerous.

At Santo Domingo the owner of a cafe [illegible] house owned by Heureaux. It had belonged to the government, but the title got into Heureaux's name. The rent was $25, gold, monthly. The President sent some officers to board there, [illegible] a figure that would cause a loss to the owner. He refused to take them at the figure named by the President, and the next day received a written notice that his rent had been increased to $100, gold, monthly. He was a citizen of [illegible] and thought it best to take the chances on having his [illegible] made a matter of national complication. He was already to move to Hayti when the change came.

How many bodies lay in the bay no one knows. It was only after his death, when the prison, supposed to be full of political prisoners, was found empty that this means of vengeance became known. The soldiers confessed that the helpless victims of his wrath were tied together [illegible] and thrown [illegible] to their fate. When the [illegible] was [illegible] a little stone [illegible] and when it returned there was a decrease in the number of passengers. It was a veritable reign of terror, and the citizen as he talks now glances over his shoulder anxiously and hesitates, lest after all there has been no change and he is courting death.

Heureaux was an imitator of the Sultan, but he did not go to the expense of building [illegible] so doing. To some of his favorites he gave homes of luxury. Others received [illegible] marks of distinction, but had credit of the paper money that Heureaux gave, but he, himself, took the gold. His rents were payable in gold and he accepted [illegible] and the thoughtless tenant who suggested any was ordered to make them at once, and generally did so. He seldom [illegible] have interfered with the renting of his property, but the [illegible] in through his favor learned to fear him. Rents were paid promptly, and the occupants did not ask to have the house papered every spring. Heureaux gradually acquired all the gold and silver of the island, leaving the business men with paper as surplus capital. When he was unable to maintain the credit of this longer there was practically bankruptcy. Only the smaller business transactions, based on actual necessities, were possible. The exchange of real estate practically ceased. No matter what the emergency of the owner of a tract of land, there was nothing for him in a sale. His answer to a purchaser's inquiry would be that he had enough for the day and to-morrow would have to take care of itself. And the gold went out for the gunboats built on the Clyde, for which there was not the least necessity, and for interest on foreign loans and for Parisian bric-a-brac, of which his house was full when he died.

YOUNG MEN HIS TOOLS.

Heureaux remained, as did most of the tyrants of old, the friend of youth, the energy of the young men. Them he sought to corrupt. He made his army and navy of them and paid them in this paper money, which they were to popularize with the brightness of youth. The promising young men of the cities were appointed to sine-cures, with large salaries and nothing to do but make paper money [illegible]. The young man who pushed an audience with the President on some question of personal interest received a [illegible] of the bank [illegible] on his departure, [illegible] a [illegible] bill sticking to his palm [illegible]. Heureaux was either [illegible] of illegally issuing this paper money, or he was buying it up at an enormous discount, so prodigal was he with it. The outstanding paper of record amounts to $4,[illegible]. No one pretends to know whether this is the actual amount or not, and the new government striving to re-establish credit is non-committal on the subject. The government though is taking it up by [illegible] of gold to the [illegible] payable in paper [illegible] on the dollar, but this has only brought the paper up to [illegible] at these sales, and it can still be bought for [illegible] on the dollar privately. The brokers who have resources and who [illegible] at a very low figure [illegible] a general fear that the government will not be able to complete the redemption, or will be forced to abandon it by a discovery of the magnitude of the undertaking. Then the silver coin, with less than [illegible] per cent of silver in it, supposed to be outstanding, is [illegible]. This is [illegible] order, at [illegible] and one-half [illegible] American [illegible], but the current business rate is five to one.

It was a capital offense, not by law, but by practice, to refuse to receive this money at par, to disparage it in any way, or to speak disrespectfully of it. It kept Heureaux busy dodging the [illegible] men and everything [illegible] without [illegible] restrictions had to be undermined by [illegible] salaried spies, pictures of redemption were given from time to time, and the bill for [illegible] a currency that [illegible] the integrity of [illegible], of unbounded resources, rich in minerals and agricultural wealth, retrograded, with less than one-tenth of its fertile soil cultivated. One man alone prospered, and he died—and the government confiscated his wealth.

The genious of Columbus was phenomenal in that it developed and sprung from a people not having the vital energy to recognize it. Like most men of his kind he was in jail or disrepute most of the time. He was imprisoned here in the tower that still stands down by the sea. He had as a successor to conquest of discovery, not a Spaniard, Heureaux, who gives to history, to civilization, to his country nothing of which he can be proud. Such is genius and some of its results.

It was not the ignorant blacks who were the victims of Heureaux's eccentricities, but the prosperous and educated Dominicans. Near the city was a plantation that some foreigner wanted to buy. Heureaux heard of it and interposed, offering to buy it for paper money, intending to sell it for gold. The owner refused to sell for paper, and the next day he was found with a bullet through his heart. The issue of paper money was made as a result of a threat of Heureaux who demanded the business men that they make him a loan of $7,000,000 gold. They demurred to this, and he told them he would force a loan from them. He had his Congress pass a law authorizing the issue of $1,000,000 paper, and this issue became $5,000,000 of record under his manipulation. Another source of personal revenue he found in the defalcations. When he found an official was stealing he took pains to get an idea of the amount. When he thought the opportunity was ripe, he sent for the man and said to him—"I think I will need $50,000 in gold in a day or two and I want you to get it for me." The official took the hint, and the arrangement became a partnership. At each turn the country became more impoverished and the foreign debt greater. What became of the gold no one seems to know, except to a limited extent. A debt of $30,000,000 in gold was created without any [illegible] in the country and with but very few permanent improvements. It was observed that with each new foreign loan less than one-fifth of the gold came into the country. There are those who think Heureaux had immense deposits in French and American banks, and that he intended eventually to sell the island to the United States and retire to some foreign land a many times millionaire. Others express the opinion that he was simply crazy. The truth probably is that he was without judgement, made mad by his unlimited power, and that he became the dupe of every one who pretended to be his friend or who flattered his vanity. Fifty persons may easily be found to whom, in the last year of his rule, he expressed the wish that he might be found dead on the street the next morning. That was not the expression of a man with method in his madness. It rather indicated that he realized that he had ruined his country and that he himself could not hope to escape anywhere with a dollar. And this probably was the case, for while he died worth millions, all tangible property had been seized by the government and foreign creditors are hunting the world over for individual assets. And the thousands thoughtless who lived off his bounty find poverty staring them in the face.

A RASH EXPEDIENT.

Probably one of the rashest of his later expedients to maintain his currency was when the importation of necessities of life became impossible from lack of gold or its equivalent. In the City of Santo Domingo he selected six merchants whom he permitted to import duty free and from whom he took the paper money, paying in gold at 5 per cent premium. This drove out of business all other merchants and cut off custom house receipts. One merchant who imported 500 cans of Copenhagen butter sold it at the current price $4.25, Dominican money. When the draft for it came due it cost him $9.25 per can Dominican money to pay for it. This was in the earlier days of the downfall, and is only one instance of many thousands of the [illegible] of those who had faith in and did not understand the financial policy.

With the assassination came a revulsion of feeling. In Santo Domingo City the young men, a thousand or more gathered in the plaza and made a demonstration. The name "Heureaux," which he was so fond of seeing in public places was effaced, cut from the arches, the streets, the parks, Heureaux Park was razed, the street lamps were demolished [illegible]. The houses of his ministers were stoned, and the balconies were filled with debris. At the houses he called his own, guards were stationed by the hastily organized committee of safety and they were not molested. The Heureaux Vice President, Figaro had resigned against the wishes of the ministers. The next day the ministers made haste to resign, and the revolution was over. A provisional government was announced, an election under the constitution was ordered and Jiminez was elected without opposition.

Down in the river a few hundred yards from the sea, lie two or three war ships Hereaux had built. The third preceded Heureaux on to the rocks a couple of months. That was the one he kept nearly always anchored by the shore near the palace, in anticipation of flight. Its destruction must have seemed a premonition. At his home, where he and the old colored woman, whom alone he would trust, lived, an auction sale of his personal effects goes on daily. No friend is there, no relative. A jostling crowd examines this article and that, and a cold-blooded auctioneer cries the sale. One wonders where a cattle driver of 16, a General at 20, a man who never left his native soil, acquired such an exquisite taste. Here is offered for sale two dozen of the finest French perfume bottles of all sizes and shapes. Then there are some pieces of statuary that cost a hundred or so apiece. Now it is a wine set of cut glass encased in an ebony box, studded with pearl. A box of silk suspenders marked on the bottom $32 per dozen. Next comes a dozen quarts of Cognac, with a label of 1817 sells for $9. On the walls are oil paintings yet to be offered. Immense mirrors adorn the reception room. Fine furniture, including two pianos, is to be put up. There is no end to the bric-a-brac. The cattle driver of 16 unable to read or write, became a President at 37, talking fluently several languages and displaying perfect taste in art, manner and dress, yet never left the island after he became powerful.

The world accorded Heureaux the credit of a good administration, because he maintained order for eighteen years in a country given to revolution. In the light of recent history it is doubtful if that credit will still be given. It is true that he put down eight revolutions and prevented a dozen times as many more, but it was not for the good of his country that he did it. His method of increasing the per capita of his currency by reducing the population will hardly meet the approval of the modern commentator. On the other hand, Jiminez has been received as an ambitious revolutionist. He certainly does not look it. A staid, portly business man of [illegible], with Prince Albert coat, gold eye-glasses et al, a Dominican by birth, but of foreign ancestry, white, cool, dignified, he is not a man given to revolutions. It would be more correct to call him the liberator of his country, for beyond doubt his movements were actuated by the unfortunate condition of affairs Heureaux had created. And his influence has already been felt by the country. American gold is the basis of [illegible] are restored. Political executions have been forbidden, and the people once more breathe freely. There seems to be no reason why the island, more fertile than Cuba, or Puerto Rico, with only one-tenth of its fertile soil under cultivation, should not prosper under a wise business administration. No city in the Western tropics offers the attractions that Santo Domingo does to the tourist.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. The Favor Now Returned

New York, Jan. 4.—The open door principle was the foundation of British policy in China during the protracted negotiations which followed German and Russian acquisition of harbors and territories on the Chinese coast, says the London correspondent of the Tribune. Nothing came of it, and the British Government ended by taking possession of a harbor opposite Port Arthur.

What England was unable to bring about at the time the United States has virtually done, and the British press is slowly awakening to a sense of England's obligations to America. Certainly, if the Americans were under obligations to England for friendly services during the war with Spain the favor has been returned and in a characteristically American way.

MARLBOROUGH A REAL SNOB.

New York, Jan. 4.—London cables describe the outfit which the Duke of Marlborough has prepared to take with him to South Africa, provided his services should be accepted—a contingency now in doubt.

Should he go he would take four horses, four splendid Spanish mules and a specially built Cape cart for going over the rough roads and the veldt. Besides an elaborate kit has been gotten together, every device for comfort in a compact space being utilized.

He will also take four servants, one being specially detailed to look after the baggage.

Healed of Her Heart Pangs!

After doctors had said no cure---Acute heart disease had put Mrs. Fitzpatrick well nigh in the clutch of the "Grim Reaper." But Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart met her at the hospital door, offered her life, she accepted the great healer and to-day is well and strong.

In these days of hurry and bustle, nervous strain, poor digestion, the struggle of the [illegible] for an existence and the everlasting run of the [illegible] man for more money, the heart, the human engine, is [illegible] for double the duty [illegible] originally intended. [illegible] we may pick up any newspaper any day and read of the sudden falling off of this, that and the other person, [illegible] — the cause assigned, heart failure, strain too great and the machinery offered nature to help her carry her load.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is a peerless compound. Thousands of people where cure and sudden death seemed imminent, its wonderful curative powers have been demonstrated, and in most acute forms of heart disease relief has come inside of 30 minutes after the first dose has been taken. Some of the most pronounced symptoms of heart disorder are—Palpitation, shortness of breath, weak and irregular pulse, smothering spells, swelling of the feet and ankles, tenderness and pain in the left side, chilly sensations, uneasiness if sleeping on the left side, fainting spells, hunger and exhaustion. Any one of these symptoms is enough to convince of the existing of heart disease—and any one of them, if neglected, may mean sudden death to the patient.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart not only gives almost instant relief, but in [illegible] stubborn cases it will effect a rapid and permanent cure. It is not an ordinary nostrum. It is a heart specific, leaves no bad after effects or depression. It acts directly on the nerve centres, induces nervous energy, dispels all weakness, and generally tones the system.

Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, of Gananoque, Ont., was a great sufferer from heart disease. Hers was a stubborn case of over five years' standing. She was treated by several eminent physicians and heart specialists without any permanent relief. She became so bad that she went to the hospital, and was in a short while discharged from there as a hopeless incurable; but, to use her own words, "As a last resort, I bought a bottle of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. One dose gave me almost instant relief from a very acute spasm. I felt encouraged, and persisted in its use. It just took three bottles to cure me completely, and I gladly bear my testimony to this wonderful remedy as a life saver."

What it has done for Mrs. Fitzpatrick it can do for any sufferer from heart disease.

Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder relieves cold in the head in ten minutes, and has cured catarrh cases of fifty years' standing.

Dr. Agnew's Ointment will cure blind, bleeding or itching piles in from three to five nights. One application relieves the most irritating skin diseases; 35 cents.

Dr. Agnew's Pills for constipation, sick headache, biliousness and stomach troubles generally. Only 20 cents a vial.

A TORONTO HOTEL TRAGEDY.

A Chicago Man Commits Suicide by Shooting Himself.

Toronto, Jan. 4.—A very peculiar tragedy came to light this morning at the Rossin House. Shortly before dinner on Tuesday last a gentleman of very pronounced Jewish features, and named A. Finsberg, arrived at that hotel, registered as from Chicago, and was assigned to room 143. That was the last seen of him until this morning, when he was found dead on the floor of his bedroom alongside a sofa, a 32-calibre revolver lying beside him, a pool of blood surrounding his head and bullet wounds in his mouth and neck. He had apparently been dead for thirty-six hours or more, and it is believed that he took his life sometime on , Tuesday afternoon or evening. No one heard the shot.

Yesterday a chambermaid endeavored to enter the room to tidy it up, but as it was fastened on the inside she failed. This morning, no sign of life having been noticed in the interval, an investigation was made, and through the key hole the feet of Fineberg could be seen on the floor. A boy was hoisted over the transom and the door opened. There lay the victim, dressed in a suit of new underclothing purchased on Yonge street.

He had apparently stood before the looking-glass as he shot himself. The revolver had five chambers. Two cartridges had been exploded, two bore marks of the hammer and had evidently missed fire and the fifth was intact.

His wordly possessions seem to be few and unimportant. He had $1.26 in cash, no clothes but those he wore, and a brass watch.

From papers in his pockets he appears to be a member of a Chicago hat firm, doing business in Canada as a traveller. He had also a letter written in Hebrew.

The police were notified, Detective Cuddy inspected the situation, and the remains were taken to the city morgue. Corner Johnston will hold an inquest.

The deceased was apparently about 30 years of age, smooth shaven, of medium , height, . with black curley hair.

It turns out that the name of the suicide is Abraham Fineberg and that he is a manufacturer of hats at Chicago.

Nothing came of it, and the British Government ended by taking possession of a harbor opposite Port Arthur.

Ev'ry Month, for January.

The opening article in "Ev'ry Month" for January is upon that ever fascinating subject to women—diamonds; and it takes us to Kimberley, which is now the centre of attention in more ways than one, and tells us the history of the mines and how the diamonds are procured. The account is profusely illustrated with unusual photographs of the unique mining operations. An interesting sketch of the life of the "Private Secretary Girl" follows, giving the details of a professional field which is increasing rapidly and cataloguing the essentials of success. "Scenes from the Plays of the Month" contains illustrations from some of the more striking situations of the new productions. "Travelling Libaries" a unique institution undertaken by several of the more progressive States are described and illustrated, and the great work they are doing outlined. There are three short stories of adventure, love and romance, and the department articles on Fashion, Books, and Interesting People. The music is of the usual popular character, consisting of 12 well printed pages—"Savanero," a Caprice for piano by J. F. Gilder, a most excellent teaching piece as well as a beautiful composition; "Your Mother's Wedding Ring," a touching vocal selection, the words unusually poetic and the melody attractive; "Happy Little Nigs," a March and Two-Step, a lively characteristic theme written with dash and brilliancy by Jacob H. Ellis; and "Molly Malone," a catchy waltz song. EV'RY MONTH, 10 cents. 1260 Broadway, NEW YORK.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mines, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tanateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tanateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing.

Banished for Ten Years.

Paris, Jan. 4.—The High Court, Senate, in secret session to-day, condemned M. Andre Buffet and Paul Deroulede to ten years banishment.

DEATH WAS BLISS.

"Earth Recedes and Heaven Opened Before Me," Said Moody.

New York, Jan. 4.—Dwight L. Moody's last words, according to a Boston despatch, were—

"Earth recedes and heaven opens before me. If this is death there is nothing awful here. It is sweet. This is bliss. Do not call me back. God is calling me. I must go. There is no valley here. It is all beautiful."

These words were taken down by a stenographer, Ben. Wright, of Boston, who had them directly after the death from Mr. Moody's son.

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

Queen's Righted.

London, Jan. 4.—The new royal yacht Victoria and Albert, which listed thirty degrees to port when an attempt was made to unlock her at Pembroke yesterday, her starboard bilge keel becoming jammed and the strain on the vessel being so great that her position was considered critical, was successfully docked this morning after being partially righted with ballast. Her designer, Sir William White, director of naval construction is present.

The Paris Fills Again.

London, Jan. 4.—When water was let into the dry dock at Milford Haven to-day the American line steamer Paris, which is to be taken to Belfast for a thorough overhauling after running ashore near the Manacles May 21 last and being refloated, began to fill, owing to an undiscovered leakage

Fire at Hespeler.

Hespeler, Ont., Jan. 4.—William Zimmerman, a farmer in the outskirts of the town, went up into the loft of his barn with a lighted lantern, which he hung up. The lantern in some manner became loosened and fell through the trap door into the basement, igniting the straw below. The building was totally destroyed, with a quantity of hay and feed. The loss is partially covered by insurance in the Perth Mutual.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

THE DURATION OF LIFE.

One of the questions taken up for newspaper debate every now and then is whether the duration of human life has been or is likely to be prolonged. Much of the discussion turns upon a distinction between the average duration life and the maximum. That civilization is gradually advancing the average age at death there is every reason to believe. Epidemic diseases that formerly swept away large percentages of the population at an early age have been practically exterminated. Improved sanitary measures and more intelligent hygiene have greatly diminished the proportion of deaths in infancy. Wars, though destructive while they last, are much less frequent and of far less duration than formerly. Masses of the people are better fed and better clothed. A vast deal of energy has been concentrated upon the general amelioration of the conditions of life, with the unquestionable result that people are better protected than formerly and have a better chance to live out their natural term of life.

Whether this natural term has been or is likely to be prolonged appreciably is another question. It is still approximately true as it was when the Psalmist wrote—"The days of our age are three score and ten, and though men be so strong that they come to four score years, yet is their strength then but labor and sorrow, so soon passeth it away and we are gone." Life was harder for old folk in those days. A healthy man now should keep his strength to eighty and some may be so strong that they come to ninety years and past. A few reach a hundred, as occasionally has happened as far back as we know, but this is practically the limit of human life. There is no reason to expect that it ever well be prolonged, by elixirs or other foolishness or by scientific means. The effect of our modern improvements is merely to enable a larger number to attain it.

That the average duration of life may be increased without extending the maximum age to which a man may hope to live. The actual extent of this increase may be measured by statistics. Against the general improvement in social and hygienic conditions must be set the wear and tear incident to modern life and the apparently increased liability to diseases which public sanitation does not prevent. Assuming that the human organism, under favorable conditions, will last about a hundred years, the problem is not only to protect it from outside injury but to prevent its wearing out before its time. In this latter respect the helpful influences of modern modes of life is more questionable.

UNREASONABLE ELECTIONS

Lack of interest in the municipal contest just closed is ascribed by some to the fact that the municipal campaign comes at a time when business men are busiest and pleasure seekers have most to attract them. The week before Christmas are the merchants' harvest time. He busies himself all day selling goods to Christmas buyers and he fills in his evenings rearranging his stocks which have been tumbled about during the day by bargain hunters. While the merchant is thus busy the rest of the population is about as busy. The Canadian winter does not usually start untill Christmas time, when winter sports, skating, sleighing, curling, etc., come with a rush. The theatres are open and the church entertainment in its glory. Hence, it is argued, it would be to the advantage of all concerned if the municipal campaign could begin either earlier in the old year or later in the new, either before the Christmas rush or after it. If a departure of the kind indicated could be made there is little doubt it would result in a livelier and more general interest in municipal campaigns and a consequent elevation of the candidates.

COMING BY-ELECTIONS

Of the seven vacant seats in the Dominion, election for all of which will probably be held this month, two were liberal.

There is hardly likely to be more than one change, namely in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, which was represented by a Liberal, Mr. Jamieson, may go Conservative, judging by the fact that two of the three provincial seats for Winnipeg were carried by the Conservatives in the recent Manitoba general elections.

Of the other six vacancies, the Ontario one, namely West Ontario, the late Sir James Edgar's constituency, is a Liberal alive. The other five seats are in Quebec. It is not probable that the Laurier Government has lost any strength in that province, and the Conservatives will do well enough if they retain the only one they held of the five, namely Sherbrooke.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

A committee of prominent citizens in Hamilton has undertaken to raise $10,000 for the members of the second contingent going from that city. There is nothing small about the Ambitious City—except its mountains.

KICKED HIS PHYSICIAN.

"Never Leave His Bed Alive," Said the Doctor — South American Rheumatic Cure Does the Miracle.

Mr. Granville Haight, of Sparta, Ont., says his father, who is a very old man, was very low from a severe attack of rheumatism. His physician assured the family he would never leave his bed alive. A friend took a bottle of South American Rheumatic Cure to him. A few days later upon receiving a visit from the doctor, he ran across the room, and playfully administered a hearty kick. He is now up and as well as ever. Sold by Ormond & Walsh

MILLBROOK.

Batch of Creamy Notes From Peterborough's Southern Suburb.

Having arrived home Wednesday evening after a pleasant but fruitless trip on the bumpers of a snow plow (for want of cash), having been sent on the same ticket as the first Canadian contingent (C.O.D.) on behalf of Mr. Tarte, instead of the expected triumphal return in one of noted coachmen, J. J. Jewison's automobiles, I now, under the instruction of a influential forefather, send you a few of the many locals as it would take a book about four times as large as the directory used at Chicago at the Columbian exposition, which weighed 750 lbs., without the index, to chronicle all the personals during the holidays. I might further state that my trip on the important business as delegate in view to signing the peace protocol with President Kruger, or seizing any vessels with contraband of war on behalf of the U.S.O.R. society of convicts proved of no avail, and I wasn't scared or afraid, but a little timid in facing the white flag which is used so treacherously by the ignorant burgher. I now leave the rest to your superior judgement. "Au Revoir" Wishing the numerous and patriotic readers a prosperous and happy New Year, and to remember the numerous pledges made, and maintain them with unflinching ambition.

A number of our young people drove to Pontypool Monday evening to attend the oyster supper, which was a grand success, and proved worthy of all honorable mention, owing to honor given to the entertainment by the presence of Mr. N. McBrien, S.O.M.O.M.E., who, with unanimous vote, adjourned to a generous friend after the entertainment where all the latest steps in modern etiquette were indulged in till the sunny hours of the morning. The merry party arrived home in time for Johnny to bid an affectionate farewell to one of Toronto's fair belles. Mr. J. C. McMahon, one of our dignified young gentlemen and Miss M. Foster, of Franklin, belle of the party, received the creditable and appreciated applause of their many friends for the successful and satisfactory manner they gave the Parisian cake walk.

The Millbrook Hockey Club went to Port Hope New Year's day, and played a very interestign game with the Ontarios, but were severely defeated owing to the fact that a couple of the best players were absent, and also for the want of practice, having never lifted a stick this season, till the game was called. Better luck next time, boys.

Mr. H. Huston returned home Wednesday, after a pleasant visit with friends at Midland and Lindsay.

Mr. H. Hunter left Wednesday for Kentuck, where a good situation as book-keeper awaits his arrival in the office of one of the leading merchants of the state. Harry will be greatly missed by his many friends, being a great favorite on account of his punctual and obliging disposition. He was always willing to lend a helping hand in promoting a good cause. He also filled numerous public offices, in which he will be greatly missed on account of the trustworthy and satisfactory manner he fulfilled his duties his duties. Although we regret to announce the loss of such a popular young man, we wish him success in his new field of labors.

Mr. S. Hunter, cartoonist, of the Toronto World, and Mrs. Hunter returned home Wednesday after an enjoyable visit under the parental roof.

Miss Gertie Latimer, Peterborough, returned home Wednesday, after a pleasant visit with her friends The Misses Sotherans.

Mrs. Geo. Sotheran again left Wednesday for the Sanitarum, Gravenhurst, where we are pleased to state she has improved in health wonderfullly in this elevated country.

A very pretty event took place at the home of Mr. Wm. Oliver, Anne street, Wednesday evening, being the marriage of his youngest daughter, Miss Phillips, to Mr. M. Brock, of town. The merry couple left on the evening train to spend their honeymoon in Western Ontario.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

> the mournful crocodile
> With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
> —"2 Henry VI.," 1. 3.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This Institution has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day amongst our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five similar calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

[illegible] of our pupil's secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

WORK ON SOUTH AFRICA.

e war in South Africa has caused ral publishers to advertise forthng histories of that country. We several of the prospectus books re us. One is from the pen of a paper correspondent who was in h Africa a short time ago, but is there at all now. Another is a h of Livingston's and Stanley's is, with a few engravings and added. Apparently newspa er ers, and paste and scissors are reon to make up nearly all such coming books on South Africa. we are glad to know that South a, with the added interest of the is going to be the subject of one class book by the best known ors of the present day, and that name is now being run through lightning speed, but has been in ration for several years. John ke Ridpath, L.L.D., author of lopaedia of Universal History," and Times of Gladstone," "Hisof the World," etc., is undoubtedly est American historian living, and equal of any historian of any He is assisted by Edward S. Ell.A., author of the Standard Hisof the United States, a work that made Mr. Ellis a world wide repun. A considerable part had aly been written when hostilities menced, and a great number of graphs and drawings obtained official sources were easy of war became a certainty, arrangewere made for direct corresponas to the progress of events. The will excell all others as a record e war, and be incomparable in respects. It will be profusely handsomely illustrated. There be about 150 full page, half tone wings, executed in a style superto that of the largest American azines, and certainly in striking beautiful contrast to the illustrain the other prospectuses that we seen. These will comprise scenes uth Africa, and sketches of the battles—many of which have sent from South Africa direct to publishers—life like portraits of Roberts, Lord Kitchener, Col. Gen. Joubert, Paul Kruger and prominent commanders of the sh and Boer forces. Of special inwill be the section devoted to Canadian contingent which will from the pen of Mr. J. A. Cooper, aging editor of the Canadian Mage and one of the ablest writers in Dominion. There will be twenty page illustrations of the first Can an contingent, and equal justice be done the second contingent in course of organization. A comison of the prospectus of this by the side of several others be us, shows at a glance its great eriority in paper, printing, engravand binding, and yet the price is higher than the others. The work eing published jointly by two of largest and wealthiest publishing in the United States, and a adian edition is being issued by World Publishing Company, of lph, Canada; a firm that publishes y the best books, a firm that has orted millions of books to foreign ntries, that has sent five hundred n to Australia, and that has had branch house in South Africa for the nineteen years, which gives it an advantage over any rival blisher in securing photographs and terial, an article from its represenive being a special feature.

The [illegible] contained in the work are best we have yet seen of South ica. Surely a fortune awaits the blishing firm and a rich harvest for canvassers on such a book and at such price. The call for agents by The rld Publishing Company, of Guelph t., for this great work will be found another column.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for appreciation, Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young gro to a Walnut street haberdasher one y last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill at town of St. Joe. Show me the hotest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start th. His overcoat was cream colored, [illegible] with pearl buttons the size of the small butter plates still in use in estaurants. His trousers were green and ded in yellow shoes with brown [illegible] tops. His hat was light blue, modeled brown; his gloves were red and his [illegible] heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger talk to me Ah ome from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah up to St. Joe to work, and the coons [illegible] at me and tell me Ah ain't [illegible] City, because such clothes is [illegible], and Ah just save up [illegible] money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill [illegible] town. Now [illegible] I want is some up[illegible] clothes and socks and [illegible] and things [illegible] the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, [illegible] with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes h want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe ke that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with [illegible] stripes, some of baby blue with pink tripes and others of green with blue, lack and red stripes. He bought neckarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included some colors and pale pink shirts, [illegible] at 50 cents each, but with $65 of [illegible] with [illegible] on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've caused [illegible] When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back [illegible] such wahm clothes [illegible] they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

THE POULTRY YARD.

[illegible] fowls are small bodied birds, and it will not pay to raise them for their flesh.

Do not hatch [illegible] too early. Small [illegible] Hatching in August will give the best results.

Lack of shade in hot weather and too much exposure to the sun are often [illegible] causes of disease.

Clean earth is a [illegible] disinfectant and purifier. As [illegible] it is dry it can [illegible] be used to [illegible].

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and easy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practised hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a congenial lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauzy undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a new one [illegible] till the other fellow [illegible] the [illegible]. There was nothing to it but him [illegible] the very minute that we squared [illegible] I could see [illegible] he handled himself that the boxing [illegible] I was like six lead nickels in company with him. He just fooled with me [illegible]—tapped me here and there [illegible] adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my darnedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up [illegible] saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I wasn't a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the corner of the [illegible] and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing act, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my [illegible] [illegible], they let up on the [illegible]. But my pugilistic ambition waned absolutely from that night."

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. V. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Fakeer was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder, "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Fakeer, and he turned to the [illegible] "[illegible]

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial looking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourners.

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

Sultan is Terrified.

Constantinople, Jan. 2.—The Sultan is terrified at the increasing Mahommedan discontent and has decided to convoke a special Grand Council to devise measures to render his regime less unpopular.

Restored to Liberty.

Madrid, Jan. 4.—The Spanish Consul at Manila telegraphs to the Foreign Office that the steamer Uranus, from Panay, has arrived there, having on board the Bishop of Vegas, 117 priests five officers and 115 civilians who had been restored to liberty. The consul adds that Aguinaldo has promulgated a decree ordering the liberation of all Spanish prisoners without distinction. The consul distrusts Aguinaldo's motives on account of the attitude of the Filipino chiefs, who he believes place difficulties in the way of the liberation of the prisoners.

Incidentally it may be said the reason why many cannot carry out their New Year resolutions is because they take too big a load.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS HAVE LEFT DOUGLAS.

They Return to Belmont, Bringing Away All the Loyal Residents.

ARE CONGRATULATED BY GENERAL BULLER.

Colonel Pilcher Was Only on a Raiding Expedition, and it Was Considered Inadvisable to Keep Possession of the Town.

Belmont, Cape Colony, Wednesday, Jan 3.—Colonel Pilcher, it is officially announced, being only on a raiding expedition, and for military reasons being unable to occupy Douglas permanently, has evacuated the town, bringing off all the loyalists. He has now returned safely to close proximity to Belmont. When he announced the necessity of evacuating the place the inhabitants of Douglas declared their lives wer enot worth five minutes' purchase after the troops left. Colonel Pilcher therefore invited them to accompany him to Belmont. The preparations were speedily completed, but the vehicles of the town were totally inadequate to convey the refugees, so the troops gave up the transport wagons to the women and children. The Toronto company acted as an estcourt of the refugees, carried babies for the women, and kept everybody lively by singing as they marched pluckily along in spite of sore feet occasioned by the heavy sand. The force received General Buller's congratulations on the success of the expedition with great satisfaction.

HUTTON PRAISES THE TROOPS.

Ottawa, Jan. 4.—General Hutton was highly pleased with the news of the success of the Canadian company which took part under Colonel Pilcher in the action at Sunnyside. Seated in his office with a war map plentifully besprinkled with British and Boer flags hanging on the wall beside him, the general said that the Canadians had acted only as he had expected. "The cable says," General Hutton continued, "that the force was mounted, but what was probably meant was that the Queenslanders, the Toronto company and the 200 Cornwall Light Infantry were carried from Belmont to the scent of the action. When I said goodbye to the regiment at Quebec I told them that they had a lot to learn in the way of discipline and drill, and they have evidently read their lesson well. Not a word can be said against the Canadians as men, but the best of them need good officers. Capt. Barker, of the Toronto company, is one of the most reliable company commanders we have. I believe that the other companies, when the time comes, will do as well. They may not come out unscathed, but they must have known when they heard the news of their arrival at Cape Town that they were goint into a serious business."

THE ENGLISH PRESS.

London, Jan. 4.—The success of the colonials at Sunnyside elicits general warm congratulations. The Times says—"The mother country will share with the Canadians and Australians the pride and gratification they must feel at the fine quality displayed by their troops in this dashing little engafgmeent. The conduct of both contingents appears to have been most soldierly. It is an earnest, we doubt not, of what the behavior of all our colonial forces will be in many a hard fought field under the old flag."

The London Daily News says—"The colonials did not go into this was as on a picnic or parade. They went prepared and hoping to fight, and, if need be, to die side by side with other soldiers of the Queen. Their only complaint hitherto has been that they have not had to bear the brunt of the battle. In this affair, however, the honors of the day were all with the colonial troops, and the empire has to thank them for a smart piece of work well carried out."

MARLBOROUGH A REAL SNOB.

New York, Jan. 4.—London cables describes the outfit which the Duke of Marlborough has prepared to take with him to South Africa, provided his services should be accepted—a contingency now in doubt.

Should he go he would take four horses, four splendid Spanish mules and a specially built Cape cart for going over the rough roads and the veldt. Besides an elaborate kit has been gotten together, every device for comfort in a compact space being utilized.

He will also take four servants, one being specially detailed to look after the baggage.

These exceptional arrangements are much discussed in society. It is a question whether the War Office would allow the Duke to transport all his belongings.

THE QUEEN IS APPRECIATIVE.

London, Jan. 4.—At the enrolling of the London volunteers at the Guild Hal this morning, the Lord Mayor, Mr. A. J. Newton, read an extract from a letter written by the Queen's private secretary, Sir Arthur Bigg, saying—"I have to assure you how much the Queen values the corps which has been so patriotically raised by the city of London for service in South Africa."

The enrollment of the second contingent of London Imperial volunteers was the occasion for a scent of popular interest and enthusiasm. The approaches to the Guild Hall were thronged with representatives of all classes, everybody cheering and the bands playing popular music. The scene at the Guild Hall was highly picturesque and impressive. It opened with a civic procession of the Lord Mayor, sheriffs and aldermen in their robes of office, headed by the sword and mace-bearers. The scarlet, grey and the green uniforms of the various battalions filled the chamber with varigated colors. The contingents comprised the honorable artillery company and detachments from the other volunteer regiments. After a speech from the Lord Mayor, at the conclusion of which he read the Queen's message, each detachment was sworn in separately, every man "kissing the Book" and receiving the Queen's shilling from the hands of the Lord Mayor.

ATTACK BY THE TIMES.

London, Jan. 4.—The Times in its leading editorial to-day refers at some length to the fact that the fullest details of the successes of Majo-General French and Colonel Pilcher have been cabled home, but only the merest mention made of the greater events of the campaign. Such a course, the Times complains, is not inconsistent with the dignity of the empire. The excuse offered by the military people that the Boers should be kept in ignorance of the British situation is belied by the fact that the Boers seem always to know rather more about the inside of British facts than the British generals do. Another cause for complaint is found in the action of the authorities of Modder River, who have shown another characteristic example of want of good sense and good feeling by refusing to allow the soldiers at the front to send their letters home without a stamp, except under the penalty of compelling their poor relatives to pay double postage.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had secured his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover.
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North

A Serious Charge.

Jeremiah Fitzgerald, a farmer of Otonabee, was arrested last night by police constable Adams, charged with defrauding his creditors. Efforts were made by Mr. Dave Conroy to secure bail, but magistrate Dumble refued to grant it. The case will be called this morning.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then [illegible] at Abydos open so wide a vista of possibilities that we are scarcely surprised to hear that the tombs of the gods of Egypt have been actually found, but before this startling discovery was made Mr. Amelineau stirred up the world's Egyptologists by the announcement that he had found the names of sixteen royal personages hitherto unknown. He knew that they were royal, for their names were written in a peculiar device, and it was just as if the sculptors had engraved King So and So. It is from this design that the word Pharaoh is derived or rather the device signifies Pharoh from the Egyptian Per-aa, "Great House," that is the palace or court.

The tombs are primitively constructed, some of the walls being so irregular that it is to be doubted whether the plumb line was then known. But nevertheless, the interiors of the tombs were most interesting. Some of them were so short that it was evident that no human body could have been laid here at full length, and the explanation was forthcoming when at last in a tomb which no Vandal Arab had reached a body was found all curled up and surrounded with earthenware pots containing food, ointments, etc. Of course there was no thought then of embalming, and it was entirely due to the dryness of the soil that the body had been preserved at all. In the tomb of the Pharaoh whose name was indicated by a serpent it was found that there were a number of adjoining chambers, probably intended for the bodies of his wives or of his prominent court officials. The tomb of one of these, by name Nebnofer, "good master," a royal scribe was among those found. The floor of this tomb was made of heavy sycamore planks, which may well stand as the oldest planks in the world, being some 6,000 and odd years old, as well as can be estimated. Instead of having been nailed down to cross pieces, they were simply tied together by bands of brass which were still found in place. The mortar, too was found to have been mixed with fibres of palm leaves, much as hair is now used to mix with plaster, proving that this secret was known a few thousand years ago.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Elison's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye!
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrances.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (I, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

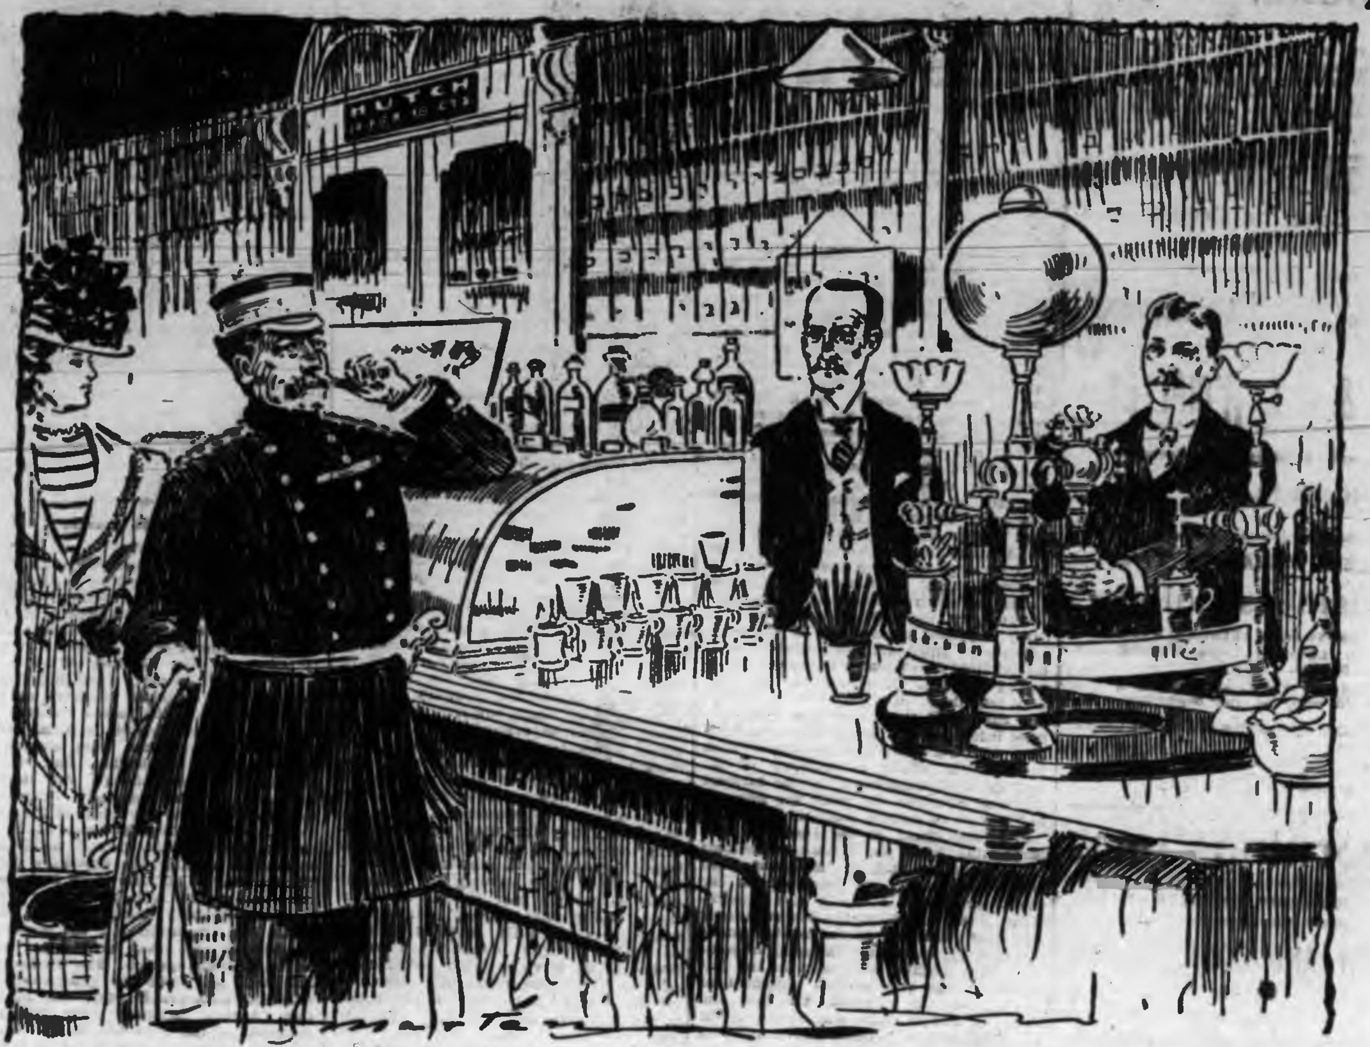
HUTCH AT NEIL C. LOVE & CO.,



This, the Pioneer Drug Store of Toronto, was established in 1840 and has been managed most successfully and shrewdly for the past seven years by W. Latimer, Esq. Mr. Latimer was one of the first drug men to see that Hutch was a sterling treatment for dyspepsia—the best in fact—and with his usual business perspicacity immediately laid in a large order. Mr. Latimer says that Hutch has the most extensive use of any preparation he had ever before handled. "I recommend Hutch for dyspepsia and stomach trouble every time," were Mr. Latimer's words, "and I firmly believe it to be efficacious. That it is doing good can best be judged by the testimonials received."

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to hit his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked in and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much these 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man [illegible]. "We've heard you've been prospering fine sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be pretty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

Restored to Liberty.

Madrid, Jan. 4.—The Spanish Consul at Manila telegraphs to the Foreign Office that the steamer Uranus, from Panay, has arrived there, having on board the Bishop of Vegas, 117 priests five officers and 115 civilians who had been restored to liberty. The consul adds that Aguinaldo has promulgated a decree ordering the liberation of all Spanish prisoners without distinction. The consul distrusts Aguinaldo's motives on account of the attitude of the Filipino chiefs, who he believes place difficulties in the way of the liberation of the prisoners.

Banished for Ten Years.

Paris, Jan. 4.—The High Court, Senate, in secret session to-day, condemned M. Andre Buffet and Paul Deroulede to ten years banishment.

The prisoners were accused of conspiring to overthrow the republic. M. Buffet is the official representative of the Duke of Orleans, the pretender to the throne and Deroulede is a journalistic agitator. The trial of the conspirators proved the republic to be much stronger than had been thought

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up.

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for Talking Machines and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

Sham Rock

Is a name given by some to our granolithic pavements. Some shoes have sham soles, which when wet are taken off very easily by the sham rock, and thus the sham sole is lost. To avoid the latter buy your shoes from Kidd—the price is no more, but less, and trading stamps given as well.

Our Eligible Bachelors.

The second installment of Peterborough's eligible bachelors has been crowded out of this issue. It will appear next Saturday.

Man Wanted.

Who will take the contract at $300 per year for the delivery of the Morning Times in town. Delivery must be made between 6 and 8 o'clock a.m., in winter, and 5 and 7 in summer. This is a good job for a man with two or more boys of his own who are going to school. Apply at Times Bookstore.

Half a Century.

The Orillia News-Letter speaks of Dr. Slaven of that town returning from the Board of Separate School Trustees on which he served for thirty years. He was chairman of the Board for more than twenty years. Mr. James Stevenson of Peterborough, will shortly complete a half century of continuous service on the Board of Education. He is regarded as the father of the Peterborough schools.

The Stanley Piano Co.

At the annual meeting of the share holders of the Stanley Piano Company held the other day it was decided to construct a large addition to the factory here. The new building, we understand, is to be 40x60 feet, three storeys high. In addition to this the north wing is to be raised to the full height of the main building. It is evident from this that things are booming with this popular company.

The Ratepayers Want Him.

The loss to the ratepayers of the town through the retirement of Mr. McWilliams from the Council is beginning to be realized. There is no doubt that a very large number of those who voted for Mr. Kendry in the late mayoralty election, did so for political reasons. The Conservative party felt that they could not afford to have their candidate beaten, and consequently put up the fight of its life. Scores of those are to be found who are anxious to see Mr. McWilliams back in the Council, and the Times understands that a movement will likely be made to provide a seat for him. Mr. McWilliams is familiar with the financial condition and his presence in the Council, in view of the pavement troubles, is urgent. We therefore hope that some means will be found to provide a seat for Mr. McWilliams, and that he may be induced to take it.

THE POULTRY SHOW.

A Unique Exhibition of Killing and Dressing Poultry to be Given.

The Poultry Association exhibition, which opens in Peterborough on Tuesday next, promises to be a huge success. One of the most interesting features of the show will be the exhibition of killing and dressing. Of the exhibition of this recently given at the Fat Stock Show at London, Ont., the journal "Farming" says—

"One of the many interesting features of the recent Fat Stock Show in London, was the meeting of Institute delegates and farmers held on Friday morning the pavilion. The audience was al arge one. A number of birds were placed in coops on the platform and were killed by dislocation of the neck, to show you how properly so to do. The birds were plucked and then taken in hand by Mrs. Gilbert, of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, an expert in preparing poultry for the market. Mrs. Gilbert first dressed a number of chickens after the manner of the English farmer as he sells them on the market or to his private customers, and also dressed several as the English poulterer does to sell to his customers. In the latter case the birds were drawn and trussed and made ready for the oven. Mrs. Gilbert then explained how it was done. The object lesson was much appreciated by the audience, who thought it a great advantage in the right direction. While the birds were being prepared, addresses for the proper breeds of fowl for eggs and flesh were delivered by Messrs. Gilbert, of Ottawa Experimental Farm, and Graham, of the O.A.C., Guelph Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Yuill, of Carleton Place, Ont., had also a number of chickens, which were killed and plucked in the manner required for shipment to the Old Country. Prof. Geo. C. Creelman, the new Superintendent of Farmers' Institutes, had charge of the proceedings and was most interested and delighted at the practical demonstration and addresses. Such work as the above is certainly of the very greatest importance to the farmers and will doubtless be made an interesting feature of future Institute work."

Prof. Robertson, of the Dominion Experimental Farm, has written to the local officers stating that Mr. and Mrs. Yuill will bring poultry to Peterborough for the Ontario show and will give illustrations in the use of the English cramming machine, which is used and has been most successfully used in the fattening of poultry. This machine was used in the fattening of the experimental shipment of poultry sent to England. The use and value of this machine was shown at the fat stock show at London, Ont., two weeks ago and aroused much interest. In fact, it was the great drawing feature of the show.

A Dead Bargain.

A five volume set of the great work, "The Canadian Album; Men of Canada," bound in Seal Grain Leather, and containing 500 pages in each volume, sizes 8½ by 10½. The set will make a beautiful Xmas present. It deals with religion, patriotism, business, law, medicine, education and agriculture, containing portraits of some of Canada's chief business men, &c. We invite inspection. The set will be sold for fifteen dollars, but is worth twice what we ask for it. Times Bookstore.

Watering the Milk.

Yesterday afternoon five case came before County Police Magistrate Edminson, of delivering deteriorated milk to cheese factories. Three Ennismore farmers are charged with delivering deteriorated milk to the Myrtle cheese factory in August last. Two residents of Douro are charged with committing a like offence in September at the Maple Leaf factory. The fine under a conviction of such an offence is not exceeding $50 and not less than $5

Separate School Board.

The inaugural meeting of the Separate School Board was held Thursday evening, those present being, First ward, Messrs. Joseph Goselin and R. Sheehy; Second ward, J. L. O'Brien and T. B. McGrath; Third ward, Dr. Moher and J. Kylie; Fourth ward, M. H. Quinlan and J. Hickey. The only ward in which there was an election was No. 2, in which Mr. T. B. McGrath was elected over Mr. J. Bogue. Mr. M. H. Quin'an was re-elected chairman of the Board.

Our Northern Lakes.

Mr. H. R. Charlton, advertising agent of the Grand Trunk Railway, was in town on Thursday arranging with the steamboat owners for next season's business. The Grand Trunk proposes to advertise Kawaitha lakes extensively in the States next season.

Admitted to Bail.

Mr. Jeremiah Fitzgerald, of Otonabee, who was arrested on Thursday night, charged with defrauding his creditors, appeared at the police court yesterday. He was remanded until Tuesday, being admitted to bail The charge against him was laid by his sister, who is ill in St. Joseph's Hospital, and who claims to be one of the victims. Dave Conroy and Wm. Leahy are the bondsmen.

The Duty of the Hour.

To the Editor of Morning Times.

Dear sir,—I endorse everything said by "Loyalty" in your yesterday's issue, but he does not go far enough. It is a reflection upon us as Canadians to send the best of our brave young men to bear the brunt of battle in order that we might enjoy that peace and liberty which British supremacy alone ensures, and after presenting each volunteer with the paltry sum of $25, to sit with folded arms in the belief that we have done our bounden duty. There should not be a stone left unturned until every one of their lives is insured for at least $1,000, and after the return of those who survive the deadly war, each one should have settled upon him an annuity for life, according to his deserts and requirements, so that not one of them need want for the necessaries of life after so vital a service I see by the press that the rich men of Britain are contributing liberally to the various funds for its soldiery, giving thousands of pounds sterling individually, according to their means and the same laudable desire is manifest in some parts of our Dominion, but what have the rich men of Peterborough done towards the cause? Let a subscription list be opened by tohse who are able to contribute $1,000 and upwards, and when that is exhausted let a second one be opened for those who are able to contribute $100 and upwards; and lastly let a third one be opened for those less favored with this world's goods for any sum however small. I will guarantee that if our rich men do their duty, that the poorer ones will do theirs, as they always have done in the past. We must not expect to carry on a costly war for life and liberty without the country contributes its millions towards it. Let some system be organized at once by those in authority, and their efforts cannot fail to be crowded with success, and he that does not do his duty let him be branded as a traitor, with all the consequences. Let us cheerfully pay for that priceless liberty secured to us by that gallant band of young men who have gone to the front. They sprang to arms at their country's call in the hour of need, and do not belong to that element who are only soldiers in time of peace at the country's expense. Some of us have a faint recollection of the Northwest rebellion, when one of those soldiers in time of peace had a weak heart and another who had just married a wife, but the third that had bought an ox has escaped our memory.

A PATRIOT,

Disloyalty at Home.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I was much pleased to read a few days ago an account of a set-to between a certain local money-lender and a loyal citizen over the war. The Times deserves credit for bringing this matter to the knowledge of the people, so that the latter may know where to find disloyalty, of which I am sorry to say we have a little of in Peterborough. The party referred to, spoke in insulting terms of the Queen—not the first time either.

The time has arrived when such men should not be allowed to live in this country. They should be compelled to go and join their Fenian brethern across the line.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am

Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, following the custom of his predecessor in the livery business, the late Tobias Fitzgerald, gave the children of the Barnardo Home a sleigh drive yesterday afternoon.

Honest Criticisms offer new ways of using Grape-Nuts

"The cook places three heaping teaspoons of Grape-Nuts in a saucer for each guest and pours over the food some hot milk or hot water and allows it to stand ten minutes; then serve with rich cream and sugar.

I have served the Grape-Nuts food in this way at my table to numerous friends, some of whom do not care for it dry. They are enthusiastic about it served hot, and it is so great a favorite with us that I have been tempted to write, suggesting that you add the above recipe to your package." F. W. Leavitt, Minneapolis, Minn. (Mr. Leavitt is superintendent of the famous Housekeeper Magazine.)

There are many ways of serving Grape-Nuts and making from them tempting and delicious dishes. The variety of tastes can be suited, and under all circumstances it may be remembered that the food is first perfectly and completely cooked at the factory and gives the highest form of nourishment to the human body, for it is directly used by the system to rebuild the brain and nerve centers.

Ten days trial by any thoughtful person, will prove the assertion.

Sad Death in Lakefield.

It is our painful duty to record the death of Mr. Wm. F. Wilson, of Lakefield, which took place on Wednesday evening, after a lingering illness, aged 21 years. The deceased young man was well known in the county. He was a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, attending the Norwood Model school and afterwards taught school in the county, holding the position of principal of the public school at Bridgenorth last year. He was also in the bicycle business, being a member of the firm of Benson & Wilson who kept a store on George street. Last fall the deceased contracted an affection of the lungs and he went to the Gravenhurst Sanatarium for treatment, and there considerable improvement was made in his health. He came home at Christmas to spend the holidays, and all went well until Sunday evening, when he had a severe hemorage from the lungs. From that time he kept gradually sinking until he breathed his last on Wednesday evening. Deceased was a young man with bright prospects and had a large circle fo friends, who will sincerely mourn his death. He was married a little over five months ago to Miss Scringer, of Lakefield, and his widow has the heart felt sympathy of the whole community in her sad and sudden loss.

New English Church.

The new English church at Young's Point was formally opened on Thursday last, Venerable Archdeacon of Peterborough officiating at the opening ceremonies. The English church people of Young's Point are very proud of their new church and have every reason to be. It is not yet quite finished. When it is completed and properly furnished it will certainly be a model country church. The incumbent of the parish, the Rev. W. Creswick, under whose personal direction the building has been erected, is indebted to J. E. Belcher, Esq., C. E., architect, of Peterborough, for the design and for the necessary instruction in the work and to the people of Peterborough and to the congregation of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, for very much needed help in raising the necessary funds. The building is of lime stone from Clear Lake and granite from the quarry of Mr. W. Jones in Stony Lake, with the quoins, jambs and the arches of the doors and windows of free stone given by a member of the congregation. The window sills and steps are from the quarries of the Lakefield Lithograph Stone Co., in Deer Bay. A very pleasing effect has been produced in the windows by the use of rolled Cathedral glass supplied by Messrs. McCausland & Son, Toronto. An oak floor will be laid in the chancel, the material being the gift of Mr. W. McGregor, and to the furnishings of the church will be added a handsome font now being made in Peterborough, the gift of the mission band of St. John's church. The masonry work was done by Mr. P. Taylor, of Lakefield, and the carpenters are Messrs. J. Griffin and R. Crawford, of Lakefield.

Wedding Bells.

The marriage of Mr. Thomas Woods, of Emily, and Miss Matilda E. Sedgwick, of Otonabee, took place at the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. W. Fleeton Sedgwick, of Otonabee, on Wednesday, January 3rd. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. E. Moore, Ph.B., of the Mark street Methodist church. The bride was becomingly attired and looked charming. She will be greatly missed in the Bethel river road neighborhood, she having been for years one of the most active workers in the Methodist church. After a sumptuous wedding supper the happy pair left for their new home, enjoying the best wishes of a host of friends.

The entertainment under the auspices of the mission band, held in the lecture room of St. Paul's church last night, was a decided success. The programme was an excellent one, and the attendance was good. Miss Jean Blewitt was the attraction.

The Catholic Association Minstrels gave a second entertainment last night to an appreciative audience. The various parts were well sustained.

Greatest Events of 19th Century.

The first passenger railway train, the laying of the first submarine cable the opening of the Suez Canal—what three greater era-inaugurating events during the last hundred years can be found? In them lies the secret of much of the spirit of the nineteenth century. When Stevenson invented a locomotive for transporting coal through the Newcastle mines, he may have dreamed of coming passenger trains, but if so, he stood alone. He labored from 1814 to 1825 to perfect his locomotive, and from the inception of the Stockton-Darlington Railroad, at the latter date, does the history of the steam horse of the nineteenth century begin.

If an Englishman was the one to develop the transportation of the age, it was an American who was to join the furthest ends of the earth by the electric flash. The artist Morse had to invent the alphabet by which telegraphy became possible on the instrument devised by him, and the American, Cyrus W. Field, forced through the idea of the submarine cable against all sneers and opposition. The first sections of the cable to be laid were those at Newfoundland and at Valentia Ireland, in 1857, but it was nine years more before the work was completed.

The greatest engineering feat of the century was the cutting of the Suez Canal. Ferdinand de Lessops, a Frenchman was the moving spirit here. In 1854 he began the agitation, continuing it until 1859, when he began the work, which was finished in 1869, when the great canal was opened with becoming ceremonies. What the Suez Canal means for the world has been brought home to the United States most strikingly since the beginning of the war in the Philippines.

No Mixed Marriages in Holy Year.

His Grace Mgr. O'Connor, Archbishop of Toronto, has just made a most important decision regarding a recent decree from the Pope just published in the United States and which, among other matters prohibits the celeration of marriages between Catholics and Protestants during the holy year 1900 except by direct dispensation from the Pope. There has been some uncertainty as to whether the decree applied to Canada or not, but Archbishop O'Connor has decided that members of the Catholic Church within his jurisdiction will have to be bound by it, and other Canadian archbishops will probably soon make similar announcements. This means that during 1900 no Catholic in Canada will be allowed to marry a Protestant and remain a member of the Catholic Church unless a special dispensation is obtained from the Pope. For seventy-five years such marriages have been permitted under dispensation from the diocesan bishops, but the new decree will very greatly increase the difficulty of such unions.

The Wrong Medicine.

Stratford, Jan. 5.—Mrs. John A. Coppin, of Mitchell, was accidentally poisoned last night. For some time past she has been suffering from inflamation and other diseases. Through carelessness the nurse gave her liniment to drink instead of the proper medicine. The doctor was summoned, and he pronounced her life in danger. After working with her for several hours he declared her to be out of danger.

Mrs. Coppin is the daughter-in-law of License Inspector Coppin, one of the best known men in Perth county.

Canadian Forger Arrested.

Detroit, Jan. 4.—Robert J. Johnston a young Canadian from Toronto, who placed under arrest for passing forged cheques. Johnston came here about a month ago and took rooms at the St. Clair. He was a swell dresser and apparently had abundance of money. A few days ago he induced Ed. Henn, the proprietor of a Monroe avenue saloon to cash a cheque for $60 on the Home savings bank, which proved to be worthless. A similar complaint reached the police from a merchant on Larned street west, who lost $20 in a like transaction. Since his arrest the police have also received information that Johnston is wanted at Dunnville and Simcoe for passing forged cheques. At Dunnville he is said to have obtained $900 and at Simcoe $100 by his forgeries. Toronto detectives are at a loss to place the man. They have no man by that name on their books.

"I sent all available troops yesterday to make a demonstration at Colenso The trenches were all occupied by the enemy."

KURUMAN CAPTURED.

Pretoria, Jan. 4. via Lorenzo Marques Field cornet Visser, under date of Jan. 2, reports as follows from Kuruman, British Bechunanaland:

"I commenced a bombardment of Kuruman yesterday morning, aiming at the police barracks. The fight lasted until six in the evening when the garrison surrendered issuing from the forts and yielding up their arms..

"We took 120 prisoners, including Capt Bates and Capt. Dennison, Mr. Hillard, the magistrate, and eight other officers, we also captured 70 natives, together with a number of rifles and revolvers and a quantity of ammunition."

RETREAT FROM DORDREICHT.

Lorenzo Marquez, Jan. 4.

A despatch from the Boer headquarters near Dordreicht says: — "The British have been compelled to retreat from Dordreicht. Fighting continues around Colesburg, where the British occupying some of the outside kopjes. Bullets are dropping inside the town.

"Fifteen British were wounded. They are being well attended by us with the help of Dr. Bearne, an English physician.

"The horses, oxen, mealics and flour taken from the prisoners have been sent to Pretoria by way of Vryburg."

A LITTLE INCIDENT.

London, Jan. 7.

A delightful little incident is reprotted in one of the latest Cape Town papers. It occurred ; when the town was "clean mad with excitement" over the advent of the Canadian contingent:—"A blue jacket brushed up against two Australian troopers and a Canadian. As he passed he patted them gently and lovingly on the shoulder.

"'Good boys,' he said with an indescribably beanignant smile, 'Good boys you're all right. You're the best sort. Good luck to you.'"

"The colonists smiled their acknowledgements and the quartette parted,—never probably to meet again."

CANADIANS AGAIN EMPLOYED

London, Jan. 6.—Advices from Belmont say that two companies of Canadians, despatched to cover the return of Col. Pilcher's column, occupied a pass six miles out to prevent any attempt of the Boers to cut off the force.

PLUMER TO THE RESCUE.

London, Jan. 6.—Col. Baden-Powells defeat in the sortie at Mafeking raises serious doubts of his ability to hold out much longer. To-day, however, comes a report that Col. Plumer reached Mochudi from Fort Tuli about Jan. 1 with the Rhodesian relief force. As Col. Plumer had at his disposal about 2,000 men, he should, according to this be able to raise the seige of Mafeking.

GENERAL ENGAGEMENT.

London, Jan. 6.—The inconclusive fighting around Colesberg was renewed this morning, the British artillery opening to the westward of the town. The despatches indicate that the attack is developing into a general engagement.

THE GENERAL RELEASED.

Berlin, Jan. 6.—A despatch received here from Aden, the British fortified port at the southern entrance of the Red Sea, say the authorities of that place have renounced all further search of the Imperial German mail steamer General, detained there under suspicion of having contraband of war on board. The despatch adds that the steamer will resume her voyage in a few days.

SHE WAS MURDERED FOR A PALTRY PURSE.

A Toronto Girl Dragged Into a Yard and Sandbagged Into Unconsciousness.

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—Another murder, of a most dastardly character, took place last night in this city, the victim being an estimable young lady named Miss Mabel Ferguson, whose home was at 28 First avenue, and who was bookkeeper at the J. D. Nasmith Company's establishment at the corner of Jarvis and Adelaide-sts.

Unfortunately the circumstances of the case do not offer much hope for the apprehension of the murderer, whose hideous character may be easily inferred from the fact that for a small pittance of money he took a human life.

It appears that about 6.30 last night Miss Ferguson was passing the jail gates on Gerrard street east on her way home from work, when a strange man sprang upo her, dragged her into the yard sandbagged her into unconsciousness, robbed her of her purse and then ranaway.

Her screams attracted the attention of Miss Tolcharod, of 753 Gerrard street east, who was passing at the time, and who ran to Dr. Sneath's drug store on Broadway avenue, and gave the alarm. Mrs. Sneath, Miss Tolchard and others ran back to the scent and saw the murderer escaping, and they found his victim lying senseless on the ground. She was carried to Dr. Sneath's andw as removed afterwards to her home, where she died at 3.15 o'clock this morning. Her face was badly bruised and her head cut.

Detective Forrest and Inspector Armstrong very promptly went to work on the case, but so fart hey have secured very little ground upon which to operate. They found a comb and a muff chain, which had been torn from Miss Ferguson.

Coroner Greig has issued a warrant for an inquest.

BULLER BOMBARDS BOERS.

London, Jan. 6. Though nothing definite is permitted to pass the censor sufficient transpires to confirm the belief that an important movement on the Tugela river is imminent. The continual bombardment kept up on the Boer entrenchments and the numerous reconnaissances are apparently connected with a well-defined purpose. There are some indications that the British plan of attack includes an important movement via Weenen.

FRENCH SQUADRON FOR SAN DOMINCO.

Will Enforce Claim for Indemnity for the Assassination of French Subjects.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—The French Government has cabled the commandant of the naval squadron in the Atlantic to proceed immediately to San Domingo.

In accordance with the treaty concluded in 1898 between President Heureaux and the French Minister to Hayti, the Government of San Domingo agreed to turn over to the French consul a monthly indemnity in reparation for services rendered and damages sustained by families of French citizens who had been assassinated. In default of payment, the treaty stipulated that action might be taken against the Improvement Company having the concession to collect the revenues of the Island. Since the assassination of President Heureaux the indemnity has been withheld but on account of the disturbances following his death, France made no immediate demand for payment. As more than six months have passed without action, and San Domingo showing bad faith in the execution of the obligation, the French consul received an order to place an embargo on the revenues of the Improveent Company.

The execution of this order provoked disturbances, and serious insults have been offered to France and the Consulate. The French Government cabled to the commander of the French Atlantic squadron to proceed immediately to San Domingo.

COLONEL VINCENT SAILS.

London, Jan. 6.—A despatch from Cape Town relative to the release of the steamer Mashona having a quantity of American flour on board, says the case arouses less interest than that of the Bundesrath which, it is said, has been known for a year as a carrior of war materials to the Transvaal

Colonel Sir Charles Howard Vincent sailed for South Africa to-day, although the doctors have not permitted him to accompany the London volunteers. Col. Vincent is determined to give his unofficial services at the seat of war.

A SPECIAL DESPATCH.

London, Jan. 6.—A special despatch from Cape Town to-day says it is rumored there that General French has entered Colesberg.

The word "a special despatch" generally mean that the news is not rellabel.

WAITING FOR REINFORCEMENTS.

London, Jan. 6.—The military critic of The Morning Post to-day discusses the General French's and General Gatacre's skirmishes and operations, and declares that both need reinforcements. He adds—"Each side of the Modder River (where Methuen is) wants to be attacked, but neither cares to attack. The consequence is likely to be a pause until the arrival of reinforcements. These would reach the British first if General Buller should win a battle in Natal. If not they might come first to the Boers, who in case of their second success at Tugela River could spare men to go to Magerafontein."

LATEST JOKE FROM NEW YORK.

London, Jan. 6.—According to a special despatch from Cape Town, General Methuen is building a railroad around the Boers position at Magersfontein.

THE QUEEN IN PERSON.

London, Jan. 6.—At the urgent request of Lord Salisbury the Queen will open Parliament on February 14 in person, the first time she has done so since Jan. 22, 1886, when Mr. Gladstone's Irish Home Rule bill was introduced.

WAR NOTES.

A despatch from Cala, Cape Colony, to the Cape Times, states that 700 Boers have reoccupied Dordrecht. The Boers blew up a railway bridge and culvert.

MISSING ONES TURN UP.

Frere Camp, Natal, Thursday, Jan. 4.—The lieutenant, sergeant and five men, who were reported missing from Captain Thorneycroft's patrol, which found the enemy in some force at Little Tugela bridge, Jan. 2, when their presence was discovered by the Boer scouts, after being hotly chased, eluded the Boers and have returned to camp.

MEAT INCREASES IN PRICE.

London, Jan. 6.—Owing to the withdrawal of the trans-Atlantic liners for use as transports and the consequent non-arrival of the American meat, the butchers here have had the utmost difficulty in procuring supplies, and are advancing prices two pence to three pence per pound.

London, Jan. 6.—While Major-General French's adroit manoeuvres and gallant repulse of the enemy's determined attack are of superior interest as incidents of actual warfare, public attention cannot be diverted from the impending battle on the Tuegla river. Heavy fighting has been expected from hour to hour by military men, who could not be convinced that General Buller would wait for the single battery and the small force of Hussars despatched from Cape Town to Durban, but when the official bulletin, dated yesterday from Frere Camp, and containing his thanks in the name for the holiday remembrances from home, was posted, the impression prevailed that the decisive battle would be deferred until Monday, when he could command every available gun and horse. This opinion was unchanged at midnight. The censorship was screwed down to the tightest notch, so that only the trivial camp incidents were related by the nwe agencies.

Experts Divided.

Military writer for the press were divided in their forecasts of the plan of attack. One group held that Inhlawe Mountain would be the first objective point, and that the southern bank would be cleared before any attempt was made to force the passage of the river. The second group, undismayed by the failure of previous forecasts, assumed that there would be a turning movement a long distance away, with a feint attack at the other end of the line and a vigorous artillery fire at the centre, and they citde as proofs of their theory the reports of systematic scouting on the upper Tugela near Springfield, the massing of Major-Gen. Warren's division at Estcourt, whence it could be sent to Weenen, and the organization of mule transport on a large scale.

Mule Transport.

The last detail was certainly significant, since no turning movement on the lower Tuegla could be made without a mule transport, but an experienced veteran, who managed the transport in a previous campaign in South Africa, told me late last night that this was not clusive evidence, since a mule train would be required at once between Colenso and Ladysmith, after the passage of the river, as the railway had probably been torn up by the Boers.

Buller's Force.

General Buller must have received yesterday strong cavalry reinforcements of South African Light Horse and the 18th Hussars, and when the last battery afloat, with a small force of Hussars, arrives, he will be as strong as he can expect to be, and with nothing to gain by delay. The strength of this army is underestimated by the London press, since the military authorities have not wished the enemy to know the full extent of the concentration of the force upon the Tugela. The last word before midnight was that the ambulance corps had been ordered to the front from Durban and Pietermaritzburg.

THE SEIZURE OF VESSELS.

London, Jan. 6.—The rumor has not been officially confirmed that the German Emperor has sent a member of his staff to Windsor, with a private letter to the Queen, which it is assumed, relates to the seizure of vessels in Delagoa Bay, but there is evidence in the German press that a strong feeling of resentment has been excited by these unpleasant episodes. The cargoes of the Bundesrath will probably be discharged for the purpose of a critical examination by the prize courts. The American Embassy is discreetly silent respecting the seizure of American breadstuffs, but it is the Foreign Office that is carefully considering the question raised by the United States State Department. All summaries of Ambassador Choate's presentation of the case are premature.

Complicated Question.

The truth is that the seizure has been rendered complex by the question of the flag under which the cargoes of food stuffs were carried. American flour, presumably for the Transvaal, was shipped on British vessels for a neutral port, and the Queen's subjects had been warned against trading with th enemy. The question of contraband trading and neutral rights is complicated by this and other facts. The controversies with Germany and the United States tend to convince many well-informed men that England will be driven into the seizure of Delagoa Bay as the easiest way out.

CHANGES IN THE OFFICERS.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Several changes have been made in the officering of the western contingent of the mounted rifles as follows:

Superintendent G. E. Landers of the Mounted Police replaces Major James Walker.

Inspector A. Wroughton, late captain in the Berkshire regiment; Wm. Inglis, formerly a captain in H. M. Berkshire regiment, and Inspector F. L. Cosby are taken as subalterns.

The City Council on Monday night will make a grant of $2,000 to be divided among the eleven local members of the Mounted Rifles and the forty-eight volunteers of the Ottawa contingent of "D" Battery.

The Postal Corps.

The two additional members of the postal corps for service in South Africa are R. A. Murray, Woodstock, and J. Laller, Quebec. The first three appointed were Rowan Johnstone, Winnipeg; T.; B. Biddell, Perth, N.B., W. R. Eccleston, Hamilton.

OUTWITS THE BOERS.

London, Jan. 6.—Major-General French's position was officially reported as unchanged on Thursday, but Reuter's, the Central News and various correspondents brought news of a spirited fight, and the defeat of the Dutch force yesterday. Major-General French has chosen his position so well that the Boers considered it necessary to take al eaf from the book of British tactics and attack his left flank at daybreak after a short night march. His infantry, however, were not taken by surprise, but held their ground resolutely. Four guns were shoved up, and the enemy, when menaced with a flank attack, was forced to retire from a kopje. The fire was maintained until the mounted infantry left their horses and charged the position. There had been an earlier charge by the Inniskillen Dragoons, who cut their way through the enemy's line.

The 10th Hussars harassed the retreating enemy, but Major Harvey was killed while leading them, and Major Alexander was wounded. Otherwise the British casualties were light, while the Boers lost heavily in proportion to their number, and left 50 killed on the field and 50 prisoners in the hands of the British. While only 800 Boers were engaged in this fight, Major-General French's tactics were admirable, and his victory complete and achieved at small cost.

The situation is not entirely clear, but the Boers apparently are still in force on the hills surrounding Colesberg, and are blockading French's advance to the railway bridge at Orange River. French had previously been reinforced by a battalion of infantry and a battery, and the Household Cavalry, the Essex battalion and some field artillery have now been sent to him. The campaign in that quarter is full of promise. Major-General French is evidently holding the Boers at Colesberg until, with an increased cavalry force, he can cut off their retreat to the river, or possibly occupy both the bridges behind them.

Foreman Was Negligent

Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 6.—The coroner's jury in the Brazell mine horror, after three hours' deliberation, renderde a verdict that the mine foreman of said mine was negligent in failing to see that the mine was in a safe condition before permitting workmen to enter it, and that the fire boss of said mine was negligent in failing to make a daily verbal report to the mine foreman.

Appeal to Canada

London, Jan. 6.—The Duchess of Marlborough, the Countess of Essex, Lady Georgiana Curzon, Madame Von Audre, and the leading members of the Imperial Yeomanry hospital fund, appeal to the people of the United States and Canada in behalf of their efforts to equip and maintain a hospital with a base at Cape Town.

Prisoners En Route to Vigain

Washington, Jan. 6.—The War Department received the following cablegram this morning—"Manila, Jan. 6.—Prisoners now en route from Vigan, arrive to-night. List telegraphed to-morrow. Capt Gilmore among the number.—Otis."

A Woman's Example.

New York, Jan. 6.—A New Haven special tells of a striking instance of bravery in which Captain John Kelsey and nine seamen of the big New Haven schooner W. Wallace Ward owe their lives to the inspiring bravery of the skipper's wife. For five days and nights the men worked at the pumps to save the vessel and then gave up in despair and lashed themselves to the rigging. Then Mrs. Kelsey rushed from the cabin and went to work herself, and her courageous example gave the men new life. They sprang to the pumps and by working with superhuman energy kept the schooner afloat until the Norwegian steamer Themis hove in sight at the last moment and effected a rescue.

Twenty-five Killed.

New York, Jan. 6.—The Herald's Manila cable, dated yesterday, says: A brilliant reconnaisance was made to-day by Captain Long and 15 men of the Thirty-Ninth Infantry, from Brang to Carmota, to drive two hundred insurgents from their heavy intrenchments. Twenty-five of the enemy were killed. Our force was surrounded for hours but there were no casualties among the Americans. More than a hundred artillery shells, sent from gunboat Longuna de Bay, were tampered with en route from Manila. The fuses were cut so that the projectiles would explode on contact. This was evidently an attempt to destroy a launch or the gunboat when the shells were being handled. Suspicion points to spies in our service.

It is to be hoped that General French is not in the position of the man who captured the bull by getting hold of its tail.

THE KINDERGARTEN.

A little discussion having started between the Hamilton Spectator and the Kingston Whig as to the educational value of kindergarten schools, the Spectator some days ago asked the Whig to mention something.

"Not inspired by kindergarten people or lazy mothers, that is evidence that the kindergartens are the better of their training."

The response of the Whig was rather a knock-out blow, we fancy, as the Spectator has not been heard from since. The Whig reply was —

"Certainly. The Whig has all along been giving the opinions of those who are not kindergartens and so are not personally biasted in any way.

"Some years ago it got into the heads of some people in Kingston that these primiary departments were not worth the money they cost. They did not get this impression from anything they saw in the school room, for somebow the schools are not visited by many people.

"The school trustees took a census as to the value of the kindergarten's work. The teachers of the next eight or ten grades were asked to speak definitely of the progress made by the pupils who came from the kindergarten rooms as compared with the progress of those who were without this preliminary training.

"The conclusion, unanimously reached, was that the pupils who passed through the initial division of the school system, were, the brighter, more observant, more subject to discipline, and better in every way of the experience. And this conclusion came from teachers who were not personally affected, and who had no communication with "the lazy mothers" to whom the Spectator refers.

"Kingston's kindergartens are open only to children of five years and over, so that they are not the nurseries the Spectator assumes them to be."

Kingston certainly took a very sensible way to ascertain just what the effect of the kindergartens was upon children.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Canadian Contingent could not have sworn off on January 1st. They took their lager as usual on that day.

Perhaps householders have noticed that the price of coal oil steadily up. This is due to the fact that the Standard Oil Company has obtained practically a monopoly of Canada and is putting on the screws. A western paper says the higher rate means an increased charge to the average family in Canada of $4 per year. A reduction of the still very high customs duty on coal oil would do something to lessen the charge.

Mayor-elect Macdonald will prove a bitter pill for some Toronto civil servants. But should they swallow him, it is quite likely he will clean them out.

•• • ••

General French is possibly beginning to think that the Boers don't always know when they are licked either.

•• • ••

Evidently the gratulations over General French success at Colesburg were a little previous. At the same time he arrived somewhere among the Boers without losing several hundred men, which is better than we are accustomed to.

•• • ••

The records of the officers of the "2nd Battalion Canadian Mounted Rifles," and Northwest men, are sufficient proof that first-class selections have been made. The government is to be congratulated on the list.

An Unpalatable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the tasty portions from the shell.—

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans

THE Canada Business College
CHATHAM, ONT.
CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST! You must decide.

236 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

COL. POWELL'S MEN ATTACK THE ENEMY.

Obliged to Withdraw After All Officers and a Number of Men Were Hit.

LOSSES, 21 KILLED, 24 WOUNDED, 3 CAPTURED.

Boers Have Completely Retired from Neighborhood of Molteno. British Set Fire to Wrecked Train. The Boers Are Still Holding Colesberg.

London, Jan. 5.

The War Office has received through General Forestier-Walker at Cape Town, the following despatch from Col. Baden Powell, dated Mafeking, Dec. 26: "We have attacked one of the enemy's works this morning endeavoring to push back the cordon northward. Our force consisted of three guns, two squadrons of Protectorate Regiment, one of the Bechuanaland rifles and armored train, etc. The enemy had strengthened their works during the night and doubled the garrison since yesterday's reconnaissance. Nevertheless our attack was carried out and pressed home with the greatest possible gallantry and steadiness under a very hot fire. But all efforts to gain the interior by escalade failed the fort being practically impregnable.

Our attack only withdrew after six of our officers had been hit and a large number of men. Nothing could have exceeded the courage and dash displayed.

The general situation remains unchanged and the health and spirits of the garrison are very satisfactory.

I regret to report the following casualties:

Killed—Capt. R. J. Verner, Capt. H. C. Sanford, Lieut. H. C. Patton. Eighteen non-commissioned officers and troopers.

Wounded—Capt. Charles Fitzclarence 23 non-commissioned officers and troopers.

Prisoners—Three troopers."

Gen. Forestier-Walker points out that while the despatch gives all the names it fails to show that six officers were hit.

London, Jan. 6.

The Times publishes the following despatch from Mafeking, dated Dec. 26—"At dawn to-day Col. Baden-Powell organized an unsuccessful attack upon a strong position of the enemy at Gametree, two miles from Mafeking, which the Boers have been maintaining a desultory fire, but annoying shell and rifle fire for several weeks. The railway has recently been reconstructed between the town and Gametree where the Boers had destroyed it, the final repairs being made in preparation for the sortie.

During the night the armored train, with Maxim and Hotchkiss guns, under Capt. Williams and troops took up positions for attack from two sides. Capt. Lord Charles Bentinck and a squadron were in reserve upon the left, while the extreme left wing was occupied by artillery under Major Panzera and a galloping maxim of the Cape police, the whole being under Col. Hore.

Emplacements were thrown up during the night, the orders being to attack at dawn and the artillery fire to desist upon prolonged tooting from the armored train.

At daybreak the guns opened fire and rapidly drew the reply of the enemy, our shells bursting within effective range. Capt. Vernon gave the signal to cease firing and advance, his squadron leading off. Gametree is surrounded with scrub, which contained many sharpshooters, and their accuracy of fire still further confused the men who had followed Capt. Vernon, and who saw him and his brother officers killed.

Being without commanders they were driven off at one point, but they endeavored to scale the forts at others. They found the position of the Boers, however, almost impregnable."

TRAIN SET ON FIRE.

London, Jan. 5.—The Daily Mail prints a despatch from Rensburg, Cape Colony, which says that the British set fire Tuesday night to the trucks of the wrecked train which got away from them and slid down towards the Boers. The operation was accomplished by the New South Wales Lancers under a heavy fire, which prevented the Boers from getting the goods from the cars. The despatch says also that the Boers have been surrounded, but that the British are handicapped by a lack of guns of large calibre.

The above story cannot be relied upon, as it is contradicted by despatches to the London Times.

TROOPS REINFORCED FRENCH.

London, Jan. 5.—The War Office this afternoon published a despatch from Cape Town, dated Wednesday, Jan. 3, saying that at Gen. French's special request the Household Cavalry, a battery of field artillery and the first battalion of the Essex Regiment have been despatched to reinforce him temporarily.

ATTACK ON AN OUTPOST.

London, Jan. 5.—General Gatacre's report of the Molteno affair confirms the Associated Press despatch showing it was merely a determined attack on a police outpost, which was successfully repelled. There were no British casualties.

WHY PILCHER RETIRED.

London, Jan. 5.—There is still no important news from the front but the silence which has descended on Gen. Buller's huge force at the Tugela river is believed to be the prelude of another attempt to reach Ladysmith.

In the meanwhile the extraordinary tenacity the Boers are displaying around Colesberg, even assuming the offensive, tends to detract from the success General French is supposed to have achieved. While Colonel Pilcher drove a couple of hundred rebels from Sunnyside, killing or wounding thirty and capturing forty-three, his immediate evacuation of Douglas seems to prove that he had information that there was a sufficient number of Boers in the neighborhood to make his position unsafe.

ZULU'S WANT TO FIGHT.

Pietermaritzburg, Jan. 5.—The restlessness of the Zulus is increasing. Many of them are on the verge of starvation and there have been several instances of looting stores. It is feared that the magistrates will not be able to restrain the warriors much longer. It is asserted that they are anxious to fight the Boers.

BULLER HAS 30,000 MEN.

London, Jan. 5.—The critics, in summing up the probabilities of Gen. Buller making another attack estimate his force at nearly 30,000 men, with 60 guns, including six howitzers, against General Joubert's 25,000 men and 60 guns, but whose position and mobility will more than counterbalance the numerical superiority of the British. The critic of the Morning Post labors daily to prepare the public for heavy losses. He says to-day: "Once General Buller gets out, his object will be to win a decisive battle. His aim will be to inflict the greatest possible loss on the enemy, and, if he can, to crush or cripple the Boer army. It will be necessary for that purpose that he does not spare his own force."

CANADIANS ARE ALL WELL.

Halifax, Jan. 5.—A cable from Captain Stairs to Lady Daily, dated Belmont, Jan. 3, says: "All well."

FOOLISH GERMAN EXCITEMENT.

Berlin, Jan. 5.—Every section of the Berlin press continues to comment in an excited manner, upon the action of British cruisers in seizing German vessels suspected of carrying contraband of war.

Commenting on the seizure of the German ship General by the British and what has stirred Germany, The Berliner Tageblatt says:

"The measure of patience of the German nation is full. Does England want to drive Germany violently into the arms of the Russo-French coalition?"

The Deutsche Tageszeitung "regrets that the Emperor made a journey to England, which has not even yet prevented her open hostility."

The German Colonial Society has sent a protest to the press and intends to hold a series of indignation meetings.

A protest has been entered against the return of Mr. R. C. Ennis, Liberal member for Beautiful Plains. Mr. Ennis defeated Mr. Davidson at the recent election.

Greatest Events of 19th Century.

The first passenger railway train, the laying of the first submarine cable the opening of the Suez Canal—what three greater era-inaugurating events during the last hundred years can be found? In them lies the secret of much of the spirit of the nineteenth century. When Stevenson invented a locomotive for transporting coal through the Newcastle mines, he may have dreamed of coming passenger trains, but if so, he stood alone. He labored from 1814 to 1825 to perfect his locomotive, and from the inception of the Stockton-Darlington Railroad, at the latter date, does the history of the steam horse of the nineteenth century begin.

If an Englishman was the one to develop the transportation of the age, it was an American who was to join the farthest ends of the earth by the electric flash. [illegible] Morse [illegible] the alphabet by which telegraphy became possible on the instrument devised by him, and the American, Cyrus W. Field, forced through the idea of the submarine cable against all sneers and opposition. The first sections of the cable to be laid were those at Newfoundland and at Valentia Ireland, in 1857, but it was nine years more before the work was completed.

The greatest engineering feat of the century was the cutting of the Suez Canal. Ferdinand de Lesseps, a Frenchman, was the moving spirit here. In 1854 he began the agitation, continuing it until 1859, when he began the work, which was finished in 1869, when the great canal was opened with becoming ceremonies. What the Suez Canal means for the world has been brought home to the United States most strikingly since the beginning of the war in the Philippines.

New English Church.

The new English church at Young's Point was formally opened on Thursday last, Venerable Archdeacon of Peterborough officiating at the opening ceremonies. The English church people of Young's Point are very proud of their new church and have every reason to be. It is not yet quite finished. When it is completed and properly furnished it will certainly be a model country church. The incumbent of the parish, the Rev. W. Creswick, under whose personal direction the building has been erected, is indebted to J. E. Belcher, Esq., C. E., architect, of Peterborough, for the design and for the necessary instruction in the work and to the people of Peterborough and to the congregation of St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, for very much needed help in raising the necessary funds. The building is of lime stone from Clear Lake and granite from the quarry of Mr. W. Jones in Stony Lake, with the quoins, jambs and the arches of the doors and windows of free stone given by a member of the congregation. The window sills and steps are from the quarries of the Lakefield Lithograph Stone Co., in Deer Bay. A very pleasing effect has been produced in the windows by the use of rolled Cathedral glass supplied by Messrs. McCausland & Son, Toronto. An oak floor will be laid in the chancel, the material being the gift of Mr. W. McGregor, and to the furnishings of the church will be added a handsome font now being made in Peterborough, the gift of the mission band of St. John's church. The masonry work was done by Mr. P. Taylor, of Lakefield, and the carpenters are Messrs. J. Griffin and R. Crawford, of Lakefield.

THE FENIAN INVASION

Strong Ground Taken by the Military Gazette.

SOME VERY GOOD ADVICE.

The Government Asked to Prepare for Every Emergency.

Where there is Smoke, there must be Some Fire—There are Lots of Traitors Even in our Own Land.

Ottawa, Jan. 5.—The Military Gazette says—"It is an old saying that "where there is smoke there's fire," and, having so recently seen the results of indifference and neglect of repeated warnings as to their intentions in the case of the Imperial Government in its dealings with the Boer Republics, Canada can ill afford to underestimate and disparage indications, which, while they may appear as the vaporings of irresponsible blatherskites, still show only too well the hostile spirit animating certain citizens of the United States. That Canada should be wantonly attacked by the survivors of the "I.R.A.," who attempted to violate her territory in 1866 and 1870, with the avowed purpose of confiscating and parcelling out the properties of our farmers among themselves, will scarcely be credited by some people; but, was not the same view taken of the Boers and their threats to drive all English-speaking Cape Colonists into the sea before Christmas?

Few of our people looked seriously upon the threat last September—they now have good reason to at least remember it. And, though no one would place the loud-mouthed Irish Fenian in the same class with the puritanical Boer, either to courage, resource or ability, it is still always well to be prepared for any and all eventualities. To this end we bespeak generous appropriations for our militia at the approaching session of Parliament—in all probability they will not be required against the Fenians, but it takes time and money to continue on the good work inaugurated by our General Officer Commanding, and, we believe, recent events have sufficiently opened the eyes of our people to rigidly oppose any curtailment of his policy and schemes of practical military progress upon modern, up-to-date lines. In the meantime the old standing offer of Canada—free grant lands to the extent of six feet of Dominion soil—no more, no less—for Fenians or any other hostile invaders, may be presumed to still hold good.

Canadian Forger Arrested.

Detroit, Jan. 4.—Robert J. Johnston a young Canadian from Toronto, who placed under arrest for passing forged cheques. Johnston came here about a month ago and took rooms at the St. Clair. He was a swell dresser and apparently had abundance of money. A few days ago he induced Ed. Henn, the proprietor of a Monroe avenue saloon to cash a cheque for $60 on the Home savings bank, which proved to be worthless. A similar complaint reached the police from a merchant on Larned street west, who lost $20 in a like transaction. Since his arrest the police have also received information that Johnston is wanted at Dunnville and Simcoe for passing forged cheques. At Dunnville he is said to have obtained $900 and at Simcoe $100 by his forgeries. Toronto detectives are at a loss to place the man. They have no man by that name on their books.

No Mixed Marriages in Holy Year.

His Grace Mgr. O'Connor, Archbishop of Toronto, has just made a most important decision regarding a recent decree from the Pope just published in the United States and which, among other matters prohibits the celebration of marriages between Catholics and Protestants during the holy year 1900 except by direct dispensation from the Pope. There has been some uncertainty as to whether the decree applied to Canada or not, but Archbishop O'Connor has decided that members of the Catholic Church within his jurisdiction will have to be bound by it, and other Canadian archbishops will probably soon make similar announcements. This means that during 1900 no Catholic in Canada will be allowed to marry a Protestant and remain a member of the Catholic Church unless a special dispensation is obtained from the Pope. For seventy-five years such marriages have been permitted under dispensation from the diocesan bishops, but the new decree will very greatly increase the difficulty of such unions.

The Wrong Medicine.

Stratford, Jan. 4.—Mrs. John A. Coppin, of Mitchell, was accidentally poisoned last night. For some time past she has been suffering from inflammation and other diseases. Through carelessness the nurse gave her liniment to drink instead of the proper medicine. The doctor was summoned, and he pronounced her life in danger. After working with her for several hours he declared her to be out of danger.

Mrs. Coppin is the daughter-in-law of License Inspector Coppin, one of the best known men in Perth county.

French Force Defeated.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 5.—Mail advices by the steamship Queen Adelaide, which reached Victoria from the Orient to-day, say that another battle between the French and the Chinese took place at Kwangchauwan, and that the French were defeated with a loss of thirty men.

Some days ago a French force was reported to have defeated the Chinese in Kwangchauwan province, the French casualties being only 15. The trouble arose over the assassination of two French naval officers.

Devoured by Cannibals.

New York, Jan. 5.—The Southern Presbyterian Board of Missions at Nashville, Tenn., says a special to the Times from that city, has received letters from the Rev. L. C. Vass and the Rev. H. P. Hawkins, missionaries of the church stationed at Luebo, Congo Free State, Africa, giving the accounts of burning of fourteen villages and the killing of ninety or more natives by State troops. They report that some of the victims were eaten by cannibals, and that the bodies of all who were slain were eaten their heads being cut off.

The Rev. W. H. Sheppard was sent to investigate and saw forty-seven dead, three of whom had been eaten.

The chief said that eighty or ninety had been killed and five persons eaten by the people. Mr. Sheppard saw eighty-one right hands cut off and drying over a slow fire, in order to be afterwards taken back to the State officers. Sixty women prisoners were confined in a pen, and 16 men had already been sent away prisoners.

It is said that the raid was ordered because the people could not pay the exorbitant tribute demanded by the State.

Delagoa Bay.

London, Jan. 5.—The latest information possessed by Counsel for Delagoa Bay Railroad claimants is that the award will be made at the end of January. One of the chief parties to the claim said to a representative of the Associated Press—

"There are rumors current that the award will be a compromise agreeable to no one. But I attach no value to these reports. The story of the claimants getting $100,000,000 is ridiculous. The total of the American and British claims does not exceed $15,000,000. The arbitrators are not likely to award more than is claimed. The various reports are based purely on conjecture. The parties to the suit will be the first to hear the result, and no word on this subject has reached them."

Christianity Recognized.

Yokohama, Dec. 16, via Victoria, B. C., Jan. 5.—The bill for the regulation of religious organization excites much comment because of its fairness and impartiality. Christianity is no longer merely tolerated but receives recognition. All religious property is exempt from taxation and religious teachers from conscript. The whole Buddhist sects show an unexpectedly liberal spirit and are practically united in giving support to the measure.

Greenway Resigns Today

Winnipeg, Jan. 4.—It is generally expected that Premier Greenway and his Cabinet will resign office to-morrow, and Lieut.-Governor Patterson will then call upon Hon. Hugh John Macdonald to organize his Government. It is understood that Mr. Macdonald's cabinet will be composed of himself as Premier and Attorney-General; Mr. R. P. Roblin, Provincial Treasurer; Mr. J. A. Davidson, Minister of Works and Agriculture, with two other members without portfolios. Mr. Davidson has no seat in the House.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the ead of the biggest bureau de change in ondon to the writer, "to notice the vari- us methods in which men of different ationalities carry their worldly wealth. he Englishman carries his all loose in is right hand trousers pocket—gold, sil- er and copper all mixed up together. He ulls a handful of the mixture out of his ocket in a large, opulent way and selects he coins he has need of. The American arries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, arrow pocketbook, in which the green- acks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use f a leather purse with no distinguishing haracteristics, while the German uses ne gayly embroidered in silks by the fair ands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some orrid South American city carries his ollars in a belt with cunningly devised ockets to baffle the gentlemen with the ight fingers. Some of these belts are very xpensive. The Italian of the poorer lasses ties up his little fortune in a gayly olored handkerchief secured with many nots, which he secretes in some mys- erious manner about his clothes. A sim- lar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a reference for his boots or the lining of is clothes as a hiding place for his sav- ngs."—London Answers.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impuri- ies mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be re- moved from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bot- tom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and —

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and easy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my darnedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—and if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder, "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2 Henry VI," 1 iii.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the barreteros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the barreteros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

The Red Cross Fund.

Cold Spring Literary Society will hold an entertainment at Cold Spring School house, Otonabee, on the night of Friday, Jan. 19th, in aid of the Red Cross Fund.

Sham Rock

Is a name given by some to our granolithic pavements. Some shoes have sham soles, which when wet are taken off very easily by the sham rock, and thus the sham sole is lost. To avoid the latter buy your shoes from Kidd—the price is no more, but less, and trading stamps given as well.

C. L. Association.

The Catholic Literary Association has received a valuable gift from Judge McMahon of 19 handsome volumes of standard books. The directors invite the ladies to patronize their library.

Our Eligible Bachelors.

The second installment of Peterborough's eligible bachelors has been crowded out of this issue. It will appear next Saturday.

Must Be Stopped.

Chief Rouzel and his force are determined to put a stop to the dangerous habit which is so prevalent of leaving horses standing on the streets untied. At the police court Saturday a man named Brooks was fined $2 for allowing his horse to stand untied on the street contrary to a by-law of the town.

Man Wanted.

Who will take the contract at $300 per year for the delivery of the Morning Times in town. Delivery must be made between 6 and 8 o'clock a.m., in winter, and 5 and 7 in summer. This is a good job for a man with two or more boys of his own who are going to school. Apply at Times Bookstore.

Prayers for the Troops.

In nearly all, if not all, the churches of the town, earnest prayers were offered for the success of our troops. In St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. Campbell, Moderator of the Assembly, pleaded eloquently for blessings on those who were going away to fight our country's battles.

To Get a Send off.

Major Greenwood will arrive in Peterborough from the east to-day, and will take his final departure tomorrow for Halifax, where he will join the contingent. The military men in town are to give the gallant Major a suoitable send-off, prior to his departure. The event will probably be in the shape of an informal reception at the headquarters of the local battalion, where he will be entertained and presented with an address and other more suitable tokens of esteem and good will.

ACROSS THE BRIDGE.

A Horse Crosses the C.P.R. Bridge in Ashburnham.

On Saturday evening a young man from town hired a horse and cutter to go to Keene, returning shortly before daylight. When nearing Downers' Corners the horse got into the ditch and the rig upset. The occupant was thrown out the horse got away. It ran up as far as the C. P. R. bridge in Ashburnham and turned west on the track and over the bridge. When about three-quarters of the way over the horse's legs got caught in the trestlework of the bridge, and there the animal remained fast. A frieght train was ready to start from the station, but by good luck the animal was noticed by the driver, and efforts were made to rescue it. Police Constable Stewart and some of the railway employees made a walk of boards on the bridge where the animal was, when the brute was unhitched from the cutter and liberated.

It is fortunate that the train did not run into the horse, as it certainly would have been derailed and thrown into the river.

The horse, which belonged to Fitzgerald's livery, was apparently uninjured.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c, Times Bookstore.

Week of Prayer.

The week of prayer will be observed during the week commencing January 8. The services and subjects for the week as arranged by the Ministerial Association are as follows:—

Monday—"Confession and Thanksgiving." St. Andrews' church.—Rev. J. Bastow.

Tuesday—"The Church Universal." Charlotte St.—Rev. J. G. Potter.

Wednesday—"Nations and Rulers." George St.—Rev. Dr. Torrance, Rev. J. F. Moore.

Thursday—"Families and Schools." St. Paul's.—Rev. S. J. Shorey.

Friday—"Home and Foreign Missions." Murray St.—Rev. D. O. Crossley.

To Unite With the County.

The town of Perth and County of Lanark have been run as separate municipalities on the same lines as Peterborough town and county. On Monday last a vote was taken to unite the municipalities, which was carried, only eleven votes being recored against it. This might set our people thinking.

After 15 Years.

Hon. Joseph Boyd, of Nort Dakota, is spending a couple of weeks in Peterborough and neighborhood. Mr. Boyd is a son of the late John Boyd, of Douro, and left town about 15 years ago. He was then a young stripling and now weighs 215 pounds. He went to North Dakota, where he began business as a keeper of a general store. He served two years in the State Legislature, and one year in the State Senate. Mr. Boyr retired from politics and devotes his exclusive time to the management of his large and increasing business.

Port Hope's Send-off.

Port Hope was wild with excitement on Tuesday night over the departing troops. The council took the matter up and the boys received a royal send-off.

Danger of Coasting.

Two boys coasting on Smithtown hill had a narrow escape from injury on Saturday morning. Both coming at full speed ran into a team of horses attached to a milk van, and one had his arm badly bruised and was otherwise hurt. They had the good fortune to coast into the quiet horse of the team or they might have been more seriously injured. The Chief of Police wishes to remind all boys and girls about the by-law forbidding coasting on the streets. Many pedestrians have complained about the nuisance and unless it is stopped the by-law will have to be enforced.

A Brave Deed Recalled.

Readers will remember the sad circumstances of the drowning of Hattie Stuart, the nine year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Stuart, of Norwood, in Stony Lake on the 27th of July last, which sad event also recalls the noble rescue of Mr. Stuart and his two sons, Herbert and Percy, who in attempting to save the little girl almost perished themselves. Mr. John S. Sherry, of Norwood, and Mr. Percy Clarke, of Peterborough, came to their assistance at a very critical time, and at the risk of their own lives rescued all three, afterward bringing up from the bottom of the lake the body of the drowned girl. On Monday last Mr. Sherry received from Mr. and Mrs. Stuart a letter, accompanied by a handsome gold watch as a recognition of his heroic act.

BETHEL NEWS.

At the league meeting held in Bethel church, Omemee circuit, on Thursday night, 4th inst., the members of the S. S. presented their superintendent, Mr. Gabriel Switzer, with a beautiful oak upholstered reclining chair and a pair of slippers. Rev. Mr. Pope made the presentation and read an address on behalf of the Sunday school. Mr. Switzer, who has been superintendent for twelve years, was completely taken by surprise, but made a very suitable reply.

Mr. Sleemon, teacher, who succeeds Mr. Clarke, commenced duties on the 3rd inst.

PUCKLETS.

A Few Interesting Items of Hockey News.

The Peterborough team will go to Toronto at noon to-day to play the first game of the senior series with the Wellingtons. The game will take place in the Mutual street rink. The local team will be as follows—

Wasson, goal; Glover, point; Hollingshead, cover; King, Davidson, Crowley and Graham, forwards.

The boys expect to win, and as the local team have always played a good game on the Caledonian rink, a fast time may be expected. Mr. J. McFadden has been asked to referee.

•• • ••

The Belleville team which defeated the Peterborough II. in Belleville the other evening, play the return game here on Wednesday night. The bous are practicing hard and expect to win by a larger score than they were beaten by. Watch for this game.

•• • ••

When Peterborough Juniors and Cobourg meet the best game of the season will no doubt be witnessed. The Colts have a corking team. Harold Armstrong is by far the best man on the Peterborough side, while a number of new men, including young Miller, the goal keeper, will make up a team that will come pretty near to landing the junior championship.

•• • ••

A matched seven had a game at the rink on Saturday night with honors about even. The work of Miller in goal and Cavanagh at point was much admired. "Maggie" Whitcroft is playing a winning game, but has a bad fault of not holding his position. When he is trained into doing this he can be considered to have reached perfection as it is understood in hockey.

A Presentation.

At a recent meeting of Court Stanley, A. O. F., Mr. George Record, secretary of the court, was presented with an exceedingly handsome fountain pen, the handle of which was inlaid with mother of pearl. It was accompanied by an address, in which Mr. Record's services to the court were referred to. Mr. Record made a suitable reply.

WRECKED BY COFFEE.

Heart Failure Caused by the Seductive Cup.

"I have been a great coffee drinker for several years. For a long time I though I could not eat without coffee.

Have been troubled with my stomach, nerves and heart. The worse I felt, the less I ate, and the more coffee I drank.

I have taken many different kinds of medicines, but could not secure any lasting benefit. Up to eight weeks ago I had but few well days in the preceding two years. I could not do ordinary housework, except with great care, because of heart failure.

"I met a friend who said she could not so. I thought perhaps coffee might be the cause of most of my troubles, and so I quit the use of it about eight weeks ago and took up Postum Food Coffee. I have not taken any medicine, and I have gained so fast that it is a surprise to my friends as well as to myself. I can eat, sleep and work, and do not have any bad spells with my heart at all. I have been wanting to tell people what a relief it is, since I left off coffee and used Postum Food Coffee. I want the fact published that it may relieve some poor, weak, nervous women." CHURCH NOTES.

Yesterday morning at St. Paul's Rev. Dr. Campbell, Moderator of the General Assembly, delivered an eloquent and impressive sermon, dealing with the million dollar century fund. In the evening Rev. Dr. Torrance spoke upon "D. L. Moody, his life and work."

The services at St. John's church yesterday evening were of an unusually interesting character, it being the dedication of an handsomely carved oak font cover, which has just arrived from England, and which will be a memorial to the late C. S. Dudman and the Misses Dudman, who were life-long members of St. John's church.

Rev. J. Bastow, preached yesterday evening in the Murray street church on Dwight L. Moody. There was baptism after the sermon.

Miss Ida Munro, of Alma College, St Thomas, sang a voluntary with effect at the George street Methodist church last night.

Rev. P. J. Murphy, of the Paulist Order, New York, delivered a temperance sermon at Vespers in St. Peter's cathedral last night.

Miss Hendren, of Lakefield, sang at both services yesterday in Charlotte Methodist church.

Rev. Mr. Crossley, of the Charlotte street church, spoke on the subject: "Spiritual Patriotism or Loyalty to the King of Kings."

There was a celebration of the Holy Communion at All Saint's Church at 8.30 a.m. yesterday and special offertory for Canadian Mission work in in Japan at Morning and evening services. In the evening, Rev. W. L. Armitage spoke on "Mission Work of the Century.

Trade in Wild Beasts.

Hamburg is a city of strange industries, but perhaps there is none more interesting than that of Mr. Carl Hagenbeck. Serving, as he does, as the collector of wild beasts for almost every menagerie in the world, he has dealings with every savage land. His agents are to-day marching Tartary working in even the rebellious Philippines. Just now he is busy organizing an expedition to Thibet. In his great garden you find crowds of wild beasts of every kind. Here are 18 polar bears, and not far off is a string of a dozen elephants, newly arrived from India. Half a hundred condors, fresh from South America, are waiting to be unpacked; scores of alligators are playing together, as though in their native Florida; while lions and tigers and panthers are stored away in almost countless numbers. Here is a baby tiger, which you can play with like a kitten; not far off is a fierce Bengal brute, striving to tear down its bars and get at you.

"You must have had some strange adventures with your animals, Mr. Hagenbeck?"

"Naturally. There was one adventure with a snake that still makes me hot and cold when I recall it. A case of rattlesnakes came to me, and noticing an unpleasant smell, I put my arms over my face for shade and peered into the case. I saw there was a dead snake there. Just then one of the rattlers jumped up and threw itself against the iron bars in an endeavor to get at me. I took no notice of it at the time, but next morning my wife drew my attention to the sleeve of my coat. The sleeve was covered with a great patch of greenish stain, the green crystals glistening on it. It was a hot summer, and my face was covered with a heat eruption. Had a little of this poison got on my face, I must inevitably have died the most horrible of all deaths."

"You must find it more difficult to get your supplies of wild animals as civilization extends?" I suggested.

"I do, for wild animals are decreasing very rapidly indeed. Variety after variety, that twenty years ago was quite common, is now utterly gone, or only a few specimens left. The true mountain zebra, that not long since could be found in large numbers, has now vanished. Three South African varieties of zebra have disappeared within thei ast quarter century. From the wild animal hunter's point of view South Africa is now quite spoiled. Men have been so busy slaughtering merely for the sake of slaughter that the great beasts are becoming extinct. Babies and breeding females are shot down as indiscriminately as bulls. Englishmen are perhaps the worst offenders in this matter, and in the English territories the least provision is made for protecting the animals. No one objects to hunters shooting down all the bull elephants they can, but what sport can there be in their slaughtering cows and babies? This might be to some extent stopped by a regulation forbidding trading in small ivory tusks under fifteen or twelve pounds in weight.

As a specimen of how animals are disappearing, take the Sudan. Before Mahdism swept over it, it was one of our best countries. Hippopotami, elephants, the rhinoceros were all obtained there in abundance. We trained tribes for the chase. Since the land has been reopened a trader, formerly my agent, has gone there hoping to renew business. He writes to me that the old hunting tribes are gone, and that the great game have practically disappeared. He has had his journey for nothing."

OUBERT'S DESPERATE EFFORT TO CRUSH THE BRITISH AT LADYSMITH FAILS!

eneral White Triumphs in a Fearful Fight, the Boers Being Repulsed Again and Again With Fearful Loss. The Greatest Battle of the War.

e After Time The Boers Captured British Positions, and Time After Time They Were Retaken. The Enemy Massed Between Ladysmith and Colenso in Great Force. Colonel Park and the Devonshire Regiment Win Laurels by a Night Attack. Unconfirmed Report That Gen. Buller Had Crossed the Tugela River.

London, Jan. 9.

Times publishes the following, ted Jan. 6, from Modder River:— ews from Belmont shows that the eenslanders and Canadian volunrs have been so energetic in that ighborhood that a large belt of e Free State across the border has en deserted by the Boers."

London, Jan. 9.—3.30 a.m.

eral White still holds out or did sixty hours ago when the Boers, ated from their foothold inside the rks suspended their assault at ght fall. England has taken heart e situation, however, is still causg much anxiety. The beleagured rce must have expended a large mount of ammunition which canot be replenished and must have st a number of officers and men hich is counterbalanced, so far as e garrison is concerned by the reater loss of the Boers.

e entrenchments at Ladysmith as escribed in a message that left a ay or two before the fight and has ust come through are fortified hills vell covered with rifle pits and renches, down which the infantry noved in single file to the various osts in absolute safety. Full rations are still served. but no whiskey or tobacco.

. Spencer Wilson in the Morning Post th t , there is one division nly at Chiveley, another at Frere nd a third at Estcourt. As Chieveey is seven miles from Colenso the econd division would have had to narch twelve miles to get into action nd the third division twenty-two niles.

eral Bullers 30,000 men and sevenry guns were therefore almost inctive on Saturday and when Gen. White heliographed , General Buller could really make no move but n ineffective demonstration.

ngland is preparing fresh armaments nd twenty-two transports will be n the way to South Africa during the present month. According to the programe 25,000 additional troops and 72 guns will soon be afloat. The Government has ordered the Maxims to manufacture as many 4.7 and 6 inch quick firers as can be turned out until otherwise notified.

ord Dunraven in the Times this morning returns to his arrangement of the War Office for the inferiority of British artillery. He says—"It is useless for the Government to contend that our artilylery is equal to that of foreign nations since the Boers have longer range mobile guns ears. Wornher Beit and Co. diamond merchants have donated £50,000 to the fund for the equipment of the Yeomanry.

t is understood that the War Office has received some figures on the casualties in the Saturday's attack upon Ladysmith, but not the list itself. These have not yet been made public.

Berlin, Jan. 8

The Foreign office this evening authorized the following statement:—"Germany recognizes the right of search within certain specified limits. Among the points enumerated in the protest filed in London is one contending that England has exceeded limits. No answer has yet been received to this protest."

AN EIGHT INFANTRY DIVIS ON.

London, Monday, January, 8.—The War Office has decided upon immediate steps for sending an eighth infantry division to South Africa. Some of the regiments for this regiment will be taken from Gibraltar and Malta. They will be replaced by militia.

GENERAL YULE AT HOME.

London, Jan. 8.—General Yule, who succeeded to the command of General Symons after the latter had been fatally wounded at Dundee, arrived at Southampton yesterday, the condition of his health having necessitated his return to England.

In an interview, he confirmed reports of the Boer's misuse of the white flag. He said that he was of the opinion that Buller's best chance was in a flank attack on the Boers, north of the Tugela river. He did not believe that the war would last very long, as the Boers were running short of supplies. Afterwards, annexation of the Republics was alone possible. The colonists would hear of no other solution.

GUNS IN PIANO CASES.

London, Jan. 8.—The Customs officials have detained as contraband two large guns that were being shipped on a steamer in Millwall docks. The cases in which the guns were packed had been used for pianos. They were consigned to a well-known firm in Christiania, Norway, and had been declared as ironmongery.

The Custom officials are very busy the War Office having ordered that all vessels leaving British ports be most carefully searched for contraband.

It was recently found that the Boers were supplied with arms and tinned foods that were made in England. On Friday the port of London customs detained a ship that was carrying six Maxim guns, and another that had a cargo of biscuits and preserved meats The Captain's explanations of the destinations of their vessels were deemed unsatisfactory, and the ships were consequently held.

SEVEN BOERS SHOT.

London, Dec. 8.—Police Constable Thorpe, a private in the 1st Shropshire Light Infantry, with Lord Methuen's forces, reports that at Modder River seven Boers who had fired on doctors, and two Irishmen who had been captured at Belmont, were placed in a row, with their hands tied to stakes, and a company of Cornwalls gave them their last "Beecham," as our fellows call bullets.

They made other Boers see them shot and dig their holes.

A soldier in the 1st Battalion of the Royal Scots, writing from Sterkstroom on December 6, says, incidentally, that two rebels, colonial Dutch, are to be shot to-morrow.

ATTACKS WERE ABANDONED.

London, Jan. 8.—The Times publishes a despatch from Ladysmith, dated Jan. 1, recording two night movements on the part of the Boers to assault the town. These had to be abondoned when the British defences were reached, but the correspondent says it is apparent that the great attack would not be long delayed.

"Loyally supported by the civilians the garrison can hold out for a considerable period. We are not yet reduced to half rations. The greatest difficulty is proper accommodation for the wounded and sick."

LONDON WAS GLOOMY.

London, Jan. 8.—In spite of the reports of the ultimate success of General White's forces in repulsing the Boer assault on Ladysmith, which are apparently merely enlargements of the camp rumors contained in General Buller's latest despatch, the country refuses to emerge from the paroxysm of apprehension into which it was thrown by the publication of the last words of the heliographed message from Gen. White—"very hard pressed"—until officially assured that the beleaguered garrison has not collapsed, as it seemed on the point of doing when the last signal was flashed.

General Buller's grim symbolism, "the sun has failed," exactly describes the situation. There is nothing to relieve the gloom.

DID THEY BOLT.

London, Jan. 8.—So far as known, Gen. Buller's demonstration against Colenso had little effect. In spite of the heavy artillery fire, the Boers did not reply, and the only effect of the shrapnel shell reported was that it caused a hundred Boers and their horses to stampede from the camp between Colenso and Grobbler's Kloop.

General French has now joined the other British commanders with the familiar formula, "I regret to report." Telegrams from Rensberg say seven officers and 30 men of the Suffolks were killed and about 50 were captured. General French's announcement that the Essex Regiment has been sent to replace the Suffolks is more bitter to the latter's friends than the list of casualties, as the only inference is that the Suffolks disgraced themselves and their flag by bolting and leaving a few of their more staunch comrades to fill the Pretoria jails.

ATTACKED THE CAMP.

London, Jan. 8.—The War Office this evening issued the following—"From Buller, Frere Camp, Jan 6.—The following telegram was received from General White, Jan. 6, 9 a.m.—'The enemy attacked Caesar's Camp at 2.45 a.m in considerable force. The enemy was everywhere repulsed, but the fighting still continues.'"

Modder River, Jan. 6.—A balloonist this morning located new Boer trenches where where two guns had been mounted, three miles from Modder River. The Boers fired a shell from each of these guns in the direction of the guards and pickets yesterday afternoon, but they did no harm.

The British naval guns fired a few shots this morning and again this afternoon, in the direction of the kopjes.

Lieut. Hays, of the Marine Guards, saw the Boers on Thursday playing quoits in front of the trenches at the foot of a kopje.

A civil judge from Kimberley, who is co-operating with the military court, examined a number of suspected spies today.

Engineers have completed the third pontoon bridge across the Modder River, inside the limits of the camp.

The news of French's success has been posted and received with enthusiasm.

METHUEN'S BLUNDER.

London, Jan. 8.—The London Globe prints a letter from one of its correspondents with Methuen's column, which was sent after the battle of Magersfontein. Although the letter was censured, the correspondent was permitted go say there was no accord between General Methuen and General Wauchope. Methuen's plan was followed with the resulting disaster. Wauchope's last words were, "For God's sake, men, don't blame me for this."

The correspondent hints that the troops are begining to lose heart at always fighting an invisible enemy in an impregnable position.

IT WAS A GLORIOUS VICTORY.

London, Jan. 8.—3.45 p. m.—The War Office has just published the following despatch from General Buller—

"Frere Camp, Natal, Jan. 8.—The following is from General White, dated 2 p.m., yesterday—

"An attack was commenced on my position, but was chiefly against Caesar's Camp and Wagon Hill. The enemy was in great strength and pushed the attack with the greatest courage and energy. Some of our entrenchments on Wagon Hill were three times taken by the enemy and re-taken by us. The attack continued until 7.30 p.m. One point in our position was occupied by the enemy the whole day. But at dusk, in a very heay rain storm, they were turned out of this position at the point of the bayonet in a most gallant manner by the Devons, led by Col. Park. Col. Ian Hamilton commanded on Wagon Hill and rendered valuable services. The troops have had a very trying time and have behaved excellently. They are elated at the service they have remdered the Queen.

"The enemy were repulsed everywhere with very heavy loss, greatly exceeding that on my side, which will be reported as soon as the lists are complete."

REPULSED WITH HEAVY LOSS.

London, Jan. 8.—3.45 p.m.—General White reports under date of Sunday, 2 p.m., that the Boers were repulsed with heavy losses.

GATACRE SHOT THE TRAITOR.

London, Jan. 8.—A private of the Irish Rifles who fought at Stormberg, in a letter to his home, says that when Gen. Gatacre saw the position the Guide had led the troops into, he shot the guide dead with his own revolver.

HAS BULLER CROSSED THE TUGELA?

London, Jan. 8—4.25 p.m.—A rumor is current in the city that General Buller has crossed the Tugela River, captured 12 guns and is now marching on Ladysmith.

[Up to an early hour this morning there was no confirmation of the above report, which is probably only an idle street rumor.]

A BELATED DESPATCH.

Ladysmith, Jan. 1.—(By runner to Frere Camp, Jan. 6.)—Large convoys with stores can be seen trekking toward Colenso. The Boers are actively patrolling the country and have massed their forces to the southward to oppose Gen. Buller's advance. Every hill and kopje between here and Colenso has been strongly fortified. General Joubert is again in the field. It is difficult to estimate the number now about us, as the Boers keep well under cover and never show themselves, but a majority of their forces are between Genreal Buller and Ladysmith. It is impossible to go outside the town limit without being shot at.

A heavy rifle fire was heard on Dec. 30, in the direction of Sunday's River.

Persistent rumors are in circulation of quarrels between the Transvaal and Free State commanders.

The active bombarding has little effect. Heavy rains washed out the camp of the Twenty-Ninth Hussars, but the men and their horses escaped without injury.

A big concert was held to-night. Everybody is apparently cheerful.

BULLER CREATES A DIVERSION.

Frere Camp, Jan. 6. 6.45 p.m.—At two o'clock this afternoon the whole of Gen. Clery's division marched to attack Colenso. General Hildyard had the left of the line, General Barton the right, and the cavalry the extreme right. The attack slowly developed. At half-past four the field guns advanced in the centre and commenceed shelling the flat land between Hlagawane hill and Fort Wylie. A heay thunderstorm was then raging over the Boer position. At half-past five the British troops were still advancing, and were very near Colenso. The naval 4.7 inch guns and the field guns were dropping shells into the trenches and were near the river forts. The enemy did not reply. The day has been dull throughout and darkness is now rapidly approaching.

COL. HUGHES HEARD FROM.

Ottawa, Jan. 8.—A private cable has been received here from Cape Town stating that Colonel Hughes, M.P., lying there without any military employment. This is due to the reports that General Hutton made to the Imperial authorities against Col. Hughes.

Whatever may have been Colonel Hughes' mistake in this case, Canadians will sympathize with him, seeing he is purely a victim of volunteer enthusiasm on behdif of the empire.

The set will make a beautiful Xmas present. It deals with religion, patriotism, business, law, medicine, education and agriculture, containing portraits of some of Canada's chief business men, &c. We invite inspection. The set will be sold for fifteen dollars, but is worth twice what we ask for it. Times Bookstore.

LOYAL PORT HOPE.

A Magnificent Send-off Given the Battery Boys on Their Departure.

One of the most loyal and patriotic sights in the history of our picturesque town took place Friday evening, it being the departure of 13 of the noblest and best young men of D Battery, Port Hope, for Ottawa, where they will join the rest of Canada's loyal sons of the Second Contingent and proceed to Halifax, where they will embark on the ready waiting transports for that far-away port of Cape Town; and represent Old England's fairest gem and endow honor upon the land of the Beaver and Maple.

In the afternoon the Port Hope file factory done honor to their concern by giving a half holiday to their employees, which was spent in the praiseworthy and creditable manner of entertaining two of the patriotic employees who, enshrouded with the grand Old Union Jack, are determined to see Miss Kruger or plant the old man, and do honor to their native land, or imprint one name more on England's gallant standard. After a mirthful hour had been spent at their former place of duty, indulging in a sumptuous repast given by the genial manager, and receiving the blessings of their numerous friends they turned out in a body, with flags and all musical instruments that mind could conceive, and drove through all the principal streets in Port Hope. They were greeted on all sides by the motto hung over the uniform apartment at the drill shed, "Your a Credit to your Daddy."

In the evening, under the instruction of Col. McLean, they all formed into line in the drill shed, where they were deeply impressed by his words, pointing out the obligation they had taken, and reminding them above all to be punctual at duty, and heed their superior officers. Mr. McLean's inspiring words were greeted on all sides by enthusiastic cheers. The boys then, headed by the 46th Battalion band and Welcome's band, marched to the Opera House, followed by the firemen in uniform, and civilians. The enthusiastic crowd rushed through the doors in overwhelming numbers, the hall being filled beyond standing room five minutes after arrival, and then over two-thirds of the crowd were left under the shelter of the blue canopy to be only enlightened by the continuous cheering The scene was gorgeous and inspiring, the platform being trimmed for the occasion and decorated to perfection with St. George's cross, with a beautiful oil painting of Her Majesty hung out on the foreground and the Stars and Stripes hung in noble folds beside it.

J. W. Quinlan, Mayor acted as Chairman, on behalf of the committee, then arose and after making a very suitable speech, reminded the speakers that owing to limited time they had, he would request that they make their address as brief as possible. The speakers were so numerous and remarks so elaborated that it would be a hrd matter to decide who gave the gem, although Mr. Hight, Mayor of Cobourg, Mr. White, Mr. Rev. Young, Col. McLean and Rev. Mr. Daniels spoke eloquently. Col. Hughes, of Newtonville, made a very qualified speech, dwelling principally on military rules. He ended up by asking the boys not to reflect upon a certain Irishman's words in coming to this country. When seven days out from Dublin, on being asked how he felt stated, "Begorra, I'd sooner ride an ass any day and git a kick in the stomach, then ride a bloomin' boat and catch the heaves."

The boys of Port Hope were then all presented with a purse containing a $25 gold piece, besides other gifts of suitable kinds. The Rev. Mr. Kendry presented them with the source of England's power—the Bible.

The Millbrook boys felt kind of lonely at having no representative to remind them of their own fair town, which was owing particularly to the want of knowledge on behalf of our city fathers, as they having only enlisted the evening previous to their departure. However two well filled purses will be awaiting them at Halifax. The two young men referred to above, are Messrs. W. D. Leach, and H. Burnham, late of the Military College, Kingston, two of Millbrook's best young men, who will do honor to their town.

Mr. W. McRae rendered two fine recetations, one entitled the "Battle of Glencoe."

The meeting was brought to a close by the two bands playing the patriotic airs and singing "Soldiers of the Queen" and "Rule Brittania," three stentorian cheers were given for the noble Canadians.

They then marched to the station, in any way but order, where the train bore them away.

OUR CITY FATHERS.

The Inaugral Meeting of the Town Council.

HONORING THE SOLDIERS.

Mayor Kendry's Address a Very Satisfactory Our.

The Council Makes a Grant to the Volunteers Striking Committees and Other Business

The Town Council for 1900 held its inaugural meeting yesterday morning and got into business at once. Mayor Kendrey occupied the chair The nine aldermen were present, Messrs. John Corkery, T. H. G. Denne, C. B. Robertson, Robt. Clinkscale, Adam Dawson, G. M. Roger, Robt. Weir, J. B. Oke and John Sawers.

The Mayor's Address.

Mayor Kendrey read the following address:—

Gentlemen,—I am pleased to meet you again around the Council Board. I see among the members four who were members when I had the honor before of presiding over this Council. I am very pleased to meet them again and am also pleased to meet the new members who have been selected by the people to assist in managing the affairs of the town.

There are a number of matters of importance to be dealt with this year, as there always is in a town of this size. It seems to me that something must be done in reference to the dangerous railway crossings. Gates should be erected at several of the crossings, of both the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific railways, and it would be well for the Light Committee to consider the advisability of having electric lights placed at one or more of these. The matter of gates should be dealt with promptly and perhaps it would be well to refer it to a committee as soon as they are appointed.

We have seen during the last few days a number of our fellow citizens leave for South Africa to do their part in upholding the power of the British Empire and in securing justice for fellow subjects. Certain citizens and militia officers have practically recognized the bravery and self sacrifice, of these gallant volunteers, but this Council representing the town should do something on behalf of the citizens in general to show the appreciation of the loyalty and courage of those who have started for the scene of conflict. This should be dealt with at this evening's session, as before we meet again the second contingent will probably be on its way across the ocean.

Our sister municipality of Ashburnham, which is so closely connected with our town in business and other relations, is still seperated from us municipally, and it would be wise to ascertain whether terms, mutually advantageous, could not be agreed.

We will, I have no doubt, be a unit on the advisability of endeavoring to increase the manufacturing industries of the town. Our natural advantages are well known to ourselves, and we must lose no opportunity of making them known and of using our best efforts to secure the location of new industries.

Our general policy this year as regards expenditure should be one of caution and economy. The most careful oversight of all expenditure must be maintained and by judicious expenditure the best service obtained for the people at the least expense.

I look forward to a year spent pleasantly together in a united endeavor to advance the interests of the town in every way that shall lie within our power.

Mayor Kendrey also stated the Council should be a unit on encouraging manufacturers in the town of Peterborough. He hoped that during the year he may be of service in this line. He hoped and was confident that they would work together harmoniously and pleasantly during the year. He would do his best for the administration of all business of the town effectively.

Communications.

A number of communications were received and referred to committees or left over to be dealt with at the evening session.

A number of accounts were read and referred to the Finance Committee.

Auditors Appointed.

Ald. Denne introduced a by-law to appoint auditors for 1900. Messrs. F. Bell and J. A. Hall, sheriff, were reappointed. The salary is $75 each.

The Volunteers.

On motion of Ald. Roger and Dawson a deputation from the 57th battalion was heard. Col. Bell suggested that some assistance be given the men of the town who have gone to the front. Five men besides Major Greenwood have gone who are citizens of the town, three from the 57th, one from the Dragoons and one from the

BERLIN'S CONTRIBUTION

Who was he that said the Germans of Berlin, Ont., were not in sympathy with the sending of Candadian troops to South Africa? Let him hang his head with shame for his vile slandering of the patriotic citizens of that good town. Though there was no recruiting office opened in that centre, it did not prevent Herman Quirmbach, who for the past four years has been in the employ of the American Express company at that point, offering his services to the government, and eventually finding a place among the brave men who will constitute D battery. He wrote the minister of militia, Ottawa, for permission to go to South Africa with the second Canadian contingent, and was referred to the officer in charge at Guelph, to which place he went for medical examination. Having satisfactorily passed this, he was told to return again on Tuesday, and complete the formula. This was done, and he is now attached to the Guelph field battery. Herman is a solid young man of nineteen years, with an excellent reputation, and the citizens of Berlin showed their appreciation of him by hurriedly subscribing a purse of $100 in gold, besides which the town presented him with a $1,000 insurance policy. As a further mark of esteem the merchants and business men on King street closed their stores Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock a profession was formed, headed by the Twenty-ninth battalion band, followed by the mayor and the hero in a Gladstone, drawn by several of the townspeople to the depot, where he left for Guelph.

INCONSISTENT POLITICIANS.

Senator Mason presented in the United States senate a strong pro-Boer resolution declaring in favor of American intervention and directing the president to take steps to give it affect. The resolution was referred, without debate, to a committee that is not expected to bring in a report till some time after the war is over. The more influential section of the American press have condemned the action of the senator, and the Louisville Courier-Journal (Dem.) gives him this roast—

Stick a pin here. The men who are making the most noise denouncing the United States for leaving its continental shores to preserve peace and protect life and property in the islands of the Pacific, which the fortunes and responsibilities of war have placed in our hands, are the same men who with equal noise demand that the United States shall leave its continental shores to meddle in a war in far South Africa and gratuitously insult a friendly power by taking sides with its opponents.

They denounce the United States for attending to its own business in the Philippines, and they demand that the United States shall stick its nose and its mouth into what is none of its business in South Africa.

They denounce the United States for preventing the Philippines from falling into the hands of irresponsible assassins and savages, objecting that the Philippines are on the other side of the world, and they demand that we shall go to the other side of the world to obtrude ourselves in a quarrel between foreign belligerents and insolently affront our best friend in the family of nations.

Truly, these men have a fit spokesman in the shallow, vulgar and ignorant Mason.

The operation of traction engines in the African war by the British army will be watched with interest by military officials the world over. Mention of these engines has already been made in these columns, though no description of them was obtainable at the time. They have cylinders 7 and 11 inches in diameter and have hauled in actual tests a load of 55 tons up an incline of 1 in 12. They have large fireboxes, enabling them to burn a low grade of fuel, and also large water tanks, so that they can drag a full load for a distance of twelve miles without stopping to replenish the supply. Some of the engines are supplied with a seven-ton crane, which can be attached readily to the front of the machine, and can carry a load while the engine is being moved from place to place. The wheels have extra width, so that they can travel over soft ground, while the steering is effected by a worm and rack arrangement which has proved most successful. If these engines are successful they will greatly facilitate the operations of the army in transporting supplies from points on the railroads to the various camps miles away.

Kitchener is reported to have said that the British people were always in too much of a hurry for results in war, that the end of the Boer war wouldn't be along for a year—anyway. It seems to us it has not been the people who have been in a hurry so much as some of the generals.

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that [illegible]"

SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans

THE Canada Business College
CHATHAM, ONT.
CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This Institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

236 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

A Woman's Example.

New York, Jan. 6.—A New Haven special tells of a striking instance of bravery in which Captain John Kelsey and nine seamen of the big New Haven schooner W. Wallace Ward owe their lives to the inspiring bravery of the skipper's wife. For five days and nights the men worked at the pumps to save the vessel and then gave up in despair and lashed themselves to the rigging. Then Mrs. Kelsey rushed from the cabin and went to work herself, and her courageous example gave the men new life. They sprang to the pumps and by working with superhuuman energy kept the schooner afloat until the Norwegian steamer Themis hove in sight at the last moment and effected a rescue.

Twenty-five Killed.

New York, Jan. 6.—The Herald's Manila cable, dated yesterday, says: A brilliant reconnaissance was made to-day by Captain Long and 15 men of the Thirty-Ninth Infantry, from Brang to Carmota, to drive two hundred insurgents from their heavy intrenchments. Twenty-five of the enemy were killed. Our force was surrounded for hours but there were no casualties among the Americans. More than a hundred artillery shells, sent from gunboat Longuna de Bay, were tampered with en route from Manila. The fuses were cut so that the projectiles would explode on contact. This was evidently an attempt to destroy a launch or the gunboat when the shells were being handled. Suspicion points to spies in our service.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourn-

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

Trade in Wild Beasts.

Hamburg is a city of strange industries, but perhaps there is none more interesting than that of Mr. Carl Hagenbeck. Serving, as he does, as the collector of wild beasts for almost every menagerie in the world, he has dealings with every savage land. His agents are to-day searching Tartary working in even the rebellious Philippines. Just now he is busy organizing an expedition to Thibet. In his great garden you find crowds of wild beasts of every kind. Here are 12 polar bears, and not far off is a string of a dozen elephants, newly arrived from India. Half a hundred condors, fresh from South America, are waiting to be unpacked; scores of alligators are playing together, as though in their native Florida; while lions and tigers and panthers are stored away in almost countless numbers. Here is a baby tiger, which you can play with like a kitten; not far off is a fierce Bengal brute, striving to tear down its bars and get at you.

"You must have had some strange adventures with your animals, Mr. Hagenbeck?"

"Naturally. There was one adventure with a snake that still makes me hot and cold when I recall it. A case of rattlesnakes came to me, and noticing an unpleasant smell, I put my arms over my face for shade and peered into the case. I saw there was a dead snake there. Just then one of the rattlers jumped up and threw itself against the iron bars in an endeavor to get at me. I took no notice of it at the time, but next morning my wife drew my attention to the sleeve of my coat. The sleeve was covered with a great patch of greenish stain, the green crystals glistening on it. It was a hot summer, and my face was covered with a heat eruption. Had a little of this poison got on my face, I must inevitably have died the most horrible of all deaths."

"You must find it more difficult to get your supplies of wild animals as civilization extends?" I suggested.

"I do, for wild animals are decreasing very rapidly indeed. Variety after variety that twenty years ago was quite common, is now utterly gone, or only a few specimens left. The true mountain zebra, that not long since could be found in large numbers, has now vanished. Three South African varieties of zebras have disappeared within the last quarter century. From the wild animal hunter's point of view South Africa is now quite spoiled. Men have been so busy slaughtering merely for the sake of slaughter that the great beasts are becoming extinct. Babies and breeding females are shot down as indiscriminately as bulls. Englishmen are perhaps the worst offenders in this matter, and in the English territories the least provision is made for protecting the animals. No one objects to hunters shooting down all the bull elephants they can, but what sport can there be in their slaughtering cows and babies? This might be to some extent stopped by a regulation forbidding trading in small ivory tusks under fifteen or twelve pounds in weight.

As a specimen of how animals are disappearing, take the Sudan. Before Mahdism swept over it, it was one of our best countries. Hippopotami, elephants, the rhinoceros were all obtained there in abundance. We trained tribes for the chase. Since the land has been reopened a trader, formerly my agent, has gone there hoping to renew business. He writes to me that the old hunting tribes are gone, and that the great game have practically disappeared. He has had his journey for nothing."

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a congenial lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these four mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym to-night, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my throatiest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

Foreman Was Negligent

Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 6.—The coroner's jury in the Brazzell mine horror, after three hours' deliberation, renders a verdict that the mine foreman of said mine was negligent in failing to see that the mine was in a safe condition before permitting workmen to enter it, and that the fire boss of said mine was negligent in failing to make a daily verbal report to the mine foreman.

Past Record of Life Saving

Paine's Celery Compound Is Now and Will Ever Be the Great Home Medicine.

The past records of Paine's Celery Compound will live long in the hearts of thousands of our Canadian men and women.

They can never forget the fact that it was Paine's Celery Compound that brought back strength, health and new, vigorous life after failures with the many common advertised remedies, as well as with physicians and hospital treatment.

Amongst the most notable and marvellous records of cures effected by Paine's Celery Compound in the year just closed are the cases of thousands who had been given up by physicians as helpless.

These hopeless cases were men and women suffering from kidney and liver diseases, stomach troubles, rheumatism, nervous prostration and long standing dyspepsia—all on the brink of the dark grave.

At the eleventh hour, when hope had fled, and deep, black despondency reigned supreme, Paine's Celery Compound was recommended by some good friend as a last resort.

It did not require weeks or months for Paine's Celery Compound to show its powers and virtues. A few hours or days sufficed to convince every sufferer that he or she had in truth found a medicine that could cope with disease and death.

This past record of life saving is maintained and fortified by thousands of the strongest testimonials written by men and women now enjoying the full blessings of good health.

This glorious past record of Paine's Celery Compound as a disease banisher has given the wondrous medicine a place in the majority of the homes of Canada, where it is known as "The home physician," "The home protector against disease."

Are you a sufferer from any of the troubles mentioned above? Are you weak and nervous? Are you sleepless, despondent or morose? Have you periodical headache, poor appetite or faulty digestion? If so, try what Paine's Celery Compound can do for you. A bottle or two will give you satisfaction and delight.

Appeal to Canada

London, Jan. 6.—The Duchess of Marlborough, the Countess of Essex, Lady Georgiana Curzon, Madame Von Audre, and the leading members of the Imperial Yeomanry hospital fund, appeal to the people of the United States and Canada in behalf of their efforts to equip and maintain a hospital with a base at Cape Town.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it, and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras, or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest, and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

THE BATTLE OF BELMONT

e Description of the Attack of the British on the Enemy—Boers Attempted Treacherous Use of White Flag, But Were Shown No Mercy by Highlanders.

Battle of Belmont is thus described London Times correspondent— the road to Modder River, Nov. 26. bonfires of scented mimosa scrub lightlong choruses with spasmodic mental accompaniment hailed the or- a 4 o'clock parade on Tuesday in marching order. Life in that had been monotously alike varied only by the nature of their nforts suddenly received an impetus, welcome with which the men re- at last the order to begin the march Kimberley was universal.

the earliest grey of the morning the was astir and the clanking wagons transport were already being shoul- through the deep ruts of the sand mules before 4 o'clock. The latter was soft to our first halting place, by the northwestern route, struck the high road from Hope- four or five miles out of Orange The troops, headed by the Grena- Guards, wound out of camp in a long line some three miles long, and the line of the railway for some or nine miles. A sharp turn to the brought us to Fincham' Farm, a oasis of green, with plenty of wat- the wilderness of karroo. Here we ped and spent the night, starting early of the following afternoon elmont where a reconnaissance a earlier had assured us that the en- was to be found. Later in the day sound of guns was heard two miles and upon arriving in camp at sun- we found the place deserted and enemy reported near. Reveille was or- at half past one on the following ing, and the two brigades under Methuen moved out in silence in the . As soon as the railway was d the Northumberland Fusiliers off to the left, the Northampton and the Yorkshire light infantry oc- ng the central position of the line tack two miles long, the right of was occupied by the brigade of . One of the features of the at- was the silence with which this ex- body moved over the veldt without word spoken or a verbal order giv- excellent dressing, and without a ble or a careless clank of a bayonet fle to give an alarm. Perhaps the me caution was, in the case, super- . It became necessary, about a from the kopjes occupied by the en- to cut the wire fencing of the rail- the same fence that later in the interfered fatally with the move- of our pursuing cavalry. This was with a few sharp blows of an axe, the sound must have been audible long way. Some time before I had forward some two miles, cross- the railway near the platelayer's cot- and listened. The utter silence was only by a few distant rocks from ard; the strokes of the axe must been as audible as pistol shots. The had no pickets or patrols, and as hin attacking line drew nearer and uncertainty as to the presence of enemy mingled unpleasantly with the that if the Boer on the western reserved his fire until his enemy close he was a different and a more rous foe than the Natal sharpshoot- 2,000 yards. Still there was com- silence, until we were within 250 of the life of kopjes. Then a star hite flame and a "phit" in the ground d us told us that the hills were in- occupied. The whole line from left ght broke at once into rifle fire to- r, and a series of flashes, poured out out intermission of time or space, ned the crest of the enemy's posi- now faintly discernible in the grow- dawn.

fire was indeed hot and was ans- d as long as our men were on the but when the rocky ascent of the was reached there was no chance turning the fire, as hands and knees feet were alike used in the climb. the severest loss of the day was suf- the Grenadier Guards in the center their brigade losing here some 40 or 50 and wounded.

THE SECOND POSITION.

When we reached the top the enemy retreated to their second position, and pouring bullets into their late nghold. Lieut. Russell's was the only example among many. Seeing that his face was covered with blood I d up to him and asked him where he hurt. "Mere scratch," he answered, went on. I passed a sergeant in the Guards limping down hill as hard could; I wondered if he could keep much longer. Here and there were wounded lying in pools of blood, according to their custom, the en- had carried off most of their cases. right of the line had also been car- by this time, and the Fifth werecar- g on a sturdy assault on the left, they were losing a good many un- the well-covered fire from "Table untain." The Yorkshire light infantry ed up between the two positions to relief of the Fifth and of the Guards, were moving off the right hand spur the second position to take the third. the fire was very severe; from ev- side the bullets were showering upon m, and of cover there was practical- none. At this point the artillery op- fire, and with comparative ease the third rows of kopjes was taken, though steepest and actually the most defen- position of any, was very remark- . Here I noticed that the Guards delivering volleys, the only instance a variation of independent firing I have yet noticed. On thel eft and ire the shooting was steady on both , one small sangar with about 30 in it keeping at bay half a battal- . Eventually the usual white flag of chery was repeated, but a storm of itish bullets greeted the treacherous of the Boers, who soon surrendered crawled out unarmed. One of the dent incidents of the fight was the ath of Lieut. Blundell, of the Grena- Guards. Seeing his men firing at a n above him whose foot had been brok- by a bullet, he called out to them to firing and went forward to help Boer. The latter's only answer was raise his rifle and shoot him through body. An incident like this makes it d for the officers to keep a hand the men in battle, and these inci- have occured in every fight of the r. Col. Crabbe was wounded in a sim- way, and Mr. Knight, correspondent the Morning Post, suffered for res- ding at once to a flag of truce by ading up out of cover. Of individual llantry there was much. The cool rage of both Gen., Fetherstonaugh and l. Arthur Paget deserves more than passing mention. The quiet obedience to orders of the men was most striking, and the courage of the men then for the first time under fire promised much for the success of the march. In truth the division created by brigading the Guards with such old campaigners as the Fighting Fifth and the Yorkshirel ight infantry possesses every possible advantage that prestige, experience, and pluck can give, and the hard fight they had is witness to the tough nature of the assault.

FIRE BEGAN TO DECREASE.

"At 3.15 the firing, which from 4 o'clock had been incessant, showed some signs of decreasing, and bodies of mounted Boers crept away from the firing line and galloped away northwards. The white flag was at last shown in earnest, and a burst of cheering greeted the first success of our journey. Details as to the numbers engaged have long ago been telegraphed home. Casualities, too, have been recorded, and there is perhaps no better summing up the chief lesson of the fight than that of a corporal I heard expressing in other words, his opinion that the rules of war had not been invented to be used as weapons by unscrupulous combatants. Admiration of the pluck of men who stand up against us, sympathy with an out-of-date but undoubtedly genuine national spirit, however badly expressed, even a willingness to give them the advantage of an etiquette they in turn are certain to deny us vanish before the actual presence of these outrages, however, we had come to expect them, and the actual sight of a dying officer butchered in return for his own eagerness to help the wounded is an argument that would convince the most skeptical that the Boer race is unfit for the ascendency it claims.

"From a military point of view the experiment of carrying strong positions without previous shelling is especially, in view of recent losses in Natal, open to criticism, in spite of the fact that in this case the inevitable loss has been cheerfully accepted. Also the cavalry was not in a position to turn the defeat into a rout when called upon. Having said this much by way of criticism, it only remains to put on record the redoubled confidence in themselves with which the general's division resumed their march on the following evening, the last offices for the dead having been performed, and the last of the mimosa bonfires stamped out on the camping grounds one mile south of Belmont.

LEGS LIKE STOVEPIPES.

Kidney Irregularities Developed Into Dropsy—South American Kidney Cure Cured Him.

South American Kidney Cure is doing every day for hundreds what it did for this steamboat man out in Lincoln County. Through exposure while sailing he contracted kidney disease and in a short while dropsy developed, so that his legs swelled as large as stovepipes. Doctors held out no hope for his recovery. He was recommended to use this great kidney specific, with the result that in a few weeks' treatment he was able to resume his work again a cured man, feeling stronger and heartier than he had for years. DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION

Makes Weak Women Strong,

And Sick Women Well.

For over thirty years this celebrated remedy has been making women's lives happier—healthier—safer.

Many thousands of women have testified to its wonderful effect.

It is the one medicine that can be depended upon when there is any derangement of the distinctly feminine organism.

It purifies, heals, soothes, builds up. It is needed when backaches make life miserable—when a sickening, dragging, bearing-down feeling makes work a weary agony and play impossible—when disagreeable drains give proof of burning inflammation—when sick headache, nervous irritability, loss of energy and appetite are the reminder of unhealthful irregularity or painful periods.

"I had female trouble for eight years," writes Mrs. L. J. Dennis, of 2d East College Street, Jacksonville, Ill. "I was so bad I would lie from day to day and long for death to come and relieve my suffering. I had internal inflammation, a disagreeable drain, bearing-down pains in the lower part of my bowels, and such distress every month, but now I never have a pain —do all my own work and am a strong and healthy woman. Thanks to your medicine. I never forget to recommend it to all suffering women. I consider myself a living testimonial of the benefits of your 'Favorite Prescription.'"

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets help the effect of all other medicines by keeping the liver active and the bowels open. At all dealers—get what you ask for.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, a sing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tarateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tarateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 26 [illegible]

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

A Pleasing Event.

Mr. Harry Beal, the genial and popular accountant of the Light and Power Company, was the recipient of a handsome oak secretary from the employees of the company on the occasion of his marriage. The gift is one that Mr. and Mrs. Beal appreciate highly.

Man Wanted.

Who will take the contract at $300 per year for the delivery of the Morning Times in town. Delivery must be made between 6 and 8 o'clock a.m., in winter, and 5 and 7 in summer. This is a good job for a man with two or more boys of his own who are going to school. Apply at Times Bookstore.

A Low Scoundrel.

There is a man who is making it a business to hang around dark streets in the early evenings in wait for lone women. Recently the fellow accosted a Water street lady, above the post office, and insisted on walking beside her. She escaped by running in the opposite direction, only to find the fellow waiting for her at the next corner. The fellow wears an ulster overcoat, and a cloth cap, and his face is covered with whiskers, clipped short. The police should be on the look out for him.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c, Times Bookstore.

THE BIG POULTRY SHOW.

Bright Outlook for the Ontario Poultry Show Which Opens To-day.

Everything is ready to receive birds, quite a large number arrived last night, and they will be nearly all in this morning. A carload came in by C. P. R. from London at midnight. Mr. and Mrs. Yuill have arrived with the English cramming machine, and will give exhibitions of it's working at two and five o'clock p. m., and at 10.30 a. m. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert will also give practical illustrations in the proper way of killing, dressing and drawing of poultry, including ducks and geese on Wednesday and Thursday at 10 a. m. till noon. These will be very instructive features of the show, which along with the beautiful living specimens that will be on exhibition, should induce every one to see the show. The exhibition has been brought to our town only through the strenuous efforts of the lical Association, the members of which will feel amply repaid if they receive recognition of thier work by a large attendance.

14 battery. He suggested that the assistance be direct rather than in the line of insurance. The men were deserving of it and the money would be judiciously expended. He also suggested that it would be well for the Council to donate something to the Red Cross fund.

The Chaplain, Rev. J. C. Davidson, spoke on the same subject. If the dignity of the town is to be maintained the town must recognise the fact that some of its citizens have gone out to South Africa. They go forth as citizens of the town. Any grant to them would be very properly given.

Action is Appreciated.

Mayor Kendrey explained that he had referred to the matter in his inaugural address and he was sure the Council would do what was right. Ald. Dawson spoke a few words eulogistic of the bravery and heroism shown by our Canadian volunteers. Their names would go down to history He moved that the Mayor present each man with $25 in gold. Ald. Weir endorsed everything that had been said. There is no class of men more deserving of support and recognition than the volunteers. Peterborough should not go behind the other towns. He seconded Ald. Dawson's motion.

More Liberality.

Mayor Kendrey went one better. The present occasion is a matter calling for genuine liberality. He suggested that a grant say of $300, be appropriated for the men.

Ald. Rogers also stated that there would likely be further applications for assistance and it would be better to leave the matter with a commitee to deal with. There was a lot to be considered in the matter and he moved that it be referred to a committee.

After some further discussion it was decided that the matter be left over till later to be finally dealt with.

Congratulated the Mayor.

Ald. Roger suggested, that Ald. Denne, as the oldest alderman might reply to the Mayor's address.

Ald. Denne made a short speech, stating that on behalf of the Council it afforded him much pleasure to congratulate the Mayor on his election. After listening to the Mayor's address he trusted that the work would all be done harmoniously and expeditiously and that the year would be a progressive one in the town's history.

Mayor Kendrey thanked the Council for their manifestation of good feeling.

The Council adjourned to strike the standing committees for the year.

Solicitor's Disbursements.

Moved by Ald. Dawson, seconded by Mayor Kendrey that the Town Solicitor's disbursements in connection with the pavement investigation and his yearly salary as usual be paid.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Robertson, seconded by Ald. Dawson, that $250 be granted the Mayor for contingent expenses.

The Volunteer's Grant.

Moved by Ald. Dawson, seconded by Ald. Robertson, that $25 be granted to each of the volunteers from town, and $50 to Major Greenwood.—Carried.

The Council adjourned until evening.

EVENING SESSION.

Town Council resumed its session last night, when there were present Mayor Kendry, and Alds. Corkery, Denne, Robertson, Clinkscale, Dawson, Weir, Oke, Sawers and Roger.

The minutes of the morning session were read and confirmed.

Accounts.

The following accounts were presented and referred to the Finance Committee—

Committee of the Whole.

Gentlemen,—Your Committee of the Whole Council appointed to strike the Standing Committees and to which other matters were referred, beg leave to report and recommend as follows—

1. That the Standing Committees be composed as follows—

Finance—Ald. Denne, Corkery, Robertson, Clinkscale, Roger, Dawson, Weir, Oke and Sawers.

Board of Works—Ald. Roger, Corkery, Denne, Clinkscale, Robertson, Dawson, Weir, Oke and Sawers.

Manufactures and Railways—Ald. Corkery, Denne, Robertson, Clinkscale, Roger, Dawson, Weir, Oke and Sawers.

Fire, Water and Light—Ald. Dawson, Robertson, Sawers, Clinkscale and Oke.

Appointments and Licenses—Ald. Weir, Corkery, Sawers and Dawson.

Property, Building and Market—Ald. Clinkscale, Oke, Denne and Roger.

Court of Revision—Ald. Sawers, Roger, Weir, Clinkscale and Corkery.

Joint with Couty—Ald. Oke, Clinnkscale, Robertson, Denne, Sawers and Roger.

2. That the first named on each committee be the chairman there of, and that four members constitute a quorum for the Finance, Board of Works and Manufactures and Railway Committees.

3. That the Town Solicitor's disbursements in connection with the pavement investigation, and his yearly salry as usual, be paid.

4. That a grant of $250 be made to the Mayor to meet the contingent expenses of his office.

5. That $25 each be granted to Messrs. Trussler, Hall, Spence, Boyle and Turner, and $50 to Major Greenwood, who are going to South Africa with the second Canadian contingent, and that these grants be presented by the Mayor to Major Greenwood.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

T. H. G. Denne, chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

E. B. Edwards Re-appointed.

Ald. Robertson introduced a by-law respecting the office of the town solicitor. This by-law provides that Mr. E. B. Edwards be re-engaged at a salry of $500 per annum, together with the receipt of all taxable costs as between party and party in which the town has been successful and all the disbursements in connection with his duties.

This by-law passed its several readings.

Board of Health and School Trustees.

Ald. Weir introduced a by-law to provide High School Trustees and members of the Board of Health. Dr. Caldwell and W. G. Ferguson, the retiring trustees, were re-appointed, and Messrs. Jno. Macpherson and John P. Metheral were appointed members of the Board of Health.

$500 for Children's Aid.

Ald. Denne fathered a by-law authorizing a grant of $300 to the Children's Aid Society, which passed its several readings.

Town Officials to Report.

Ald. Roger moved, seconded by Ald. Oke,—That all town officials and heads of departments be requested to report to this council with as little delay as possible upon the condition of things in their several departments, and if any unsettled business, contracts, liabilities, or property of the town connected therewith, and such recommendations as they may desire to make concerning the same; and especially that the engineer make such reports upon oustanding granolithic and sewer contracts as shall enable this council to make speedy and conclusive disposition of them.—Carried.

Ald. Roger moved, seconded by Ald. Oke,—That it be referred to the Finance Committee to enquire and report as to the sufficiency of the securities held by the town for the performance of their duties by its various offices; and that it be referred to the Property Committee to examine and report as to the sufficiency of current insurances upon the various properties of the town.—Carried.

First Instalment to be Paid.

On motion of Ald. Denne, the secretary was authorized to comply with the request of Secretary Morrow, and issue a cheque for the first instalment of the School Board's demand.

To be Paid Twice a Month.

On motion of Ald. Denne it was decided that the drivers of the Fire Department be paid on the 15th and last of each month.

Our Debenture Debt.

Mayor Kendry addressed his colleagues on the question of the town's liabilities, and thought that in face of the heavy debenture debt lately incurred it would be expedient for the Council to retrench as far as practicable during the year 1900.

Ald. Denne took the opportunity of remarking, that while the debenture debt of 1894 was only $246,000, as against $326,000 for 1899, it must be borne in mind that $86,000 debenture debt has been incurred in the construction of sewers, and $20,000 for sidewalks. This year our debenture debt, payable by the whole town, will be $30,000 less than that of 1894. The Council was also pleased to learn from our very capable chairman of the Finance Committee that the per capita tax of Peterborough is lower than that of any other town in the province, and that last year our debentures sold at par at 2 1-2 a cent better than those of Ottawa, Toronto and Motreal.

Council then adjourned.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Hon. J. R. Stratton is making a careful personal inspection of the different public institutions in the province.

Miss Rachael Ferguson, who was so cruelly murdered in Toronto a few days ago, formerly resided in Port Hope. She is well known by many in Peterborough.

A number of Orillia citizens have organized a new industry, to be known as the Canada Wood Specialty Co. They will instal a modern plant for the manufacture of wood specialties for the European market. It's a good sign when home men invest their surplus capital in new industries.

The Canadian contingent has only taken one laager since their arrival in South Africa. If they were at home it is safe to say they would have taken several barrels before this.

Mr. Robert Stewart purchased several car loads of hogs on Fridayl ast for the Matthews Co.

Belleville horsemen will hold an ice meet on the 16th and 17th. The first day there will be a 25 class and a 3 minute class. The second day—35 class and a free for all.

Tramps are almost unknown in Peterborough.

Major Greenwood is expected to arrive in town to-day, and will remain until Thursday.

Mr. "Van." Raper, an ex-member of the Q. O. R., Toronto, and a native of Millbrook, and of late a resident of Johannesburg, S.A.R., has been appointed corporal of "E" Company, Prince Alfred Guards, South African F. F., Port Elizabeth, Cape of Good Hope.

The Aikes and her ten canoe have been purchased from Mr. J. M. Knowlson by Mr. W. T. C. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon. While nothing definite is known, it is believed that Mr. Boyd will have the craft refitted in handsome style for the tourist trade, and will place the boat on the route between Bobcaygeon and Lakefield in connection with the Grand Trunk railway. Before and after the tourist season the steamer will be kept busy towing.

PERSONALS.

Mr. Wes. Milburn returned to Trinity Medical University yesterday.

Mr. C. A. Barton and wife have returned to take up their residence in town.

Miss Annie O'Neil is home from Simcoe.

Mr. Jack Meager of the Canadian General works has taken a position in Toronto.

Messrs. W. J. Paterson and Ben Simpson returned to Queen's university yesterday to resume their studies

Miss Kate Carveth, of Millbrook, returned home Saturday evening after a visit with Mr. H. C. Winon.

London, Jan. 10.

despatch to the Daily Chronicle, ated Frere Camp, Sunday afternoon t 2.30 o'clock says: "There has been o bombardment of Ladysmith, nor ny shelling at Chieveley by the ritish guns."

London, Jan. 10, 4.30 a.m.

e War Office has not contributed the east particulars as to what is taking place in Natal since Sunday. Neither has it allowed the despatches of correspondents to get through. Consequently the facts of the situation are replaced by conjectures and the impatience of the public forces itself into a discussion of the conduct of the war and of what might have been done or ought to be done now.

e Morning Post demands that the forces afield, afloat and in preparation shall be increased by 65,000 men. To this end it urges that all the trained men the country possesses, militia and volunteers, shall be called out, asserting incidentally that, although the attitude of other powers is correct in the diplomatic sense of the word, invasion if attempted would be sudden and that now is the time to apprehend contingencies.

WILL BE TRIED AS REBELS.

London, Jan. 9.—The prisoners ptured by the Canadians and Queens nders at Sunnyside are going to Cape own for trial as rebels. The Canadians expressed intense indignation n learning that the prisoners were ritish subjects.

EXTENDING THEIR WORKS.

London, Jan. 9.—Advices from the odder River say the Boers continue extend their works, and it is estimated that 30,000 men are required defend them.

KILLED AND WOUNDED.

London, Jan. 9.—Little change was pparent to-day in the position at olesberg. General French reported the War Office on Sunday morning, an. 7, that he had reconnoitered with squadron of the Household cavalry n the Boers east flank, two miles rom Achterang, and drawn a considerable force of the burghers, who, eing anxious for their communications with Norvals Pont, withdrew.

The casualties of the Suffolks, near olesberg, when a whole company as captured owing to a false order retreat being given, were:

Killed—Colonel Watson and Lieutenants Wilkins, Carey and White, and twenty-three men; Missing—Captains Brett, Thomson and Brown, and Lieutenants Allen, Wood-Martin and Butler, and 107 men.

Wounded—21 men.

General French reports that the casualties of the other regiments to Jan. 4 were 12 men killed and 44 wounded.

ALL QUIET AT FRERE.

London, Jan. 9.—The Queen has telegraphed her congratulations and thanks to General White and the troops at Ladysmith.

A despatch from Frere Camp late on Sunday night said all was quiet there, thus dispelling the widespread hopes that General Buller had followed up his demonstration before Colenso with an effective move elsewhere.

AWAITING NEWS FROM WHITE.

London, Jan. 9.—Further news of General White's victory is anxiously awaited. The remarkable revolution in Boer tactics has been another complete surprise to the British, who had not reckoned on the weakened garrison of Ladysmith being subjected to such a courageous assault, and it is realized that General White's troops cannot be expected to prolong to any great extent such an arduous defence. In some quarters it is considered unaccountable that General Buller did not press his attempt to effect a passage of the Tugela river while the Boers were engaged northwards, and the comments on his failure to do so are nowise complimentary.

BULLER BUILDS A RAILROAD.

London, Jan. 9.—From the Boer headquarters it is reported that Gen. Buller is constructing a subsidiary railroad from the main line to Colenso westwardly in the direction of Potgietersdrift.

BREACH OF NEUTRALITY.

London, Jan. 9.—The London Times' correspondent at Lorenzo Marquez cables that although there is no guarantee that Transvaal gold is of standard value the Portuguese Government compels the local banks to accept it as legal tender at the same rate as British sovereigns, "thus giving the republics every facility for extensive transactions here and remitting money to Europe."

Continuing the correspondent says "It is questioned whether the Portuguese order is not a breach of neutrality."

PREPARING TO EVACUATE.

London, Jan. 9.—The latest news from Bloemfontein says the officials there recognize that they must evacuate the town at an early date and are securing houses at Pretoria.

It is also announced that the hospitals at Bloemfontein and elsewhere are packed with wounded men.

FIRED UPON A DUTCH CRUISER.

London, Jan. 9.—It is announced in a special despatch from Amsterdam to-day that an uncredited rumor is current there that a British cruiser has fired upon the Dutch cruiser Friesland near Delagoa Bay, and that a Dutch officer was killed.

BRITISH VIGILANCE EVADED

London, Jan. 9.—The Boer Agents, according to the Cairo correspondent of the Daily Mail, are evading British vigilance respecting the importation of ammunition. The correspondent says: A large quantity of quick-firing ammunition goes to Ras Jouboutil, from which point it is conveyed by dhows along the coast or transhipped to vessels bound for Portuguese prots in East Africa. French steamers touching at Ras Jiboutil before reaching Aden connive to evade search by transhipping at Madagascar to steamers apparently not connected with European lines. In this way they escaped suspicion.

BOERS' ARROGANCE.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 9.—It was learned conclusively by the State Department yesterday that the South African Republic will not recognize the United States Consul at Pretoria as the representative of British interests during the war in the Transvaal. The information is, however, that the refusal of the South African authorities is not based on unfriendliness to the Consul or to the United States, the declination resting rather on the broad ground that the Boers wish to recognize no representative whatever of British affairs during the hostilities.

The information came in a cable despatch from Mr. Hollis, Acting Consul at Pretoria. The stand taken by the Transvaal has made a deep impression. It is characterized as a rank violation of the common practice among civilized nations in time of war, and as an indication of total disregard of international law.

In his message Mr. Hollis further states that he would be granted the privilege of going among the British prisoners as a private individual, but would not be permitted to act in any way as British representative. The Boers declared to him that they did not propose to tolerate a British representative of any nationality within the limits of the republic.

The conclusion at the State Department, of course, is that Mr. Hollis, in the enjoyment of the special privileges thus accorded to him, will be expected to act strictly as neutral. This precludes, without doubt, the possibility of his providing any information to the British Government in reference to the condition of the prisoners.

From the evident temper of the Boers it is believed here that Mr. Hollis will be very closely watched. The incident is regarded by the State Department as the strongest evidence of Boer arrogance and intolerance that has yet come to this Government. Under the circumstances the arrival of Consul Macrum in Washington, with the information he is supposed to possess, is awaited more eagerly than ever.

ENGLAND'S LONG RANGE GUN.

A Gun That Will Cover the Channel from England to France

London, Jan. 9.—In accordance with the recommendation of Parliament, writes a Woolwich correspondent, the British navy is being strengthened by the addition of a new gun which will insure the supremacy of Great Britain over the seas for many years to come. It is known as the 12-inch steel and wire gun, and is not only the best weapon which the royal navy has ever had, but is far superior to any gun possessed by any foreign navy.

It weighs fifty tons, is forty-one feet long, has a muzzle velocity of 2,367 feet per second. The projectile weights 850 pounds, the bursting charge being eighty-three pounds and the firing charge 167 1/2 pounds of cordite.

The admiralty has ordered 450 at a cost of $50,000. Of these 150 have been completed and 300 are still in the hands of the contractors.

Each man-of-war will carry four of these formidable weapons, and when the navy is supplied they will be issued to forts on the sea front. The new gun will be the heaviest in the service and will take the place of the 110-ton, 100-ton and 80-ton guns, of which no more are to be made.

The best Krupp gun can fire a shot twelve and a half miles, and the United States Government is constructing at its arsenal at Watervliet a monster gun, which, it is said, will carry a heavy shot twenty-one miles. The new British naval gun, though less than half the weight of the American weapon, mounted on the heights of Dover, can, however, drop a shell on the shores of France. No accuracy of aim could, of course, be obtained at this long distance, the effective range being 14,000 yards, or between nine and ten miles.

BROKE AND RAN AWAY.

London, Jan. 9.—The most appalling battle picture, from a British point of view, yet painted by a correspondent in the field comes by mail from J. B. Whigham, the representative of the Morning Post with Methuen's column. It shows the collapse of the Highland Brigade at Magersfontein. Describing the effect of the unexpected Boer fire when the brigade was just about deploying from the quarter column Whigham writes—

'Someone shouted 'Retire,' and the day was lost. The Highlanders broke. In a few minutes the brigade had been decimated, and the issue decided. They did not run far, only a few hundred yards, but when they rallied they were shaken and confused for hours. They lay flat on the ground between the British guns and Boer trenches.

"About 2 o'clock the Boer rifle fire greatly increased. Simultaneously the brigade was seen in full retreat. Back they came in a wave. No officer could stop it. It was perhaps the most unpleasant sight a British soldier has ever beheld, certainly a sight never to be forgotten.

"It is difficult to say what happened next until Major Ewart rode up with an order from General Methuen, which was almost an entreaty to the effect that all he asked of the brigade was to hold the position until dark. So riddled and shattered was the brigade that Major Ewart had actually no other officer to help him to give orders to the scattered men. It was no small thing to ask of the Highlanders that they should again face a galling fire for five mortal hours. Still, a very raid rally was effected. The pipers played somewhat dolefully, and the brigade at last got back to the spot where it had a certain amount of cover.

"There the men lay until the Boer guns, till then absolutely silent, suddenly came into play. It wanted but this last straw to break the nerve of the rallying Highlanders. When the first shrapnel was fired what remained of the brigade with one accord came right back as far as the field hospital, hopelessly beaten for the day. They wer enot fit even to guard baggage. They had lost 57 officers killed or wounded. Could human nature stand more?

The Highlanders who fought at Magersfontein with Lord Methuen were the Highland Brigade and the Gordons.

ROUGH RIDERS AT A PREMIUM.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—To-day Lieut.-Colonel Grasett, Chief of Police, received a cablegram from Major Hamilton Merritt, of Toronto, who is with the Imperial forces in South Africa, saying that Brabant's Horse wanted 200 Canadian Rough Riders and offering five shillings per day, all accoutrements, uniforms and mounts to be supplied free to volunteers.

The allowance is exceedingly liberal when it is considered that the pau in the British cavalry regiments is only one shilling a day. The only difficulty in the way of securing recruits for Brabant's famous command is that enlistment must take place at East London, South Africa.

Canadians who join Braban's force might possibly see active service even more speedily than the second contingent. The force is attached to General Gatacre's command.

The message was wired on to Kingston to the Royal Military College, as the eight lieutenants mentioned in the despatch could easily be chosen from the cadets there.

The wording of the cablegram is as follows—

Brabant's Horse will enroll 200 eligible Canadian cavalrymen, to be landed at East London within two months. Pay, five shillings. Also eight lieutenants. Everything found.

TO OUTFLANK BOERS.

London, Jan. 9.—Respecting General Buller's demonstration, there is one division only at Chievely, another at Frere and a third at Estcourt. As Chieveley is 7 miles from Colenso, the second division would have to march 12 miles to get into action, and the third division 22 miles. General Buller's 30,000 men and 70 guns were therefore almost inactive on Saturday, and when Gen. White heliographed, General Buller could really make no move but an ineffective demonstration.

The list of brigades, battalions and batteries mentioned by General Buller tends, however, to prove that a large portion of his army was massed for operations in some other quarter, either on the enemy's right or left flank. Military men were confident that General Buller's advance had been ordered during the day, if it had not been previously in progress, in the direction of Springfield or Weenen and the Lower Tugela.

The Rome correspondent of the London Daily Mail says—"It is reported here on good authority that Great Britain has ordered a number of guns at the Terni foundry, and that Senator Breda, manager of the foundry, has promised them with the utmost expedition.

Tried for Murder.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—Henry Williams, who is charged with the murder of John E. Varcoe, the Queen street east grocer, on November 9, 1899, was arraigned before Chief Justice Meredith at the Assizes this morning and pleaded not guilty.

Williams has improved vastly in appearance since his committal. His trial will begin to-morrow morning, and he will go into the witness box in his own defence.

John O'Grady, charged with attempting to shoot Peter Small, on November 17, was also arraigned and pleaded not guilty.

The Boer War Has Brought tne Two Countries Closer.

BLOOD THICKER THAN WATER

A Time's Correspondent Investigates and we Give the Truth as It Is.

A Grist of News Interesting to Canadians —How Uncle Sam Regards the Mother Land—Other Interesting Matter.

(Special to the Times, from our correspondent.)

Washington, Jan. 9.—Popular feeling in regard to the Boer war is rapidly veering around in this country. Despite misleading statements to the contrary continually published in Canada and Great Britain, public sentiment here heretofore has always been on the side of the Boers, both because they constituted a so-called republic and because of the disproportionate size of the combatants. But this feeling has been somewhat like that of a man who sees his brother engaged in a fight of which he does not approve. He would not be sorry if the brother got pretty well punched to teach him not to be so hasty the next time, but he would also feel much disposed to take off his coat and go in, if there seemed to be any danger of the brother getting the worst of it. During our war with Spain, Canada seemed to feel about the same way. It considered that we were altogether too cocky and wanted us punished, but not defeated.

As long as England is merely fighting the Boers, she will meet with lots of opposition in this country, but as soon as any European power attempts to chip in, the world will be astonished by the depth of pro-English sentiment that will develop in this country. Blood is a good deal thicker than water, and most Americans realize that the preservation of their own race ascendency depends on the ultimate victory of England.

The close relationship between this country and England was shown at the recent New Year's reception at the White House, when the entire British embassy was present. The Right Honorable Lord Pauncefote of Preston, G.C.B., G.M.G., dean of the diplomatic corps, was accompanied by Lady Pauncefote and their four daughters; Mr. Gerald A. Lowther, first secretary; Captain Charles L. Ottley, R.N., and Mrs. Ottley; Lieutenant Colonel A. H. Lee, R.A., military attache, and Mrs. Lee, his American bride; Mr. C. N. E. Eliot, C.B., second secretary; Mr. W. G. Max Muller, second secretary; Mr. Robert Bromley and Mr. Arthur E. O. Humphrey's Owen, honorary attaches.

The good feeling between the two countries was also emphasized by the pleasure that was expressed at the fact that Mr. Eliot, of the embassy, had recently been made a knight of the order of the fighting saints, St. Michael and St. George. Mr. Eliot's management of the Samoan difficulty, when he represented England as commissioner to those islands last winter, was such as to win for him the warmest official commendation of the United States government, and to make him popular throughout the country.

THE FENIAN INVASION.

A good many Canadians turn up at Washington from time to time. The latest arrival is Mr. Edward McKenzie, of Montreal, who was somehwat amused when asked what Canada thought of the alleged Fenian invasion of that country. "It is all newspaper talk," he said, "and Canadians are losing no sleep on account of it. We know from what source it emanates, and are well satisfied with the knowledge that the fiery warriors who are going to devour Canada blood raw are wind-jammers of the eighteen-carat variety, and that their talk of gore is guff. A few hot-headed individuals, who have deluded themselves into thinking that they have a grievance against England, no doubt realize that this would be a fine time to add to the complications of Great Britain by the invasion of the Dominion and hence the incentive of the raid. But they will take it out in talk.

ENGLAND'S POWER SUPREME.

Another interesting visitor to the Capital during the past week, was Mr. P. Laby, of Manchester, England, who talked entertainingly of the Boer war. "The end of the war will undoubtedly see England supreme all the way from the Cape to the Zambezi," he said. "The Boers had every advantage in men, munitions and position at the outset, and they have won a few battles. But Britain's sea power will enable her to win in the end. Although the navy may not fire a single shot during the war, victory will be due to it, not only because it will make possible the transport of unlimited troops and munitions, but because it will prevent any European nation from taking part, no matter how much they may wish to do so."

AMERICAN CAPITAL IN QUEBEC.

U. S. Consul Almar F. Dickson, has reported to the State Department here that a company has been formed at Gaspe Basin, Quebec, to carry on the oil boring business there. The consul does not expect much from the venture, as he says that 22 wells have been sunk in the last ten years, and that in only one has oil been found, and in that one it has been exhausted. He concludes—"I have conversed with several oil experts during the past five years, and they inform me that the sand and gravel here are not suited to oil, and that the dip of the rock is altogether wrong. This, they say, should be about 50 feet to the mile, and it is about 1,000 feet to the mile in most places where wells have been put down in this vicinity."

WOOD PULP.

Representative Shackleford, of Missouri, has introduced into Congress a bill placing on the free list all wood pulp suitable for or adapted to the manufacture of printing paper, and all printing paper suitable for or adapted to the printing of newspapers, periodicals, or books. Wood pulp is extensively manufactured in Canada.

THE NEW GOLD FIELDS.

Information as to the riches of Cape Nome, in Alaska, continues to come in. The last arrival from that part of the world is K. M. Jackson, who says that the spot is just as rich in gold as it has been represented, and by next summer there will be 25,000 people at work there. He thinks that the resources of the locality have scarcely been scratched over, and that there are untold millions yet to be taken from Mother Earth.

FENIANS ACTIVE IN TROY.

Spies in the Employ of the English Government Watching Their Movements.

Troy, Jan. 9.—For the past two weeks spies in the employ of the English Government have been in this city watching the Irish organization. Troy was the centre of the Fenian movement in 1866, and a strong organization left this city and entered Canada at that time, participating in the battle of Limestone Ridge. Local Irishmen are outspoken in their sympathy for the Boers, and declare that the time is ripe for a blow at their country' oppressors. The Hiberian Knights, at a recent meeting, voted a sum of money to aid the Boers. This organization is well drilled and equipped with rifles. An officer of the organization said to-day—

"Our society is with the enemies of England at all times and will assist them in any possible way. We are aware of the presence of British spies in Troy. One actually gained admission to our organization and attended two meetings before his identity was discovered. We are not making public what we are doing or what we purpose doing, but we are willing to aid the Boers in any way, even to the extent of a run to Canada.

Another Outrage.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—Another outrage was perpetrated in the East End last night, the victim on this occasion being John F. Willis, the little son of Patrol Sergt. Willis, of No. 4 Police division. At half past seven o'clock last night he started from his home at 67 Elliott street to attend the bugle practice of the St. John's Presbyterian church Boys' Brigade. On his way he called at Mrs. Hyne's store on Broadview avenue for a very short time. On leaving there he met started down Broadview avenue towards Queen street. When opposite Sam. H. Dafries' place he was struck senseless by a man who stood near him on the sidewalk and who had one or two companions. They carried him into the adjacent lot, rammed his own handkerchief into his mouth, put a rope around his neck and tied his hands and ankles.

At 8 o'clock Mrs. Dafries heard him moaning and she and her husband went out to investigate. They found him, and brought him in and sent for Dr. G. B. Fraser. The robbers had stolen a dollar, but his watch and other trinklets were found near the scene of the struggle. His cheek bone was fractured, but his injuries will not prove very serious.

The police are at work on the case.

Coolness Saved Firemen.

New York, Jan. 9.—Nothing but ruins were left to-day of the Edison electric plant or reservoir at 45 West [illegible] street.

Harry Pond, chief electrician, for the electric company, played the part of a hero. A piece of machinery was blown to fragments. That Pond was not killed is remarkable. Scrambling to his feet he found the interior of the plant blazing in a hundred places. Pond knew that with the great electric current still in full flow the first stream of water to touch the blazing interior might mean instant death to the firemen at the hose.

With infinite difficulty Pond crawled on hands and knees and turned off the alternating switches, but it was beyond his powers to reach the transformer. In the midst of his endeavors he heard the engines arrive. Rushing to the street he yelled "No water, for God's sake, men, no water."

The warning was not an instant too soon. Pond explained the situation and the building was permitted to blaze away.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

In Toronto on Monday the Peterborough Seniors succumbed to the Wellingtons by the score of 7 goals to 2. The Toronto papers describe the game as very fast and state that the score is no indication of the game.

By all accounts the game was pretty evenly contested, althoug the score was so one sided. Two or three good judges say that if the Peterborough centre had been properly looked after the game would have been very close.

If the committee in charge would put Bellegham at centre instead of Crowley it would immensely strengthen the team.

Curling.

The curling team wants a shaking up, in fact both clubs seem to be half dead. It is to be hoped that the roarin' game will not be allowed to fall into decay here.

Yachting.

It was reported that Lipton had issued another challenge for the America cup; but in an interview on Saturday he said that the report was premature. He said that there was plenty of time and that he would wait until he knew definitely that no one else was desirous of contesting, but if no one else came forward during the next three months he would issue a challenge.

It is to be hoped that Sir Thomas will be the next challenger, for his course during the trying time last October in New York was so straightforward and manly that he won the hearts of all true citizens of our neighboring republic. In fact, so great was the furore caused by the course he pursued that the voluntary contributions towards a loving cup were so many that the committee in charge of the arrangements are having a gold cup made, the amount being too large for a silver cup.

The Ring.

The fight between Dickson and McGovern in New York last night for the featherweight championship of the world, resulted in a victory for McGovern in the 8th round.

PETERBOROUGH, DECEMBER 27, 1899

ENGLAND'S NAVAL ASCENDANCY.

In a recent issue appeared a portion of an interview between M. Jules Huret, of the Paris Figaro, and ex-Marine Minister Lockroy, regarding the naval ascendancy of the British nation. The following is the portion omitted and which has now come to hand —

"On all the seas out fleet finds itself before an English fleet double or triple in number and commanded by young officers. In all the seas the English have points d'appui, that is to say, ports where they can replenish their coal, repair damages and find both food and munitions. We have nothing, or almost nothing, in comparison. In the Mediterranean, outside of Toulon, we have little or nothing that amounts to anything. And just fancy what would be the condition of a wounded fleet, after a fight off the coast Algeria, for example, obliged in order to repair its damages, to cross the entire Mediterranean, at the risk of being blown to pieces! The English on one side have Gibraltar and on the other side Malta. We might have something in Corsica and Bizerte or in Tunis. But there is no port of defence in Corsica, and Bizerte has only twenty-four guns. These twenty-four guns could fire six shots a minute, against two or three hundred shots from the English fleet, if it wanted to force the passage. Of course, I know very well that the English would not try to do that, because the entrance of Bizerte is like that of Santiago; a fleet once entered there could be bottled up by the sinking of one or two old ships. But the same thing would be true in our case. If our fleet took refuge there, the English would blockade it and demolish it at their ease.

"We are not now in the days of Nelson, when it was possible for him to take refuge in the Bay of Sardinia, with a fleet of sailing ships, to cut down trees to strengthen his wooden ships, to make powder out of saltpetre taken from the humid grottos to fashion projectiles with old melted iron and then to return to Aboukir or Trafalgar. To-day to have a fleet is nothing; it is merely a thing for show. The thing necessary is to have for that fleet coaling stations in all parts of the world. A fleet without such a station is, as Admiral Vallon said, like a "goat tied to a stake. The cord that holds her may be more or less long, but there she is tied. A fleet in such a fix would be obliged to turn round its coaling station, without running the risk of going too far, for woe to it if it should get separated from that coaling station by the enemy.

"Now, look at our situation in the Atlantic. We have Dakar, which is indispensable to us in case war should be declared and the Suez Canal closed—and it would be closed, beyond a doubt—for the supplies of our vessels on the way to Indo-China. But Dakar, with Martinique in front, which might serve as a base of operations for our cruisers to prey upon commerce and give us an immense advantage, is not defended as it should be. It would only be a mouthful for a small portion of the English fleet. The same may be said of Diego-Suarez and Noumea. When the Fashoda affair broke out none of these indispensable stations was protected by moveable defences. There was not even a torpedo boat. The land batteries did not exist, or were useless for service.

"Worse than that, in the case of the military ports it was the same thing; they were not properly garrisoned, and the arsenals were not sufficiently supplied. There were no lighters and no searchlights, no tugs and no rapid-firing guns. At Brest out of 254 cannons scarcely 52 were serviceable.

"In case of war with England, it would be impossible for us to communicate with our colonies, because almost all the cables are in the possession of England. She has 314,000 kilometres of submarine cables. We have only 17,000 kilometres. The English, therefore, could capture our colonies. Madagascar or Indo China might be invaded without our knowledge anything about it than what it would please our enemies to tell us. We would be thrown back to the days of Bailli de Suffren; we would have to wait entire months to get news. England has stations connected by telegraph on all the great strategic and commercial routes of the sea. Admirably defended and organized, she is ready to make war upon the entire universe.

BEST MOUNTED POLICE FORCE IN THE WORLD.

NORTHWEST MOUNTED POLICE FORCE AT HEAD OF THEIR CLASS.

One Patrol of 2,172 Miles. Interesting Description of the Men Who Maintain Law and Order Over a Vast Territory.

The Northwest mounted Police, many of whom are going to fight for the Empire in Africa, are a distinguished body. Throughout a territory of seven times greater than the whole of France law and order are maintained by a corps of only some eight hundred men, officially known as the Northwest Mounted Police of Canada, but familiarly known as the "Riders of the Plains." The corps combine the features of a military force with those of a constabulary. Its duties are as varied as the country patrolled. Essentially the riders are soldiers, but they act as magistrates, sherrifs, detectives, town constables, customs officers, license inspectors, fire wardens, court clerks, Crown timber agents, health officers, hide inspectors, game wardens, relief officers, Crown prosecutors, food inspectors and mail carriers. By their discipline and proficiency, by their valor and impartiality, by their hardihood and discretion, and by their soldierly and gentlemanly bearing they have not only won the respect of all the classes they daily come in contact with, but they have acquired abroad the reputation of being one of the finest forces in the world. And they live up to it. Romance and hard work ride side byside in the service. It is the stamping ground of adventurous spirits drawn from many countries, and the passwords are intelligence, stamina and pluck.

FOLLOW THE TRAILS.

They follow the mountain trails. By railroad train or steamboat they go from town to village. They follow the shores of the lake and river. They penetrate the snow mantled forests, and to make accessible some new found Eldorado they cut their way through an unexplored wilderness. Like the meshes of a gigantic net their patrol trails cover a country that measures a thousand miles from east to west and two thousand miles from north to south. In fact, one patrol alone—that from Fort Saskatchewan, in Alberta, to Fort Resolution, on Great Slave Lake; thence to Fort Simpson, on the Mackenzie River, and return via Lesser Slave Lake—covers a distance of 2,172 miles. The patrolling party runs the greater part of the distance on snowshoes and covers the remainder with canoe and paddle. To give an idea of the tremendous distance travelled by members of the force here is an instance of an officer who, in the course of his regular duties as assistant commissioner during but a single year travelled a total distance of 15,181 miles, 10,461 miles of which were by rail, 900 miles by water, 3,620 miles with horses and 200 miles on snowshoes. By a splendid system of connecting patrols almost every settler in the Northwest Territory is periodically visited by the police.

INVESTIGATE SETTLERS' WOES.

If he has any complaints he makes them in writing, and signs the constable's patrol report, which at the end of the beat is turned over to the non com. officer. It is then forwarded with the non-com.'s weekly report to the officer in charge of the division. Complaints are promptly investigated. In this way the force keeps constantly in touch with the scattered population, which, in return, readily give every assistance to the police. It is principally owing to this strong spirit of cordiality existing between settler and trooper that a mere handful of men can enforce law and order in a country three-fourths the size of Russia.

GREAT CHARACTERS.

It would be difficult to find in any corps in the world an assemblage of characters more varied than to be met with in the ranks of the Northwest Mounted Police. On the past and present payrolls may be read the name of novelists, "broncho busters," Lords, "river drivers," artists, bushwhackers, lawyers, dog drivers, honorables, packers, bank clerks, sailors, government clerks, fishermen, Oxford and Cambridge graduates, sons of admirals, generals, bishops, and statesmen; former officers of the militia and volunteers of Canada and Great Britain, as well as former officers of the armies of England, France and Germany. About 70 per cent. of the men are gentlemen by birth as well as education. Some of them have a private income in addition to their pay. Fully five per cent., once served in the Imperial army of Great Britain, some having seen service in Egypt, India, Africa, and Afghanistan. The police

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

[illegible] of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

EASY LIFE IN NICARAGUA.

When the Family Is Broke, the Wife Digs a Little Gold.

"When I was in the Olancho district, in Nicaragua," said a visitor who is largely interested in mining in Central America, "I had an opportunity of seeing how the lazy natives tap nature's till when they need some small change.

"Near our camp by the river was a hut occupied by a typical Honduranian family, consisting of husband and wife, grandfather and grandmother and a dozen or so of assorted children. The only one of the crowd who did anything except rest and smoke was the wife. At intervals of perhaps a week she would sally out with the family tinpan, erstwhile used for cooking, and proceed to an old placer digging on the river bank. There she would squat, throw a few gourdfuls of dirt into the pan, fill it with water and begin the usual circular motion of gold washing.

"She was very skillful and would keep a little sheet of dirty water spraying over the edge like a miniature cataract. When the water was exhausted, a few spoonfuls of sand would be left in the bottom of the pan, and, spreading it out thin with a bit of stick, she would go over it grain by grain, looking for 'color.' Whenever she saw a speck of gold she moistened the stick on her tongue and picked up the particle by adhesion. Each bit of the precious metal was stored away in a quill, plugged with clay at the ends, and I have known her to take out as much as a quarter of an ounce in the course of one day.

"Usually her limit was about $2, and when she got that she stopped. Then the head of the house would arise languidly and start for the nearest store, 12 miles away. Sometimes he would trade the whole amount for whisky; but, as a rule, he brought back tobacco, salt, meal or calico.

"There are hundreds of native families who live in exactly that manner in Olancho. Sometimes the woman will be lucky enough to strike a rich pocket that will yield a dollar or more a pan, but they never dream of washing it out at once and getting a stake. It simply means that they can secure their usual amount with less work."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NO "PROPERTY" ESCAPES.

Some Queer Things to Be Seen In a Chinese Theater.

Over the audience rests a settled, immovable stillness, unbroken even by a sigh. No expression referable to sorrow, sympathy, joy or tears lightens the blank, dead wall of the faces. The Chinaman is impregnable. Only once do his eyes change, and that is while the property man is on the stage, and he is never off it.

The Chinese property man sees his duty to the management and puts it into practical effect. No "property" shall escape him. He gathers all things by the way. When the Chinese Romeo slays Tybalt, the property man steps on to the stage, gathers up Tybalt's sword, cap and cloak and things and walks off with them. He would enter Macbeth's banquet hall while that weak kneed monarch was exercising Banquo's ghost, gather up the goblets and plates in one arm and Macbeth's chair with the other and carry them away. He would pluck the roses from Elaine's breast; he would take the dagger from Juliet's dead hand; he would interrupt Hamlet's soliloquy in the churchyard with a request for Yorick's skull, and he would interpose in the murder of Desdemona to remove the pillows from her bed.—Saqui Smith in Leslie's Weekly.

London's Great Clock.

Whatever complaints may be made against the tone of Big Ben, the famous London clock—and musicians say it is a terribly bad "E," at any rate—every one will acknowledge that the clock in the house of commons tower is a wonderful timekeeper, not varying a second in time all the year through. The mechanism for setting in motion the massive hammer which brings out the tone of Big Ben's 16 ton bell is very interesting. The striking machinery is driven by weights of about a ton and a half, which hang on a shaft 174 feet deep, and it is so arranged that after the chimes are over the hammer falls on the big bell within one second of Greenwich mean time.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forsooth by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions, Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad, Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley," Charles Lamb went crazy, Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of hades are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absentmindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and lends his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned to the one direction passes along the streets lost to all observation or mental inception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.—Pearson's Magazine.

LOYAL PORT HOPE.

A Magnificent Send-off Given the Battery Boys on Their Departure.

One of the most loyal and patriotic sights in the history of our picturesque town took place Friday evening, it being the departure of 18 of the noblest and best young men of D Battery, Port Hope, for Ottawa, where they will join the rest of Canada's loyal sons of the Second Contingent and proceed to Halifax, where they will embark on the ready waiting transports for that far-away port of Cape Town; and represent Old England's fairest gem and endow honor upon the land of the Beaver and Maple.

In the afternoon the Port Hope file factory done honor to their concern by giving a half holiday to their employees, which was spent in the praiseworthy and creditable manner of entertaining two of the patriotic employees who, enshrouded with the grand Old Union Jack, are determined to see Miss Kruger or plant the old man, and do honor to their native land, or imprint one name more on England's gallant standard. After a mirthful hour had been spent at their former place of duty, indulging in a sumptuous repast given by the genial manager, and receiving the blessings of their numerous friends they turned out in a body, with flags and all musical instruments that mind could conceive, and drove through all the principal streets in Port Hope. They were greeted on all sides by the motto hung over the uniform apartment at the drill shed, "Your a Credit to your Daddy."

In the evening, under the instruction of Col. McLean, they all formed into line in the drill shed, where they were deeply impressed by his words, pointing out the obligation they had taken, and reminding them above all to be punctual at duty, and heed their superior officers. Mr. McLean's inspiring words were greeted on all sides by enthusiastic cheers. The boys then, headed by the 46th Battalion band and Welcome's band, marched to the Opera House, followed by the firemen in uniform, and civilians. The enthusiastic crowd rushed through the doors in overwhelming numbers, the hall being filled beyond standing room five minutes after arrival, and then over two-thirds of the crowd were left under the shelter of the blue canopy to be only enlightened by the continuous cheering. The scene was gorgeous and inspiring, the platform being trimmed for the occasion and decorated to perfection with St. George's cross, with a beautiful oil painting of Her Majesty hung out on the foreground and the Stars and Stripes hung in noble folds beside it.

J. W. Quinlan, Mayor acted as Chairman, on behalf of the committee, then arose and after making a very suitable speech, reminded the speakers that owing to limited time they had, he would request that they make their address as brief as possible. The speakers were so numerous and remarks so elaborated that it would be a hrd matter to decide who gave the gem, although Mr. Hight, Mayor of Cobourg, Mr. White, Mr. Rev. Young, Col. McLean and Rev. Mr. Daniels spoke eloquently. Col. Hughes, of Newtonville, made a very qualified speech, dwelling principally on military rules. He ended up by asking the boys not to reflect upon a certain Irishman's words in coming to this country. When seven days out from Dublin, on being asked how he felt stated, "Begorra, I'd sooner ride an ass any day and git a kick in the stomach, then ride a bloomin' boat and catch the heaves."

The boys of Port Hope were then all presented with a purse containing a $25 gold piece, besides other gifts of suitable kinds. The Rev. Mr. Kendry presented them with the source of England's power—the Bible.

The Millbrook boys felt kind of lonely at having no representative to remind them of their own fair town, which was owing particularly to the want of knowledge on behalf of our city fathers, as they having only enlisted the evening previous to their departure. However two well filled purses will be awaiting them at Halifax. The two young men referred to above, are Messrs. W. D. Leach and H. Burnham, late of the Military College, Kingston, two of Millbrook's best young men, who will do honor to their town.

Mr. W. McNae rendered two fine recitations, one entitled the "Battle of Glencoe."

The meeting was brought to a close by the two bands playing the patriotic airs and singing "Soldiers of the Queen" and "Rule Britannia," three stentorian cheers were given for the noble Canadians.

They then marched to the station, in any way but order, where the train bore them away.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder, "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that

LAYING UP A COMPETENCE.

Something That Practically Any Man Can Do Through Self Denial.

"There are some men of genius," said Mr. Nippingly, "who accumulate great fortunes by great strokes, but by far the greater number of fortunes, including those of moderate dimensions, and these form the great majority of all, are made by the very simple process of living within one's income and investing the surplus with more or less wisdom, but always where it will be safe.

"The older I grow the more amazed I am that more people don't lay up a competence for themselves, as most anybody can do, by beginning early in life to live within their income and sticking to that course faithfully. Did I do this myself? No. Am I, however, having learned the wisdom of this course, now making a beginning? I am obliged to say 'No.' I am still spending all I get and laying by nothing.

"There are some lessons that we all easily acquire, but never turn to our own advantage. One of these is of the benefits that arise from the exercise of self denial. We get from this at once the direct benefit of what we save, and self denial nourishes, strengthens and broadens the will and enables a man constantly to do and to earn more and more.

"There's simply nothing like self denial. It is the key to every one of life's treasures, and everybody has one of these golden keys in his possession, eager to help him and waiting only for him to bring it in use."—New York Sun.

An Amazed Woman.

A woman who had an Arabic glass cup of the fourteenth century and did not know its value took it to the British museum. After due consideration the expert, to her surprise, said that, though the museum did not want it, it might be worth $2,000. The woman shuddered, because she had been carrying in a crowded London omnibus a bit of glass worth so much money and it had miraculously escaped smashing.

Finally, wanting money more than Arabian glass, she sent the object to an auctioneer's. Fancy her amazement when, starting at $2,500, the Arabic cup went by leaps and bounds and was finally knocked down for the nice sum of $6,500.

Actually the Arabic cup was worth very much less, but it so happened that there were two rivals at the auction, who bid against each other.—China, Glass and Lamps.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scaring the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

Some Ready Made Law.

Bourke Cockran studied law under Judge Theodore L. Dwight. One day the professor asked a question which seemed easy, but was really difficult. With his magnificent voice Cockran answered the best he could, adding as a saving clause, "Such, I take it, is the common law."

The good old doctor gleamed benignantly through his spectacles. "That would be all right, sir, if you had made it uncommon law."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A PICKPOCKET'S RUSE.

The Trick by Which He Once Got a Woman's Purse.

Jack Piggott, the noted pickpocket, used to tell a funny story about the difficulty he had in picking the pocket of a fashionably dressed woman who was looking in at the window of Shreve's jewelry store. It illustrates the hardships that the light fingered gentry are forced to endure in the pursuit of their profession and when first related was considered amusing not only by Piggott, but by the many to whom he confided his experience.

It was a cold winter evening, and the lady on whose purse Piggott had designs stood looking at the holiday finery so temptingly displayed. Piggott said that he tried all the arts known to his craft for the extraction of the wallet, but all in vain, until, as a last resort, he fished a toothpick from his pocket and, reaching around, tickled the lady's ear. Instinctively she raised her hand to brush away the invading insect or whatever it might be and in so doing let go of her pocketbook that she was carrying in the pocket of her coat.

It was only an instant, but it was long enough for the expert pickpocket to get in his work, and when she put her hand back her money was gone, and in the crowd around her she could not identify the pale faced, fashionably dressed young man at her side as the person who had robbed her, and if she had accused him there would have been no proof against him, as the swag was at once passed to a pal who stood ready to receive it and run. Piggott was not even arrested for that crime, and the lady's ludicrous outcries furnished material for mirth long after.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of them men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

His "Dear Old Jim."

"Corbett is my friend and benefactor," says Mr. Jeffries. "I was once his sparring partner, and he treated me as a gentleman. Hence I have gladly agreed to fight him as a return for favors. I am bound by all the ties of friendship and gratitude to give him a chance to fight me." Was there ever such a touching instance of devotion? Mr. Jeffries will reward his old patron and benefactor by beating him into pulp and knocking his head off. One can fancy him saying, as he puts his terrible right into his friend's ribs, "Dear old Jim!"—Kansas City Star.

ATTACKED THE CAMP.

London, Jan. 8.—The War Office this evening issued the following—"From Buller, Frere Camp, Jan. 6.—The following telegram was received from General White, Jan. 6, 9 a.m.—'The enemy attacked Caesar's Camp at 2.45 a.m. in considerable force. The enemy was everywhere repulsed, but the fighting still continues.'"

BULLER CREATES A DIVERSION.

Frere Camp, Jan. 6. 6.45 p.m.—At two o'clock this afternoon the whole of Gen. Clery's division marched to attack Colenso. General Hildyard had the left of the line, General Barton the right, and the cavalry the extreme right. The attack slowly developed. At half-past four the field guns advanced in the centre and commenced shelling the flat land between Hlagawane hill and Fort Wylie. A heavy thunderstorm was then raging over the Boer position. At half-past five the British troops were still advancing, and were very near Colenso. The naval 4.7 inch guns and the field guns were dropping shells into the trenches and were near the river forts. The enemy did not reply. The day has been dull throughout and darkness is now rapidly approaching.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

The novel experiments in anaesthesia by Dr. Bier, of Kiel, seem to promise important results. By injecting small quantities of very dilute cocaine solution into the spinal canal, the nerves are attacked at their roots, and the lower part of the body is rendered completely insensible to pain, the effect lasting about three-quarters of an hour. Very curiously, perception of heat and cold, as well as of touch and pressure, are not affected. Under this anaesthesia, severe operations have been satisfactorily performed; but the after-effects—which include dizziness, severe headache and vomiting—are quite as unpleasant as those following chloroform and ether, and more prolonged.

A very light gas battery, the invention of M. Germain, a French telegraph inspector, has been suggested as a possible future rival of lead accumulators, etc. The battery consists of an air-tight vessel enclosing pairs of carbon discs, each pair tightly compressing a layer of paper pulp. Electric current is obtained when the pulp is moistened with weak sulphuric acid, and oxygen and hydrogen respectively are led to alternate discs by pipes, the discs being suitably connected.

The muscular strength of man has been studied by a German physician with a special dynamometer. From 10,000 separate experiments he finds that the average health man reaches his maximum at the age of about 31 years; that he can lift 277 pounds without difficulty at 17; 317 pounds at 20; 400, at 31; 330, at 40; 323, at 50; and 246, at 70. Further tests showed negros to be nearly as strong as whites.

NEW "DIVINE HEALER."

He Agrees for $300 a Day to Raise the Dead Who Have Not Been Dead Too Long.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—A third Schlatter, or "Divine Healer," has appeared in Chicago in the person of a man who callshimself the Rev. Dr. Charles McLlean, and who by advertising himself as Schlatter, Maclean has closed a contract for the management of his campaign of "divine healing" with a man who seemed to him to combine all the attributes of a successful and thrifty promoter of such enterprises. Tattersalls, now given over to prizefighting, bicycle races and stock shows, has been secured for temple purposes.

The Rev. Charles MacLean claims to be a graduate of Edinburgh University. He says he is a cousin of Mrs. Dewey; that Hetty Green offered him $5,000,000 for the privilege of becoming Mrs. MacLean, and that he healed Richard Croker of Tammany Hall, for which he received the modest sum of $5,000. He also claims to have foretold the death of Vice-President Hobart and other events of national importance, and all of these things, if properly exploited, he is confident will pack Tattersalls to overflowing.

In his contract with his manager, signed to-day, MacLean aggrees for $300 a day to publicly raise any dead who may be brought to Tattersalls, provided of course, they have not been dead too long; to heal the sick, make the blind see, submit to being buried alive and raise himself from the dead and perform other miracles calculated to draw crowds to the new amusement enterprise.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the hanedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at these underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included mauve collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $25 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fire department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

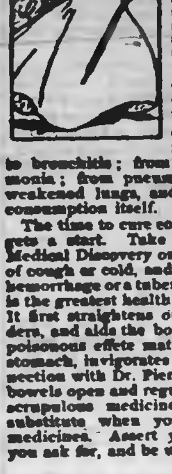
There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2 Henry VI." 1. iii.

It is plain from the lawsuits that he is bringing that Mr. Kipling has a due appreciation of the white man's burden.—Pittsburg Times.

It was right and proper for Mary Anderson Navarro to come back to America on the Majestic. She is that kind of a woman.—Kansas City Star.

It is reported that Grover Cleveland has purchased a plover field. This will furnish amateur poets with another line of attack on Mr. Cleveland's first name.



"Mrs. Sanders had ten hemorrhages and people here said she would never be well again."

W. A. Sanders, Esq., of Hera, Mason County, W. Va., writes: "My wife had hemorrhage of the lungs. She had ten hemorrhages and people here said she would never be well again. But she began to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and she soon began to gain strength and flesh. After taking ten bottles she was entirely well. If you think this will do you any good to publish, just use it, and if anyone disputes the merits of this almost omnipotent medicine, they may enclose a self-addressed envelope with stamp, and I will answer."

When anything is wrong with the lungs, there is no time to lose. The steps are easy and quick from a "slight cold" to bronchitis; from bronchitis to pneumonia; from pneumonia to permanently weakened lungs, and from that to dread consumption itself.

The time to cure consumption is before it gets a start. Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery on the first appearance of cough or cold, and you will never have a hemorrhage or a tubercle. The "Discovery" is the greatest health builder in the world. It first straightens out all digestive disorders, and aids the body in ridding itself of poisonous effete matter. It tones up the stomach, invigorates the liver and in connection with Dr. Pierce's Pellets keeps the bowels open and regular. Don't let an unscrupulous medicine dealer foist some substitute when you want Dr. Pierce's medicines. Assert your rights—get what you ask for, and be well.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

Handsome Views.

Mr. W. Bunton, the genial up-town ticket agent of the Grand Trunk Railway showed the Times a number of fine views of the Kawartha Lakes These photos were taken by the official photographer of the company, and are the finest collection of back lake scenes we ever saw. The company propose to have electors made from them, with which to advertise these lakes.

CONTINGENT NOTES.

Mr Chill Turner the Recipient of an Address and Purse.

A pleasing event took place at the residence of Mr. J. J. Turner, jr., last evening, when Mr. Achilles Turner, who is leaving with the Candaian Mounted Rifles for South Africa, was presented by the employees of the establishment of J. J. Turner and Sons with an address and a well filled purse, showing the esteem in which he is held. The address, which was read by Mr. Fredenberg, was as follows—Achilles Turner, 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons—

Dear Achilles,—Having learned of your intention of assisting in the defence of your flag, in the far away fields of South Africa, we feel we cannot have you leave us, perhaps never to meet again in this life, although we hope to, but in this we must bow to God's will, and leave the matter in his hands, whether He permits you to return, or takes you from the noble duty which you have undertaken your share of in the far away fields of South Africa.

We assure you of our admiration for the step you have taken, and know that you will do yourself proud, as a citizen personally, and as a representative of the best town in Canada, Peterborough.

We have thought it desirable to show you in some small way the esteem in which we hold you, and ask you to accept this small gift not for its intrinsic value, but as a memento of those you leave behind.

Wishing you a safe voyage and a speedy return, we beg to subscribe ourselves.

Yours truly,

Wm. Fredenberg, Clayton Chowen, Miss Smith, Miss H. Smith., Miss B. Martin, Miss Bacon, Miss Lynch, Miss Sullivan, Miss Richardson.

Mr. Turner made a suitable reply, thanking them for their evidences of good will.

Lieut. Hayward, of the 3rd Dragoons, now with the second Canadian contingent mobilized for service in South Africa, is serving as a sergt.-Major and is now is now with the men at Quebec.

Rev. Father Jube, formerly of the staff f St. Peter's cathedral, is now at Johannesberg, South African Republic.

Major Greenwood is in town. The presentation of the town's grant will be made and he will be given a farewell send-off at the officers' mess rooms to-night.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

Business at the Regular Meeting of the Clergymen.

The monthly meeting of the Ministerial Association was held yesterday morning. There were present—Revs. H. Symonds, president, Wm. Bennett, J. Kilgour, S. J. Shorey, D. O. Crossley, J. E. Moore, J. C. Davidson, W. L. Armitage and J. G. Potter.

services for the Nicholls Hospital for the month were arranged as follows—8th, Dr. Torrance; 15th, Rev. Mr. Moore, 22nd, Rev. Mr. Crossley; 31st Rev. Mr. Armitage.

For the Protestant Home the services will be—11th, Rev. Dr. Torrance; 17th, Rev. Mr. Moore; 24th, Rev. Mr. Crossley; 31st, Rev. Mr. Armitage.

For Auburn—18th, Rev. Mr. Symonds; 23rd, Rev. Mr. Shorey; Feb. 1st, Rev. Mr. Davidson.

Rev. Wm. Bennett read an excellent paper on "State of the Heathen After Death."

The name of Rev. D. A. Thompson, of Hastings, as a member of the Association was proposed by Rev. Mr. Bennett and he was elected a member.

The paper at the next regular meeting will be read by Rev. Mr. Bastow.

A Temperance Movement.

The action of the Clergy of St. Peter's Cathedral in organizing a temperance society is likely to result in much good. The project arose out of the very eloquent and impressive address delivered in St. Peter's Cathedral, last Sunday, by Rev. Father Murphy, of the Paulist Fathers, New York. At the close of the address, a very earnest appeal was made to the men of the congregation to join the new society, which, we understand, is meeting with a very satisfactory response.

Granolithic Walks.

The town of Dunville, we are informed, built their granolithic walks last year at a cost of ten cents per square foot, being considerably less than it cost us. If it is possible for other town to build their pavements so cheaply, surely it is for Peterborough to do the same. A little investigation on the part of the council may reveal some other matters in connection with this sort of work which they are not aware of, and it can do no manner of harm for our town fathers to learn what is being done along these lines elsewhere.

POULTRY SHOW GOING

Opened at Noon Yesterday in the Market Hall.

The annual show of the Provincial Poultry and Pet Stock Association opened in the Market Hall yesterday at noon and from present appearances there can be no douut as to its success.

The Market Hall has been very neatly arranged and presents an exceedingly pretty appearance. There are over 1,400 birds on exhibition, gathered from all parts of the province Yesterday the show was vBisited by an immence crow of spectators, all of whom appeared to be struck with the excellence quality of the birds.

Among the well-know poultry exhibitors are Mr. Wm. McNeil, Alex. Bogue and Richard Oak, of London; W. Fox, of Toronto; J. H. McGill and Charles Massie, of Port Hope; L. T. Brown, Tilsonburg; H. J. Cooke, Wood stock; J. H. Shales, Toronto; and Newton Cach, of Brandford.

The exhibits in all branches are quiote up too the mark, whilst an exhibit of pigeons from some Port Hope fanciers are attracting considerable attention. There is also a very handsome display of rabbits. To-morrow a more extended reference to the show and chief exhibitors will be made.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Cole & Johnston's Minstrels held the Opera House last night, in "A Trip to Coontown." There was a good house.

The next meeting of the Ashburnham Reading circle will be held a week from Wednesday, January 17th, at Mrs. John Burnham's, Lake street, at 7.30 p.m.

The Central Exhibition Association has paid most of the prizes and cleared off the liabilitie of the association in connection with the late exhibition.

At the police court yesterday morning the case of Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald was withdrawn.

Owing to a league hockey match being played in Campbellford on Friday night against Norwood, the C.L.A. ministrels have decided to play in Hastings on Thursday, Jan. 11th, and return home on Friday morning.

Subscribe for the Morning Times only 25 cents per month.

So widespread has been the interest manifested in The Chicago Chronicle's home study self-culture university extension courses, which have been appearing since October, that The Chronicle will begin Monday, Jan. 15, the publication of an entirely different series of courses. One of the most striking of these courses is a series of articles which will appear twice a week, written by Professor Arthur E. Watson of Brown university, Providence, R.I., on the subject of "Electrical Engineering." This course will be profusely illustrated.

Railway Notes.

Several G. T. R. officials visited Oshawa and other points a few days ago, and they will recommend that the G. T. R. track be straightened from Bowmanville west, passing through Oshawa and Whitby at the northern limits of each town. The reason given for the change is that the heavy grades encountered on the main line now could largely be overcome by such a change and the cost of the change be made up in a few years by the saving in wear and tear to the rolling stock. Freight trains of a heavy character are now being run over the line, and any saving in time amounts to a vast sum to the company in a year.

LOST THE TASTE

For Ordinary Coffee.

"It is strange how people will try to invent some cause for their feeling bad, rather than to charge the trouble to some habit they may have that they have good reason to believe is the real cause. For instance, all the time that we were using coffee on our table I was subject to occasional terrible headaches, and my husband was half sick with nervous troubles.

"We felt satisfied that coffee was the cause, but were afraid we wouldn't like Postum Cereal Coffee, and therefore tried in every way to think that something in the food, or some other reason, was the real cause of our troubles. After reading several articles in regard to the evil effects of coffee drinking, and the merits of Postum Food Coffee, I became convinced of the truth of the statements and called my husband's attention to them.

"He was skeptical on the subject, but to please me, said we would give Postum a trial, so he procured a package and I made it, but the milk that we were using was of the kind that produced little cream, and that did not give us as good a beverage as we found afterwards could be secured with cream. However, in spite of the drawback, we grew to like the Postum Food Coffee, and both of us found ourselves greatly benefited by the change. My head ceased to trouble me entirely, and my husband was practically made over.

"We were out of the Postum for a time, and having coffee in the house and feeling so much better, we concluded to try the coffee again, but in a few days my headaches came back, so that we became satisfied where the real trouble existed. We used Postum for quite a long time, and still having some coffee in the house, tried coffee again. Imagine our surprise in discovering that we no longer cared for the taste of the ordinary coffee, so the next morning we had a rare treat, in a piping cup of hot, delicious Postum.

"Coffee is no longer kept in our house. Our children are very fond of the new kind of 'coffee' as they call it, and we give them as much as they want to drink, without fearing to injure their health. I find that it enables me to furnish baby with a more abundant supply of milk than I could otherwise do. Postum Cereal Food Coffee has indeed been a great boon to our family." Mrs. Mary Wade Sagbrook, O.

THE ANNUAL TEA

Of the Baptist Church in Selwyn—Other Matters.

The annual tea given under the auspices of the Selwyn Baptist church, was held on New Year's night, as usual, and was a success, financially and otherwise. The church was packed to the doors, and all went away well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

The Murray street Baptist church choir, of Peterborough, assisted in the musical portion of the programme, and the speakers were Revs. Messrs. Dove, Bridgeman and Nicholl. The pastor, Rev. W. A. Gunton, and the congregation, have every reason to be satisfied with the annual event.

The Templars of Selwyn, hold their annual concert on Thursday evening, January 18th, at 8 o'clock. They are determined to make it the best yet, and have secured some excellent talent for the occasion; the Peterborough Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club will contribute selections, and a splendid dialogue will be contributed by Mr. Pratley and some of the Auburn Templars. Excellent singing and elocution will also be furnished. Al together it promises to be one of the best entertainments yet given in Selwyn.

Mr. James Tully has purchased the blacksmith business formerly conducted by M. M. Sucee. He entered upon his duties on January 1st, and we have no doubt will give every satisfaction to his patrons. Mr. Tully will live in the house formerly occupied by Mr. Sucee, the latter having removed to Peterborough.

Through the Ice.

The habit of young boys, and old ones, too, of skating on the river and lake is a dangerous one. Yesterday a young lad named Alex. McGreggor, son of Mr. Robert McGreggor,... residin gon Water street, nearly lost his life. While skating on the river above Dickson's dam, in company with Arthur Seward and another lad, he ran into an opening in the ice, and sank. The little fellow, who is about 14 years of age, happened to be a good swimmer, and to this he probably owes his life. He kept himself afloat until young Seward pulled him out by the aid of his hockey stick.

Off the Track

Yesterday morning about three o'clock a freight train coming down the Midland line and loaded with grain and lumber struck a broken rail near Best's station six miles west of town. The engine and front part of the train got over safely but nine loaded cars left the track. The locomotive was brought down to town and the section men were taken out to the scent of the wreck and clearing operations were commenced, a message being sent to Lindsay for an auxiliary. The morning trains went around by way of Millbrook, but the line was cleared and repaired by eleven o'clock.

Board of Health.

A meeting of the Board of Health took place yesterday, when the Medical Health officers' annual report was submitted. The report deals with the sanitary condition of the town.

Canadian Patents

Ruth Leamington, acetylene gas aparatus; A. L. Schram, Woodstock, water gage.

Fortnightly Club.

The regular meeting of the club last night took place in the Y. M. C. A. hall, when Mr. J. Jeffries read the paper of the evening. His subject was Shakespeare's "As You Like It." In addition to the essay a splendid musical programme was rendered by Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, Miss McDonald, Winnipeg; Miss Morrow, Miss Grant and Mr. Mulligan. y of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger would Sheriff Hall presided.

PERSONALS.

Mr. J. H. Carnegie, M.P.P., Cobouk, is in town, a guest of his father and gave the Times a call.

Miss Bella Tully and Miss Jennie Mahood have returned home after a prolonged visit with the latter's brother, Mr. R. Mahood, 227 Shaw street, Toronto.

Miss Lyle McMillan of Nelson, B.C., is visiting friends in town.

Miss Ida Munns, of St. Thomas, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Oway. Carver, North Monaghan.

Rev. H. Symonds and Rev. J. C. Davidson are in Toronto this week attending meetings of Trinity University.

Ven. Archdeacon Allen, of Millbrook, will officiate at St. John's church next Sunday.

Mr. H. H. Loosemore, who held an important position at the head offices of the Standard bank, Toronto, has resigned and volunteered and been accepted for service in South Africa. Mr. Loosemore is a cousin of Rev. J. C. Davidson.

Mr. Wm. Cumming, of Montreal, was in town yesterday.

Miss Rose Clarke, of Toronto, is visiting friends in town.

The following is from the Globe, and refers to a lady well-known in Peterborough:—The singing of Madame A. Don Cochrane, contralto, of Detroit, at the Oddfellows' concert in Massey Hall on New Year's night was a pronounced success. Madame Cochrane is the possessor of a magnificent voice of wide range, and sings with a dash and a vim that is very taking. This was well exemplified by a spirited rendering of "Angus McDonald," which elicited storms of applause, to which she was compelled to respond, singing "The Standard on the Braes o' Mar," and was then presented with a beautiful boquet of roses. Again after a duo number with Mr. Harold Jarvis both singers were twice compelled to return and bow their acknowledgements.

London, Jan 11

Daily Mail has the following dated Jan. 8, from Frere Camp: "With e exception of the usual shelling the Boer position by the naval uns, the British force remains inactive."

ht Boer camps were seen to-day y a patrol along the Tuegla in westerly direction. All were uiet.

ives say that when the British reconnoitered near Colenso on Satur ay, the Boers hurried from Spring ield. This supports the belief hat Colenso was weakened in the ttack on Ladysmith.

Cape Town's correspondent of he Daily Mail telegraphing Mon ay says the Boers successes have een followed by a tremendous out urst of enthusiasm and Boer sym athy in the western part of the olony. Reports from Paarl say the hole district is made hideous at ight by bands of young men parad ng in the villages and singing the ransvaal national songs of the re ublics.

London, Jan 11

ssia is taking advantage of the ransvaal trouble to strength her armaments and push forward her utposts along the Persian frontier with a view of ultimate annexation, design in which Germany would probably acquiese in consideration of receiving railway concession.

London, Jan 11

espatches to the Daily Telegraph dated Monday, Jan. 8, noon, from rere Camp says: "Firing from the Boer positions around Ladysmith be an early to-day. It still continu es but the cannonading is light and irregular."

London, Jan. 11—4 a.m;

uring the interlude of apparent military inactivity and official ecrecy, Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener have arrived at the seat of war. It is assumed that their clearer vision, supported by 35,000 fresh men who are due to arrive in South Africa within thirty days will alter the situation and that the fourth month of the campaign will witness the beginning of victories for the British arms. They are not however expected to produce definite results for some days but their mere presence will restore the confidaence of the men at the front. Lord Roberts finds 120,000 men on the defensive or watching for an opening. Lord Methuen's health according to the Daily Mail has broken down and the field marshall may relieve him. Possibly some others will be relieved of important commands. There is certainly plenty of rank in evidence in South Africa. In addition to the field marshall there are two field generals, four lieut.-generals and 13 or 14 major-generals.

The list of victims of disease issued by the War Office gives 22 deaths from enteric fever and dysentery in Ladysmith in four days, revealing the fact that the beseiged are existing amid bad sanitary conditions.

London, Jan 11

The War Offices announces that the list of British casualties at Ladysmith last Saturday has not been received. The following despatch, dated at Frere Camp, Jan. 10, noon, has been received from General Buller—A Transvaalt elegram gives the enemy's loss at Ladysmith on Saturday, four killed and 16 wounded.

GATACRE'S RECONNAISSANCE.

London, Jan. 10.—General Gatacre despatched a strong force on Monday Jan. 8, to reconnoitre Stormberg, which the Boers were reported to have evacuated. The British found the burghers strongly entrenched and returned to Sterkstroom.

FIVE GUARDSMAN MISSING.

London, Jan. 10.—General French supplements his advices of yesterday by reporting that Captain Ricardo and four troopers of the Life Guards are missing, showing that the reconnoitering party met opposition.

DUTCH CRUISER FOR DURBAN.

The Hague, Jan. 10.—The Minister of Marine, J. C. Jansen, has instructed the commander of the Dutch cruiser Friesland, now at Lorenso Marquez, to proceed to Durban and take on board the Dutch ambulance intended for the Transvaal and the stores sent out for the Friesland herself which forms part of the cargo of the BRITAIN WILL PAY INDEMNITY.

New York, Jan. 10.—The answer of Lord Salisbury to the demand made on him by Ambassador Choate for a declaration of policy and a concession of liability in the matter of the seizures of American flour in cargoes on the Mashona, the Beatric and the Maria, says a Washington despatch to the Journal and Advertiser, may be summarized thus:

Great Britain offers to pay an indemnity to the American citizens whose corn, meal and flour were seized by the British cruisers near Delagoa Bay, the extent of the claims to be determined by a commission. Great Britain will not declare corn, meal and flour to be contraband when proof is not positive that the foodstuffs are intended for the camp of the enemy. Great Britain contends that she has not violated the rights of a netural power by the seizure of this corn, meal and flour, but that, on the contrary, under her old common law, she has a right to seize food supplies absolutely necessary for the maintenance of her soldiers and sailors in time of war, her right being subject to the equities of indemnity.

The despatch says that the above abstract of the position of the British Government has been received by the State Department, and was the basis of statement that the maffer had been amicably settled.

WHAT THE TIMES THINKS.

London, Jan. 10.—The Times says: It is lucky for the Government that the Opposition it will face in Parliament next month is not only weak but is incapacited by the previous conduct of many of its leaders from making the most of its opportunity. But although the line of defence which Mr. Balfour is adopting may prove embarrassing to Messrs. Campbell-Bannerman and Bryce, the Government can hardly suppose that it will be accepted by the majority of the nation. The acquiescence with which he regards our mishaps and reverses, as though they were the consequences of some evil destiny, which no foresight could prevent, is a little irritating to a people who are not fatalists and who believe that energy intelligence and determination applied at the right moment are able to overcome most of the problems of life.

ANOTHER TALE OF JOUBERT.

Glasgow, Jan. 10.—The North British Daily Mail's Estcourt, Natal correspondent states that Commandant-General Joubert has been seriously injured, and will take no further part in the war. His horse was shot from under the General, and rolled over on him, causing a rupture and serious injury to the spine.

Rotten and False.

London, Jan. 10.—Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, addressing the London Chamber of Commerce yesterday, and dealing with the question of national defence, said that now that war prevailed, more attention would be paid perhaps to those who had warned the country that it was laboring under a "rotten, false, and misleading system of administrage, so far as the services were concerned."

"While I would deprecate the adoption of conscription," said Lord Charles, "I hope the country will insist upon overhauling and reforming the naval and military services. In connection with the war in South Africa, I contend that our Generals should be held harmless, for they have been set to do an impossibility."

Reparation for Insults.

Paris, Jan. 10.—The Foreign Office officials here express themselves as sanguine that a satisfactory settlement of the trouble between France and Santo Domingo will be reached to-day.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

Guy Curtis, of Kingston, may be called "an old-timer." This is his tenth year at hockey.

The first game in the Trent Valley Hockey League was played last night.

The Lindsay Intermediates put Wellingtons II out of the running for this year at Lindsay on Tuesday night.

Skating.

John Nelson, of Minneapolis, and Norval Baptie, of Dakota, are to have a skating race for a purse of $500 in Montreal on February 3rd. The meeting between these two men ought to be a rattling good one, as young Baptie gave the champion a hard fight last winter.

The magnates of the National League are now dallying with the prime mover of the new American Association, and base ball cranks are waiting to hear something drop in the Western League. It will take some long heads to make order out of the chaos in which baseball is now floudering.

The Turf.

The O. J. C. meeting next May will be a nine days' meet, and the Queen's Plate will be run on the first day, which this year will be the Queen's birthday. The racing will extend to June 2nd, and no purse will be less than $400 in value. This will be the longest meet the O. J. C. have ever had.

Finances of Germany.

Berlin, Jan. 10.—In introducing the estimates in the lower house of the Diet to-day, the Minister of Finance, Dr. Von Miquel, declared the budget was the most favorable ever submitted. He added that the surplus for 1898-99 was 84,360,000 marks, and the current year was expected to furnish equally satisfactory and favorable results. The new estimates are no longer based on railroad receipts as formerly. Dr. Von Miquel referred to the reserves contained in the estimates available for times of distress, and said debts amounting to 800,000,000 marks had been redeemed during the last decade.

New Cabinet in Manitoba.

Winnipeg, Jan. 10.—The Conservative Cabinet will be composed as follows:

Hon. H. J. Macdonald, Q.C., Prime Minister, Attorney-General, Minister of Education, Commissioner of Railways and Municipal Commissioner. He will also be president of the Council, of course, though this office is elective by the Council, the president not being sworn in by the Lieutenant Governor as such.

J. A. Davidson, of Neepawa, Minister of Agriculture and Immigration, Provincial Treasurer, and Commissioner of Provincial Lands. Mr. Davidson at present has no seat in the House, but will run again for Beautiful Plains, R. C. Ennis' election having been protested.

D. H. McFadden, Emerson, Provincial Secretary and Minister of Public Works.

Insanity and Murder.

Hampton, Ia., Jan. 10.—Dr. G. M. Appleby, for several years the leading physician at Bristow, Butler County, last night, in a fit of insanity, killed a ten-months-old child of Henry Wearley, of this place, while making an examination of it in Dr. Hobson's office in this city. Crazed by religious excitement he caught the child by one foot and swung it around and around his head before the parent could interfere.

GREAT BRITAIN HAS NO PETTY MOTIVES.

It is a Stupid Calumny to Say That She is Animated by the Lust of Land.

London, Jan. 10.—Mr. Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Treasury, speaking last evening in East Manchester, said—

"I know of no war in which Great Britain has engaged, except that resulting in the independence of the American colonies, which did not end triumphantly. Yet I do not know of one which has begun triumphantly. True, the war in South Africa is disappointing, but it is not a fact that Great Britain has suffered exceptional reverses or great disaster.

"On the other hand, the war had knotted together every branch of the English-speaking race, making all feel that they have a great common destiny, which it is their duty to accomplish. These are things which ought to support us in far greater trials than any this war may produce.

"Remember that a nation which cannot bear defeat is a nation unworthy of Empire, and although defeat has not yet come, and although we hope and believe it will not come in the course of the present war, yet, if matters should turn out otherwise, we should still rely upon the courage and patriotism of our countrymen."(Cheers.)

Addressing a second meeting, held at Hardwick, a suburb of Manchester, Mr. Balfour said—

"While I am loath to claim in any proud and arrogant spirit that we are in any special sense the leaders of a humanitarian cause, I deny in the strongest manner that we are animated by ignoble motives. No more false or stupid calummny was ever invented than the accusation that Great Britain is animated by a petty desire to add wealthy regions to an already gigantic Empire. No mere acquisition of terrfiery could compensate for the war costing so much blood and treasure."

HE WANTS TO RESIGN THE PREMIERSHIP.

Ill Health and Domestic Sorrow Have Caused Salisbury to Lose Heart.

London, Jan. 10.—The rumor of the impending retirement of the Marquis of Salisbury from the Prime Ministership of England, cabled to the World and Times recently, is causing a commotion here. The Times correspondent hears that Lord Salisbury urgently pressed his resignation on the Queen, pleading that shaken health and private sorrows have caused him to lose heart, and that the crisis demands a younger and more active counselor.

The Queen summoned Arthur Balfour to Windsor the day after Lord Salisbury's departure, and commanded him to use his influence to induce the Marquis, his uncle, to retain the Premiership.

It is understood that Lord Salisbury has assented to the Queen's wishes to remain at the head of the government for the present, but that he will retire at the first opportunity.

The circumstance that the Hon. Schomberg K. McDonnel, Lord Salisbury's principal political secretary, has volunteered for service and will leave immediately for the front, indicates to those who know how close he has been to his chief, that the latter cannot now mean to carry the burden of government much longer.

The future Cabinet arrangements depend on the progress of the war. If Lords Roberts and Kitchener fail to put a new face on the campaign, and further reverses are suffered, a government of national defence will be formed with—according to the best opinion—the Duke of Devonshire as Premier, Lord Rosebery as Foreign Secretary, Mr. Asquith as Colonial Secretary and Sir Henry Fowler as War Secretary, the last three being Imperialist Liberals pledged to prosecute the war to an end.

PUBLIC FEELING HOSTILE TO THE BRITISH CABINET

The Pent-up Dissatisfaction at its Lack of Energy Bursts into a Storm.

THE CABINET TERMED A BODY OF PATRIARCHS.

To Call Out Every Available Man Would be the Cheapest Measure of Certain Success—Buller's Delay in Striking the Blow Causing Uneasiness.

London, Jan. 10.—The plight of British arms in South Africa is overshadowed for the present by the storm which is bursting over the head of the home government. The Manchester speeches of Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Government leader in the House of Commons, have loosened such a torrent of criticism from the press and individuals of his own party that were Parliament to assemble to-day, it is doubtful if the Conservatives would retain power, in spite of the tremendous majority of the past session.

Government Lack of Energy.

The pent-up dissatisfaction with the Government's lack of energy in waging war is no longer concealed. When such ardent Conservative papers as the Times and Globe come out boldly with reproof there is no knowing where the agitation will end. The provincial press has already taken up the cry. For the moment Mr. Balfour is the scapegoat, but there is a terrible rod in pickle for the Marquis of Lansdowne, while Lord Salisbury and other Cabinet Ministers will not escap—e unless a wonderful change comes over the war situation.

"A Body of Patriarchs."

A representative of the Associated Press learns that the Cknservative leaders privately admit the gravity of their position, but fail to see wiat can be done. In the meantime they hope that success in the field will abate the popular clamor. Some of the Conservative papers go so far as to regret the extreme age of the Cabinet Ministers, and refer to the Cabinet as a body of patriarchs.

Under these circumstances it is doubtful whether events transpiring between now and the reassembling of Parliament will be powerful enough to restore confidence in the Government and maintain its majority.

Ignoring Lord Wolseley.

There is the important alternative that Lord Lansdowne or Lord Wolseley may be sacrificed. A representative of the Associated Press learns that Lord Wolseley not only disapproved of Lord Roberts' a—pppointment to the chief command of the British troops in South Africa, but allowed his disapproval to be generally known, and that it is a fact that he knew nothing of the Government's intentions in this respect until he saw the announcement of the appointment in the newspapers.

It is said that if it should ever come to a public disagreement between the commander-in-chief and the Secretary of State for War, it would be a more bitter fight than the one waged between Generals Alger and Miles. Whatever ensues the immediate future will doubtless see attacks on the Government such as Lord Salisbury has not had to withstand during the course of his political career.

MORE TROOPS DEMANDED.

London, Jan. 10.—The forces in the field evidently is insufficient, declares the Morning Post's war critic to-day, for no progress is made by either Generals Buller, Methuen, Gatacre or French. The cheapest measure now possible is that which will most rapidly and most effectively increase the forces in the field to a point at which success will be assured.

The proper way to do this is by calling to arms all the trained men the country possesses, embodying at once whatever militia battalions have not yet been called up, then calling out the volunteers as a whole and then calling for all the trained men who have passed through either force, and for fresh recruits for both.

The stoppage of Delagoa Bay as a channel for supplies to the Transvaal has been urged as the most effective metho—d of stopping traffic, and is that which we suggested some time ago, giving a liberal supply of cash and large discretion to the British agent at Lorenzo Marquez.

The national determination to win has been expressed by all classes. Now is the time for action. And yet the measures taken so far all bear the marks of a mere continuation of the original plan of gradual reinforcement.

What is Buller Doing?

The Leader's military expert says—

"Still there is no news of any turning movement of Buller, and no news whether he is well or in poor state of health. Looking at telegrams sent through, we should say that they are sent by his staff in his name. We cling to the idea that he is engaged in developing a movement in concert with General White.

"The Leader announces that steps have been taken to form a committee of persons interested in the abortive proceedings of the South African investigation committee for the purpose of a searching enquiry into the alleged complicity of officers of the Government in the Jameson raid. Cartwright Latham is secretary of the movement. P. Stanhope, Llou dGeorge and John Burns, members of Parliament, have been invited to address public meetings before Parliament sits.

The Censor.

The military writer for the Mail notes—

"We are informed by a gentleman who has returned from the front that if letters sent to England are calculated to annoy the authorities, erring journalists will be immediately withdrawn from the front. This matter and others will be brought before Parliament at an early date. If General Buller's army has any purpose it is to rescue 8,000 British soldiers from destruction at Ladysmith. It is not possible that Ladysmith will fall before the eyes of 30,000 British troops."

ALL UNITS EQUIPPED.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—The military branch Oof the Department of Militia say that the delay of two days in forwarding the troops to Halifax is due to the Moctezuma trouble. But this is in all probability because of the unreadiness of some of the units which were timed to entrain during this week.

At all events there is no evidence of unreadiness on the part of the Militia Stores Branch, or what is known as the Civil Branch, more directly under the eye of the Minister and his Deputy, in selecting anmd forwarding clothing and equipments. Not only have Leiut-Col. MacDonald and his staff received and sorted all the outfits from the contactors, but the troops at all the concentration points are practically equipped.

The last of the clothing was shipped from the stores yesterday. So far as equipment is concerned, the units at Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec are all ready to move.

It is not too much to say that the aim of the Department is to be able to have it recorded that no better equipped force ever took the field from any country.

A ROMANTIC EVENT.

Quebec, Jan. 9.—What is doubtless one of the most romantic incidents in connection with the despatch of the second Canadian contingent to South Africa, occurred here this morning when the marriage of Captain R. E. W. Turner, of the Q.O.C.H., to Miss Harriet Augusta Goodday was celebrated in the Anglican Cathedral by Very Rev. Lennox William, Dean of Quebec.

The wedding was to have taken place early next spring, but owing to his recent appointment as lieutenant in charge of No. 3 troop "B" squadron Canadian Mounted Infantry, the event was advanced. Captain Turner, upon receiving notice of his appointment, at once cabled his prospective bride, who, on two hours' notice, started at once for Canada.

WEDDED IN ST. PAUL'S.

The Marriage of Mr W. L. Innes and Miss Carnegie

An event of considerable importance and interest took place at St. Paul's Presbyterian church, at 5.30 yesterday afternoon, when Mr. W. L. Innes, C.E., of Simcoe, was united in marriage to Miss Willimina Ranney Carnegie, fourth daughter of John Carnegie, Esq., of Peterborough.

Rev. Dr. Torrance tied the nuptial knot. The bride was assisted by Miss Nellie Carnegie, Miss Innes and Miss Marion Sherwood, while Mr. Innes, brother of the groom, officiated in a similar capacity for his brother. Little Miss Daisy Dean and Master E. Wood acted as pages, while Mr. F. D. Kerr and Mr. Charles Innes filled the position of ushers.

The bride was bewitchingly attired in white satin trimmed with lace and chiffon. The bridesmaids wore white silk similarly trimmed, and large black picture hats, faced with white chiffon.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the wedding march was played on the organ. The wedding party drove to the residence of the bride's father, where a wedding de jeuner was partaken of, and they left on the nine o'clock train on an extended wedding trip. They will take up their residence in Simcoe on their return.

Amongst the large number of presents received by the bride was a diamond and emerald ring from the groom, who also gave each of the bridesmaids a fleur de lea set with pearls.

Mr. and Mrs. Innes carry away with them the hearty good wishes of many friends in Peterborough. The Times also extends its congratulations.

Two Officers Shot Dead

Ripley, Tenn, Jan. 10.—Eadly today Marvin Turner and W. D. Turner, officers, arrested a desperate negro named Gingerly, and were escorting him to the Ripley jail, when two negroes, brothers of the prisoner, shot both officers in the back, killing them. The latest reports from the large posse which went in pursuit of the Gingerley negroes, are that two of the miscreants have been caught and lynched.

Should the Earl Die.

New York, Jan. 10.—A London cable says that should the Earl of Ava, eldest son and heir of the Earl of Dufferin and Ava, die of his wound, received at Ladysmith, Lord Terence Blackwood, who married Flora Davis, of New York, would become heir to the title and estate of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, his brother. The wife of Lord Terence is the daughter of John H. Davis, and was married in Paris six years ago.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 12, 1900

THE CALL TO ARMS.

England is gallant England still. Her nobles and yeomen have responded to the late summons of their sovereign just as they did in the days of good Queen Bess. We do not hear that Earls, Marquises or Dukes, without experience in the field, are appointed to lead men into battle solely because of their social positions. The noble and the country gentleman stand shoulder to shoulder in the ranks. Without quibble as to the justice of the war that is thrust upon them they are off to South Africa.

At Magersfontein, Lord Winchester, the premier Marquis of England, met his death just as he might have taken an accident on the hunting field or led the dance at his country seat. The English rendering of his family motto is "Love loyalty." Very rich and socially preeminent, this young scion of the Paulet's willingly gave up a life full of charm that he might claim the privilege of stopping a Boer bullet on the damp and windy veldt.

The Englishman may have his faults, but his loyalty to country ennobles him in the eyes of mankind. Cowardice is not an attribute of his nature when the Empire is endangered. He has on previous occasions underrated his foe, as in the struggle with the American colonies. This fatal mistake induced him to follow an unwise leader into the Boer war without preparation. Unlike, the Spaniard, the Englishman has the frank courage to admit defeat. Nobody can mistake the import of the recent call for militia, yeomanry and volunteers. It is a confession of deadly peril! The summons is expected to yield 70,000 troops. They comprise the second, third and fourth lines of England's defense. This indicates how sorely the country is pressed for men. But the response is prompt and glorious.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Just now it may be said there is a smile on Europe's face over Britain's reverses, but Britain has changed the face of Europe before this.

•• • ••

"Is there no way round?" This is said to have been the question asked by a foreign military attache when he saw the Boer position at Colenso. Gen. Buller having been repulsed, the mere question seems to convince him of now knowing his primer, until one refers to the report of the battle, in which he said—"There are two fordable places in the Tugela." He tried both and failed. Gen. Buller must succeed, or he will never get credit for knowing anything.

•• • ••

It is alarming to think that when our Fenian friends start coming Peterborough will be one of the very first places they will strike for. There is a good brewery here.

•• • ••

We hear, through an exchange, of "political dance to be given soon." A "political dance" is something new to us; but if the voters have really decided to make the office-seekers dance, some good may yet be accomplished.

•• • ••

That the Boers are doing no running recalls the fact that the Flying Dutchman is exclusively associated with the sea.

Censoring dispatches is just a case where the British lion twists its tail to suit itself.

Joubert to Buller—"It's your move?"

And now the Second Contingent boys prepare to go to Africa and take their laager.

Peterborough has done well in supplying brave men for the seat of war.

The Town Council should have given our "sogar" boys at least $100 each.

Our Foes — Thy Foes.

Written for the Times by Thomas J. Crowe, Detroit, Mich.

Dear mother-land our hearts go out to thee
In this thy hour of grief and deep distress,
We stretch the hand of friendship cross the sea
And pray that victory soon thy arms may bless.

Thy power we know will conquer soon or late
Thy mighty hosts few e'er can long oppose,
Tho' envy vile and threats and burning hate
Are constant shown by all thy many foes.

True freedom follows where thy flag has led,
To Commerce thou dost bring "The Open Door,"
Free faith arises where thy soldiers tread,
The world moves forward when thy cannon roar

'Tis a brief day since we did sorely need
Thy friendship. Through all the world in grim array
No friend had we but thee—a friend indeed,
Europe, Asia, all thou didst hold at bay.

At bay that we for struggling Freedom's sake
Might interpose to stay the sufferers' cry,
The cruel power of haughty Spain to break—
A new Republic raise 'neath tropic sky.

Can we forget and bid our hearts be still
And be misled by a delusive game,
To give to boorish bigots our good will
Who fetter freedom in sweet freedom's name?

Through all the world our foes are foes to thee,
This truth, fair England, though some may regret
None can ignore. God of great nations free,
Grant us perceptive minds, "Lest we forget."

"500 ACRES FOR MY HEALTH."

Piles Were Sapping the Life From Him—Dr. Agnew's Ointment Cured.

Mr. M. Beemer, of Knotmaul, Mich., says—"For seven years I had suffered from itching and protruding piles I tried all kinds of cures, but got no relief until I used Dr. Agnew's Ointment. One application did more for me than any remedy I had ever tried. I have been such a sufferer that I would willingly give my 500 hundred acres of land rather than have a return of my suffering from those tormenting things." 35 cents. Use Dr. Agnew's Liver Pills for liver ills. 20 cents. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

Hats Off in Church.

The action of the Rev. Mr. Dunlop, of Midland, in regard to ladies removing their hats in church, is thus commented on by the Free Press—"An announcement was made from the pulpit of the Methodist church on Sunday morning which rather startled the audience and has set thousands of tongues in town talking. Commencing with the Sunday following the ladies were asked to remove their hats during the service. The request was made because the pastor had received numerous complaints that members in the audience could not see the preacher because of some of the displays of millinery worn to the church. The pastor, therefore, made the above request, having first talked the matter over with a number of his lady members, who promised obedience to the request. No doubt some will comply, while others will kick furiously—with the result that—but time will tell. But everybody is talking, and many speculations are advanced as to what the ladies will do with their millinery. To place the hat on the floor is out of the question; to put it on the seat would occupy too much room, and also endanger the delicate creation; to hold it in the lap or hand would be too much bother. A bandbox seems the only solution. No doubt the experiment in the Methodist church will be watched with interest by the other denominations, and if it goes well the innovation may become quite the style."

KEENE.

The Keene Skating and Curling rink is now in prime condition, under the care of Mr. John McIntyre.

We are happy to see Mr. John Kane, who had the misfortune to cut his foot, again able to walk around and attend to his work.

Mr. Sam Mather, our enterprising wood worker, has built some very stylish cutters this winter. Any person wishing to purchase should call and inspect his stock, as they are undoubtedly second to none in the county.

Cordwood is rather scarce in this vicinity and demands a good price.

There is good skating on our river at present, and our boys and girls are taking the advantage of it.

The young people in this vicinity are enjoying themselves immensely. Sleigh loads pass through our village mostly every night, Sunday nights excepted, to the residence of some kind-hearted friend, where they enjoy themselves until the small hours of the morning.

Mr. W. T. Mather was happily surprised on Wednesday night by his Sunday School class, and several friends driving to his residence and presenting him with a handsome clock, as a token of esteem for his services as a teacher. Mr. Mather made a very suitable reply, after which a very enjoyable and profitable hour was spent.

Our local sportsmen report foxes to be very numerous this season. Quite a number have been shot, and no doubt many more will be, as our sports are every day on the alert for them.

Sleighing is again gone here, and pleasure seekers have now to stay at home or ride on wheels.

We are favored with all manner of musical instruments in our village, namely, corporation fiddle, mouth organ, hand organ, Jewsharp, and every instrument imaginable.

A great many in our village are very curious to know whether we are now in the 19th or 20th century. It is not my intention to supply their curiosity by telling them.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 660 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

[illegible] of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clasped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

THE MILL RUNS ITSELF.

Economical Way of Doing Business on a Connecticut Farm.

Joe McCormick of the International Pulp company tells a delicious story of paper making in Connecticut, which shows that operating a mill is not such a serious matter as these big proprietors would have us believe. Strolling along the countryside in haymaking time, Mr. McCormick happened on a little paper mill which buzzed merrily in a shady dell, with everything clean and sweet around it. A look in the office showed no one there, and the visitor then wandered over the mill, hoping to find some one to whom he could talk business. The machine was humming along, and it seemed impossible that there should be no one in attendance. But even shouting failed to bring forth signs of life, and Mr. McCormick was about to leave when he spied some men in a hayfield some distance away.

"I say," he called out to the nearest one when he got within hearing, "who runs this mill?"

"I do," was the reply.

"Well, who's the owner?"

"Why, I am, to be sure."

"Do you mean to say that the mill runs itself?"

"Cert. We start her up at 6 in the morning, and she runs till 6 in the evening. This mill's been weaned, stranger; she don't need a nurse. While I'm getting in hay she puts half a ton of paper on the roll. Gee up, Bess!"—Paper Trade Journal.

Table Talk.

Rather curiously Roxane in "Cyrano de Bergerac" belongs to the modern type which dates from the days of the Hotel de Rambouillet and has always had its votaries in France. To those precieuses mere conversation was une betise. They liked declamations; discussion, not on the right of woman to the ballot, but whether she should be held a little higher than the angels or consent to be beloved. This phase of preciosity led up to the French salon, where that hothouse fashion of preparing an intellectual bill of fare for guests found its most acceptable phase.

Mme. Campan, whose advice may be said to have formed a whole generation of charming women, used to prescribe the subject of talk for dinner tables, just as certain coteries of women prescribe it today. This was her system: "With 12 at table, talk voyages and literature; with eight, the fine arts, science, invention; with six, politics or philosophy; with four, sentiment, romantic adventure; with two, talk of yourself; egoism belongs to the tete-a-tete."—Ellen Olney Kirk in Lippincott's.

BRITAIN'S BEST FRIEND IS THE UNITED STATES

The Boer War Has Brought the Two Countries Closer.

BLOOD THICKER THAN WATER

A Time's Correspondent Investigates and we Give the Truth as It Is.

A Grist of News Interesting to Canadians —How Uncle Sam Regards the Mother Land—Other Interesting Matter.

(Special to the Times, from our correspondent.)

Washington, Jan. 9.—Popular feeling in regard to the Boer war is rapidly veering around in this country. Despite misleading statements to the contrary continually published in Canada and Great Britain, public sentiment here heretofore has always been on the side of the Boers, both because they constituted a so-called republic and because of the disproportionate size of the combatants. But this feeling has been somewhat like that of a man who sees his brother engaged in a fight of which he does not approve. He would not be sorry if the brother got pretty well punched to teach him not to be so hasty the next time, but he would also feel much disposed to take off his coat and go in, if there seemed to be any danger of the brother getting the worst of it. During our war with Spain, Canada seemed to feel about the same way. It considered that we were altogether too cocky and wanted us punished, but not defeated.

As long as England is merely fighting the Boers, she will meet with lots of opposition in this country, but as soon as any European power attempts to chip in, the world will be astonished by the depth of pro-English sentiment that will develop in this country. Blood is a good deal thicker than water, and most Americans realize that the preservation of their own race ascendency depends on the ultimate victory of England.

The close relationship between this country and England was shown at the recent New Year's reception at the White House, when the entire British embassy was present. The Right Honorable Lord Pauncefote of Preston, G.C.B., G.M.G., dean of the diplomatic corps, was accompanied by Lady Pauncefote and their four daughters; Mr. Gerald A. Lowther, first secretary; Captain Charles L. Ottley, R.N., and Mrs. Ottley; Lieutenant Colonel A. H. Lee, R.A., military attache, and Mrs. Lee, his American bride; Mr. C. N. E. Eliot, C.B., second secretary; Mr. W. G. Max Muller, second secretary; Mr. Robert Bromley and Mr. Arthur R. O. Humphrey's Owen, honorary attaches.

The good feeling between the two countries was also emphasized by the pleasure that was expressed at the fact that Mr. Eliot, of the embassy, had recently been made a knight of the order of the fighting saints, St. Michael and St. George. Mr. Eliot's management of the Samoan difficulty, when he represented England as commissioner to those islands last winter, was such as to win for him the warmest official commendation of the United States government, and to make him popular throughout the country.

THE FENIAN INVASION.

A good many Canadians turn up at Washington from time to time. The latest arrival is Mr. Edward McKenzie, of Montreal, who was somehwat amused when asked what Canada thought of the alleged Fenian invasion of that country. "It is all newspaper talk," he said, "and Canadians are losing no sleep on account of it. We know from what source it emanates, and are well satisfied with the knowledge that the fiery warriors who are going to devour Canada blood raw are wind-jammers of the eighteen-carat variety, and that their talk of gore is guff. A few hot-headed individuals, who have deluded themselves into thinking that they have a grievance against England, no doubt realize that this would be a fine time to add to the complications of Great Britain by the invasion of the Dominion and hence the incentive of the raid. But they will take it out in talk.

ENGLAND'S POWER SUPREME.

Another interesting visitor to the Capital during the past week, was Mr. P. Labry, of Manchester, England, who talked entertainingly of the Boer war. "The end of the war will undoubtedly see England supreme all the way from the Cape to the Zambesi," he said. "The Boers had every advantage in men, munitions and position at the outset, and they have won a few battles. But Britain's sea power will enable her to win in the end. Although the navy may not fire a single shot during the war, victory will be due to it, not only because it will make possible the transport of unlimited troops and munitions, but because it will prevent any European nation from taking part, no matter how much they may wish to do so."

AMERICAN CAPITAL IN QUEBEC.

U. S. Consul Almar F. Dickson, has reported to the State Department here that a company has been formed at Gaspe Basin, Quebec, to carry on the oil boring business there. The consul does not expect much from the venture, as he says that 63 wells have been sunk in the last ten years, and that in only one has oil been found, and in that one it has been exhausted. He concludes—"I have conversed with several oil experts during the past five years, and they inform me that the sand and gravel here are not suited to oil, and that the dip of the rock is altogether wrong. This, they say, should be about 50 feet to the mile, and it is about 1,000 feet to the mile in most places where wells have been put down in this vicinity."

WOOD PULP.

Representative Shackleford, of Missouri, has introduced into Congress a bill placing on the free list all wood pulp suitable for or adapted to the manufacture of printing paper, and all printing paper suitable for or adapted to the printing of newspapers, periodicals, or books. Wood pulp is extensively manufactured in Canada.

THE NEW GOLD FIELDS.

Information as to the riches of Cape Nome, in Alaska, continues to come in. The last arrival from that part of the world is K. M. Jackson, who says that the spot is just as rich in gold as it has been represented, and by next summer there will be 25,000 people at work there. He thinks that the resources of the locality have scarcely been scratched over, and that there are untold millions yet to be taken from Mother Earth.

NEW "DIVINE HEALER."

He Agrees for $300 a Day to Raise the Dead Who Have Not Been Dead Too Long.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—A third Schlatter, or "Divine Healer," has appeared in Chicago in the person of a man who calls himself the Rev. Dr. Charles McLean, and who by advertising himself as Schlatter, Maclean has closed a contract for the management of his campaign of "divine healing" with a man who seemed to him to combine all the attributes of a successful and thrifty promoter of such enterprises. Tattersalls, now given over to prizefighting, bicycle races and stock shows, has been secured for temple purposes.

The Rev. Charles MacLean claims to be a graduate of Edinburgh University. He says he is a cousin of Mrs. Dewey; that Hetty Green offered him $5,000,000 for the privilege of becoming Mrs. MacLean, and that he healed Richard Croker of Tammany Hall, for which he received the modest sum of $5,000. He also claims to have foretold the death of Vice-President Hobart and other events of national importance, and all of these things, if properly exploited, he is confident will pack Tattersalls to overflowing.

In his contract with his manager, signed to-day, MacLean aggrees for $300 a day to publicly raise any dead who may be brought to Tattersalls, provided of course, they have not been dead too long; to heal the sick, make the blind see, submit to being buried alive and raise himself from the dead and perform other miracles calculated to draw crowds to the new amusement enterprise.

Family Peacemakers.

More family troubles are adjusted by the magistrates in this city than the average person would willingly believe. There is hardly a day passes that every member of the minor judiciary is not called upon by a determined husband or wife, usually the latter, to issue a warrant. Nine cases out of ten the applicant is considerably excited and is eager to invoke the aid of the law in settling some trifling controversy. By calm argument and assurances the visitor can usually be persuaded to give the offender of her or his peace and happiness another chance, and a home is perhaps saved from being broken up.—Philadelphia Call.

His Opportunity.

"An operation for appendicitis," the surgeon assured the sufferer, "is rather a serious thing, of course, but it is not necessarily an alarming one, and it will demonstrate, moreover, just how much fortitude you have."

"Yes," replied the patient; "I suppose it will show just what's in me. Go ahead."—Chicago Tribune.

Picking Out the Waiters.

The safest plan to pursue at a reception where the waiters and male guests are clad in swallowtails is to jam your hands 'nto your trousers pockets and jingle a few coins when you meet a stranger. If his eyes begin to bulge and his hand commences to travel toward you, he's a waiter. This is a straight tip.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Blackmailer.

Tommy—I bought this dog to make money out of him.

His Sister's Beau—How is that?

Tommy—I expect you to give me 10 cents for tyin him up ever' time you come to see sister. He's awful savage.—Ohio State Journal.

Coolness Saved Firemen.

New York, Jan. 9.—Nothing but ruins were left to-day of the Edison electric plant or reservoir at 45 West 26th street. Harry Pond, chief electrician, for the electric company, played the part of a hero. A piece of machinery was blown to fragments. That Pond was not killed is remarkable. Scrambling to his feet he found the interior of the plant blazing in a hundred places. Pond knew that with the great electric current still in full flow the first stream of water to touch the blazing interior might mean instant death to the firemen at the hose.

With infinite difficulty Pond crawled on hands and knees and turned off the alternating switches, but it was beyond his powers to reach the transformer. In the midst of his endeavors he heard the engines arrive. Rushing to the street he yelled "No water, for God's sake, men, no water."

The warning was not an instant too soon. Pond explained the situation and the building was permitted to blaze away.

BEST MOUNTED POLICE FORCE IN THE WORLD.

NORTHWEST MOUNTED POLICE FORCE AT HEAD OF THEIR CLASS.

One Patrol of 2,172 Miles. Interesting Description of the Men Who Maintain Law and Order Over a Vast Territory.

The Northwest mounted Police, many of whom are going to fight for the Empire in Africa, are a distinguished body. Throughout a territory of seven times greater than the whole of France law and order are maintained by a corps of only some eight hundred men, officially known as the Northwest Mounted Police of Canada, but familiarly known as the "Riders of the Plains." The corps combine the features of a military force with those of a constabulary. Its duties are as varied as the country patrolled. Essentially the riders are soldiers, but they act as magistrates, sherrifs, detectives, town constables, customs officers, license inspectors, fire wardens, court clerks, Crown timber agents, health officers, hide inspectors, game wardens, relief officers, Crown prosecutors, food inspectors and mail carriers. By their discipline and proficiency, by their valor and impartiality, by their hardihood and discretion, and by their soldierly and gentlemanly bearing they have not only won the respect of all the classes they daily come in contact with, but they have acquired abroad the reputation of being one of the finest forces in the world. And they live up to it. Romance and hard work ride side byside in the service. It is the stamping ground of adventurous spirits drawn from many countries, and the passwords are intelligence, stamina and pluck.

FOLLOW THE TRAILS.

They follow the mountain trails. By railroad train or steamboat they go from town to village. They follow the shores of the lake and river. They penetrate the snow mantled forests, and to make accessible some new found Eldorado they cut their way through an unexplored wilderness. Like the meshes of a gigantic net their patrol trails cover a country that measures a thousand miles from east to west and two thousand miles from north to south. In fact, one patrol alone—that from Fort Saskatchewan, in Alberta, to Fort Resolution, on Great Slave Lake; thence to Fort Simpson, on the Mackenzie River, and return via Lesser Slave Lake—covers a distance of 2,172 miles. The patrolling party runs the greater part of the distance on snowshoes and covers the remainder with canoe and paddle. To give an idea of the tremenduous distance travelled by members of the force here is an instance of an officer who, in the course of his regular duties as assistant commissioner during but a single year travelled a total distance of 15,121 miles, 10,461 miles of which were by rail, 900 miles by water, 3,620 miles with horses and 300 miles on snowshoes. By a splendid system of connecting patrols almost every settler in the Northwest Territory is periodically visited by the police.

INVESTIGATE SETTLERS' WOES.

If he has any complaints he makes them in writing, and signs the constable's patrol report, which at the end of the beat is turned over to the non-com. officer. It is then forwarded with the non-com.'s weekly report to the officer in charge of the division. Complaints are promptly investigated. In this way the force keeps constantly in touch with the scattered population, which, in return, readily give every assistance to the police. It is principally owing to this strong spirit of cordiality existing between settler and trooper that a mere handful of men can enforce law and order in a country three-fourths the size of Russia.

FREAT CHARACTERS.

It would be difficult to find in any corps in the world an assemblage of characters more varied than to be met with in the ranks of the Northwest Mounted Police. On the past and present payrolls may be read the name of novelists, "broncho busters," Lords, "river drivers," artists, bushwhackers, lawyers, dog drivers, honorables, packers, bank clerks, sailors, government clerks, fishermen, Oxford and Cambridge graduates, sons of admirals, generals, bishops, and statesmen; former officers of the militia and volunteers of Canada and Great Britain, as well as former officers of the armies of England, France and Germany. About 70 per cent. of the men are gentlemen by birth as well as education. Some of them have a private income in addition to their pay. Fully five per cent., once served in the Imperial army of Great Britain, some having seen service in Egypt, India, Africa, and Afghanistan. The police claim to be the best educated and wealthiest force in the world.

AVERAGE OF FORCE.

The present average of the force is—Height, 5 feet 10 1-2 inches; weight, 167 pounds; chest measurement, 38 1-2 inches; age, 31 years.

The saddle horses used by the police are western bred, being a cross between Indian cayuse mares and thoroughbred English sires. They average 15.2 hands in height. They have immense powers of endurance and are extremely hardy. The record of the corps was made by Sergeant Major Spicer while carrying despatches during the last Riel rebellion. He rode a pony—a little over 14.1 hands in height—from Fort MacLeod to Calgary and return, a distance of 224 miles, in two days, and strange to say, on the morning of the third day both horse and rider went on duty. The police horses are equipped with Mexican stock saddles and head stalls, with Whitman bits, which require only a single rein. The carbines are carried balanced across the saddle and strapped to its horn.

FENIANS ACTIVE IN TROY.

Spies in the Employ of the English Government Watching Their Movements.

Troy, Jan. 9.—For the past two weeks spies in the employ of the English Government have been in this city watching the Irish organization. Troy was the centre of the Fenian movement in 1866, and a strong organization left this city and entered Canada at that time, participating in the battle of Limestone Ridge. Local Irishmen are outspoken in their sympathy for the Boers, and declare that the time is ripe for a blow at their country' oppressors. The Hiberian Knights, at a recent meeting, voted a sum of money to aid the Boers. This organization is well drilled and equipped with rifles. An officer of the organization said to-day —

"Our society is with the enemies of England at all times and will assist them in any possible way. We are aware of the presence of British spies in Troy. One actually gained admission to our organization and attended two meetings before his identity was discovered. We are not making public what we are doing or what we purpose doing, but we are willing to aid the Boers in any way, even to the extent of a run to Canada.

Origin of Diamonds.

The origin of diamonds, which for so long has been a debated question, appears to be explained by a recent discovery near Kimberley.

In both the Indian and the Brazilian diamond fields the gem occurs like a pebble in certain gravelly strata, but has not been traced back to any rock that gives any indication of its genesis. After the discovery of diamonds in the river sand of some South American rivers a peculiar material of a brownish buff color, which turned to a dark bluish tint, was found. It became darker as the miners dug down. The diamonds lay in this material, together with several other materials, such as garnets, iron ores, augite, olivine, etc. Excavations, begun systematically, were eventually carried on on such a large scale that near Kimberley they reached a depth of more than 1,400 feet. Here the rock is about as hard as ordinary limestone. The blue ground is found only in limited areas. The rocks around are of dark shades, banded with hard sandstone, in which sheets or dikes of basalt or some material which was once in a molten condition are occasionally found. The blue ground fills a sort of shaft of colossal size in these other rocks and is itself cut up by similar dikes. The opinions of geologists differ as to whether the gems are produced where they now lie or have been formed of some volcanic explosions. Experts now tend to the belief that the blue ground in which diamonds were found is not the true birthplace. The bowlders are often watermarked and may have rested for ages in an ancient gravel at the very bottom of sedentary rocks of the district. In course of time volcanic explosions shattered the rocky floor in which the diamonds were imbedded, of which the bowlders were only samples, and dispersed it, together with the overlying materials. It is believed that this is the true explanation of the formation of the diamand bearing blue ground.

Tea Drinking and Cold Feet.

Professor Hutchinson, F.R.S., reports the case of a lady who could not take tea because it made her feet icy cold and wet with perspiration. She thought that the soles were chiefly affected and that the hands were also made cold, but not so markedly as the feet. Mr. Hutchinson had long been familiar with the fact that tea made the feet of some persons cold, but did not know that cold prespiration attended it. He believed the coldness to be caused by contraction of the arteries, inasmuch as the feet shrank. Alcohol had usually an opposite effect.

Sing While Marching.

A German army doctor has discovered that singing possesses health giving properties. He claims that it intensifies the respiratory movements, thus rendering the lungs capable of dealing with more air. This increases and strengthens the action of all the organs of the body. Appetite and thirst increase, and the more frequent movements of the diaphragm materially aid digestion. German foot soldiers are therefore encouraged to sing on the march.

Electric Bell Substitute.

A substitute for an electric bell has been devised by a deaf couple. Not being able to hear the bell themselves, and having no servant, they have fixed up an arrangement by means of which when the button at the front door is pressed, the electric lights all over the place light up, and remain so until the button is released. By a reversal of the arrangement, all the lights are switched off when the button is operated after dark.

Handsome Views.

Mr. W. Bunton, the genial up-town ticket agent of the Grand Trunk Railway showed the Times a number of fine views of the Kawartha Lakes. These photos were taken by the official photographer of the company, and are the finest collection of back lake scenes we ever saw. The company propose to have electors made from them, with which to advertise these lakes.

Another Outrage.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—Another outrage was perpetrated in the East End last night, the victim on this occasion being John F. Willis, the little son of Patrol Sergt. Willis, of No. 4 Police division. At half past seven o'clock last night he started from his home at 67 Elliott street to attend the bugle practice of the St. John's Presbyterian church Boys' Brigade. On his way he called at Mrs. Hyne's store on Broadview avenue for a very short time. On leaving there he met started down Broadview avenue towards Queen street. When opposite Sam. H. Defries' place he was struck senseless by a man who stood near him on the sidewalk and who had one or two companions. They carried him into the adjacent lot, rammed his own handkerchief into his mouth, put a rope around his neck and tied his hands and ankles.

At 8 o'clock Mrs. Defries heard him moaning and she and her husband went out to investigate. They found him, and brought him in and sent for Dr. G. B. Fraser. The robbers had stolen a dollar, but his watch and other trinklets were found near the scene of the struggle. His check bone was fractured, but his injuries will not prove very serious.

The police are at work on the case.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUN PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on som these investments. Americans were the first to make a special Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the rea not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at pr taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for co for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are b depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some ea countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c t cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their en ers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so ea picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to con the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPA LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable n copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special op tunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a p of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clien special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in l or small blocks to suit buyers.

REPORTED PARTITION OF PORTUGUESE COLONIES

w England and Germany Would Fare if the Alleged Treaty Were Carried Into Effect despatch from Berlin says that to checkmate Britain's plan to gain a oute to the Boer capital from Deloga Bay by purchasing Portugal's African possessions, Oom Paul is reported to be on the point of declaring war on gal. While this is entirely incredible and while the story of the Anglo- an treaty for the partition of Portugal is generally discredited there is no that England will try hard to obtain possession of Delogoa Bay. From o Marques, on Delagoa Bay, to Pretoria, is but 349 miles by rail, while the e from Durban is 511 miles; Port Elizabeth, 746, and Cape Town, 1,040. ver the line presents few of the impregnable natural barriers of each of the routes, and the possession of the province would put a solid wall of Eng- colonies entirely around the two fighting republics. On the other hand, De- Bay would give the Transvaal a seaport, the chief ambition of Oom 's life for many years.

e partition suggested in the story of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger would the Portuguese colonies as follows —

he most prized autographs in the rld are those of Shakespeare. On- seven are claimed to exist, three natures to his will (each with a ferent spelling), two to conveyances property, one in the folio edition of plays (doubtful) and one in a Tudor nslation of Montaigne. This last is the British museum and cost over 00 guineas.

One thousand guineas was the price en by the late Mr. Alfred Morri- n of Carlton House terrace for an tograph letter written by Marie uart to the archbishop of Guise. is and two other letters (one to the pe and the other to the king of ance) were written by the unfortu- te queen of Scots on the morning of r execution. To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce aves? A most simple process, but one rely adopted, judging by the wilted uff we generally see served. A gentle- an of the old school was my teacher, d while yet a mere maid I was pro- oted to the grand dignity of crisping e lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from e stalk, discarding discolored and im- perfect ones and leaving untouched the iny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you hoose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay a wire basket if you have one; if not, clean, soft towel will answer; gather e ends and sides loosely in your hand d lightly shake the lettuce; then put e leaves in a colander, which you set the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find e lettuce deliciously cool and crisp nough to crack. Never cut the leaves. very large, divide with the fingers into aller pieces.—What to Eat.

MYSTERIOUS OCCURRENCE.

The Remarkable Alpine Experience of a King's Messenger.

At a critical moment of international complication which occurred a good many years ago it was found necessary to send a king's messenger across one of the Alpine passes charged with dispatches the importance of which was so great that they practically involved the issue of peace or war. It was in the depth of winter, and in those days, even under the most ordinary circumstances, a journey across Europe meant no trifling undertaking. The first part of the journey was safely accomplished in postchaise as far as the foot of the pass, where a transfer to a sleigh was necessary. Here, on inquiring at the posting inn for horses and a sleigh, the messenger found to his dismay that none was to be had. "Impossible, monsieur, to go forward this night." Toward evening, however, a private carriage arrived, occupied by one traveler, with a sleigh, several spare horses and plenty of servants—evidently the equipage of a personage of distinction. The traveler halted at the posting inn and after a short parley determined to enter and have dinner, the journey across the pass to be continued at nightfall, when a clear moon might be expected.

Under these circumstances the king's messenger and the other traveler naturally dined together and entered into friendly conversation, with the result that an offer of a place in the traveler's sleigh was gladly accepted by the former. At nightfall the journey across the pass was commenced, the messenger carrying in his hand a small dispatch bag containing his dispatches. The route wound up and up the mountain side, all being soon covered deep in snow. The horses seemed fresh and high mettled and were urged at full speed by the driver. Suddenly, at a turn of the road, a man jumped out from a rock. The horses seemed to shy, and in less time than it takes to tell the sleigh was rolling over and over in the snow, with its occupants tossed hither and thither. Some moments elapsed before the half stunned messenger came to his senses, and when he did so the first thing which struck his astonished eyes was the sleigh tearing back down the pass at breakneck speed. No human being was to be seen beside him, his late companions and, worse still, his bag of dispatches, which had escaped from his grasp in the tumble, having vanished like magic. Nothing remained but to plod wearily through the snow back to the inn, where all that he could ascertain was that the strange traveler was unknown to the landlord and that he had returned by the way he had come with his own horses, explaining that there had been an accident. Neither the mysterious traveler nor the bag of dispatches was ever traced, nor has the full history of the adventure ever come to light up to the present day.—Quarterly Review.

Monkey and Mirror.

I saw a performing monkey the other day. He went through many tricks very successfully. Toward the end of the performance he was ordered to put on his cocked hat before a hand mirror, which he did. He was next told to set it straight, and he tried on his general's headgear repeatedly at different angles, causing much laughter. When all was over and the organ man, his helpers and the two monkeys were preparing to depart, I saw that "the general" had possessed himself of the little mirror and was studying his own countenance with great delight! He had placed the glass on top of the barrel organ, and he bent over it again and again, grimacing energetically. He afterward picked up his mirror and contemplated himself earnestly and contentedly at different angles. His face had been profoundly sad, like the faces of most monkeys I have seen, but now the wrinkles smoothed themselves out, and he nearly smiled.—London Standard.

He Lost the Hole.

Ed Tufts of Los Angeles was playing golf with a friend. When he drove from the third teeing ground, he sliced the ball badly and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grazing cow, and Tufts came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tufts untethered the cow and, with many sounding thwacks of his club, drove the beast to the third hole. There he made her disgorge the ball and, neatly holing it, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent calmly finished the hole in seven and claimed the hole.

"But I made it in two," protested Tufts gleefully.

"No, you didn't," declared the other. "You made it in 39. You hit that cow 37 times, for I counted every stroke," and Tufts conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Mrs. Alfred Clarke, of Hitewan, Manor Co., Iowa, has been the mother of four children. Now she says:

"I am about to become a mother again, and I have been troubled with morning sickness and vomiting. I could not eat any breakfast; but two days ago I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription' twice a day, a teaspoonful at a time and I am pleased to say that I have not had a vomiting spell for two mornings."

The "Favorite Prescription" relieves morning sickness and the other discomforts of the period preceding motherhood by purifying the whole system and by strengthening and invigorating the special organs involved. Morning sickness is due to the efforts of nature to remove from the body every bit of impurity which might offset the health of the little one to come. The direct cause of the nausea is an irritation of the nerves of the feminine organism, which have a sympathetic connection with the nerves of the stomach. The "Favorite Prescription" goes directly to the seat of the trouble, soothes the ruffled nerves and brings comfort at once. It is a safe medicine to take. It contains no alcohol, opium or other dangerous drug. It contains no sugar or syrup. It aids the digestion and is a general-system tonic, while it acts directly and strongly on the one special set of organs

Jimmy and the Baby.

Jimmy's mother kept cows and sold milk. Jimmy himself had nothing to do with the cows, though sometimes he used to carry the milk pail to his mother's customers. The customers all liked Jimmy, with his round, freckled face and bashful grin, and they used to ask him how business was, for, although Jimmy was only 13 years old, he had a business. He made coffins—baby coffins—and sold them to the undertaker. They were nice pine coffins, with all the edges carefully joined. Jimmy received 50 cents for each one.

One day Jimmy stopped at the house of one of his mother's customers to leave some milk. A little boy met him at the door.

"We've got a new baby!" said the little boy. "Would you like to see it?"

Jimmy nodded. The little boy's aunt laughingly led Jimmy to the cradle where the new baby was. Jimmy gazed at the infant for some time, speechless with admiration or some such emotion.

"What do you think of it, Jimmy?" asked the aunt.

Jimmy grinned.

"I guess I'll have to make a nice little coffin when I go home," he said.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Boers Great Pioneers.

The Boer is the ideal pioneer. From the days of the great trek, in 1837, and even before that he opened up countries hitherto unexplored by a white man. A great deal of fuss has been made of mighty travelers, English and foreign, who have traversed Africa, to the vast pecuniary benefit of their publishers and with no small meed of fame to themselves, but there was scarcely one of the old voortrekkers and hunters of the forties and fifties who did not accomplish feats of endurance, pluck and lengthy travel which were ten times as trying.—London Mail.

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 11, 1900

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

Declined.

The Public Library board have declined the proposal of the Town Council to reduce its annual fee and accept in lieu thereof an annual grant of $300. The board claims that the sum is inadequate.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

A Coming Treat.

The amateur theatricals announced to take place in the Opera House on Tuesday evening next, 16th instant, promises to be a very enjoyable event. The plays will be "Are Belle" and "My Lord in Livery." Admission, 25 and 50 cents. Plan at Bradburn's office.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The elections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto and are up to date For sale at Times Bookstore.

Heavy Stock Transactions.

Mr. M. S. Kennedy has been buying and shipping stock from Western Ontario, to the United States for several days. Mr. H. P. Kennedy yesterday shipped six cars, containing about 200 head of cattle to Kansas city, two cars to Ohio, one car to Buffalo, and a car of fat cattle to Toronto. Mr. Kennedy also imported during this week, 800 to 1,000 hogs for the Matthews Company. The demand for good stocker cattle is good, with tendency for strong prices for choice stock.

Shed Them Now.

If you have any tears to shed, you may as well prepare to shed them now. Since General Buller's reverse there has been nothing quite so harrowing as the proposal to have our town engineer pass upon the work done last season—work in which he himself was the chief blunderer—with a view to their final adjustment. Mr. Hay is a good citizen, but has lack of experience in managing men, and in work of street building, where he is pitted against men who are after the big end every time, makes the future gloomy indeed for the unfortunate taxpayer.

A Query Answered.

No, my dear boy, the Town Council does not open its proceedings with prayer. Although legislative bodies usually do so, our little local parliament has never asked for divine guidance in its deliberations. Your suggestion, my dear fellow, is not a bad one. The ministers of the town might, with great advantage to the long-suffering ratepayers, take their turn and offer a short prayer at the opening of the council meetings. It might at least have the effect of reminding their hearers that there is a place in the sweet-bye-and-bye where political bosses and crooked contractors cannot enter. The Times has long had a monopoly of trying to keep the members of the Council in the narrow path. It is willing to share its labors with the church.

THE POULTRY SHOW.

Second Day of the Great Exhibition—Notes on the Exhibits.

Yesterday was the second day of the Ontario Poultry show. Everybody who has visited the market hall has been much impressed with the magnitude and excellence of this exhibition and all have gone away much pleased. The attendance so far has not been as large as it might, but is satisfactory.

The secretary, Mr. Thos. Brown, who hails from London, is an advocate of a free show, holding with good reason the opinion that the municipal grant should be large enough to allow the committee to throw open the doors to the public.

Judging was concluded to-day. It aroused great interest among the fanciers. Competition in all classes was keen and the judge had no easy task. Among the largest exhibitors are Wm. Barber, Toronto; Wm. McNeill, London; Richard Oke, London; these two being two of the most prominent fanciers in America and winners of many prizes at New York and Boston; J. McGill, Port Hope; M. T. Burn, Mayor of Tilsonberg; George Bogue, Strathroy; Allan Bogue, Strathroy; the latter being one of the oldest exhibitors in America, and president of the Ontario Poultry Association; J. Daniels, Toronto; O'Brien and Colwell, Paris; G. S. Oldrive, Kingston; Thos. Rice, Whitby; Mrs. J. H. Shales, Toronto; T. H. Scott, St. Thomas; Wm. Stewart & Son, Menie; True and Williamson, Lindsay; W. R. Knight, Bowmanville; F. C. Hare, Whitby; H. B. Donovan, Toronto, editor of the Canadian Poultry Review. The exhibitors come from almost every county of the province.

In the dressed poultry class Mrs. Hugh Mackay makes an exceedingly creditable exhibit, one to be proud of. She shows three geese, three turkeys, four ducks and four chickens. They are in perfect condition and have been much admired. J. H. Parsons, of Asaca, also shows a pair of chickens dressed that are about as nice as anyone could wish to see. R. McCurdy, London, makes an exhibit of large and heavy eggs.

This afternoon Mrs. Yuill gave an exhibition of the cramming machine, used for fattening, that was watched with interest. Its usefulness and profit were well demonstrated.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert, of the Dominion experimental Farm, also gave an exhibition of the scientific killing and dressing of fowl this afternoon. It was an interesting process and was watched by a large crowd.

The display of pigeons is a large one, and includes all varities, carriers, fantails, pouters, turbits, etc. The rabbits also are an interesting collection, some strange looking animals coming in under the different classes. The canaries are very pretty and at times entertain the sightseers with sweet songs. There is a pair of green paraquets in a class all by himself.

GREAT REDUCTIONS

Ashburnham Notes.

The annual public school concert, will take place at an early date. Our popular band master has arrangements almost completed.

The water works hydrants are being tested.

New tenders for snow plowing are being asked for.

An electric fire alarm is spoken of.

A Treat for the Pupils

Mr. W. H. Robertson, made a suggestion to the management of the poultry show which was acted upon yesterday and will be continued today. He proposed that the pupils of the schools be invited to see the show and his ideas were communicated to several of the trustees with the effect that the Central and George street schools were marched down yesterday and the pupils spent a couple of hours looking at the poultry. The other schools will go to-day.

Early Training.

"Speaking of poultry," said our genial frend, Mr. Snowden, yesterday to The Times, "reminds me that I once went into the business in a limited way. The trouble was, however, that my fowl, which I purchased mostly from Arthur Blade, were not properly brought up and trained. They would lay an everlasting quantity of eggs when eggs were cheap, and when tehy were dear, they were all on strike. I attribute their conduct to their early training."

Crowded out

Our report of the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society is unavoidably crowded out.

Sensation in China

The Macfarlane Wilson Co., Limited, has secured the greatest bargains in New and Up-to-Date China, Fancy Goods, etc., ever thrown on the Canadian Market. MAJOR H. S. GREENWOOD

Commanding 3rd Prince of Wales' Dragoons, who was entertained last night by the military and civil authorities of the town.

FAREWELL TO GREENWOOD.

The Gallant Major Given a Send-off Last Night.

Major Greenwood, who leaves to-day for the east, en route for South Africa, was given a royal send-off last night at the headquarters of the 57th Battalion. There was a large attendance of the various local military organizations, as well as civilians, all intent on honoring the guest of the evenin.

The proceedings were of an informal character, refreshments being served, and the presentations being made with impromptu addresses.

The officers of the 57th Battalion were the first on the list, and presented the Major with a full set of "Sam Brown's" belts.

The officers of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons gave their departing comrades a beautiful sword.

A number of Major Greenwood's personal friends presented him with a purse containing $155.

The Town Council presented him with a purse containing $50, and also gave him, for the other members of the contingent, $25 for each man.

Speeches were made by those present interspersed with patriotic songs. The proceedings terminated with cheers for Major Greenwood and the Queen.

WEDDING BELLS.

Marriage of Miss Mary Young to Mr. Alex. Davidson.

A very pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon when Mr Alex. Davidson, of Smith, and Miss Mary Young, daughter of the late Wm. Young, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock. The ceremony was performed at two o'clock by Rev. Dr. Torrance, at the residence of the bride's mother, near Lakefield, in the presence of a number of invited guests. The duties of bridesmaid were performed by Miss Payne of Ashburnham and Mr. Archie Young, brother of the bride, was best man. After the usual wedding banquet, the large number of elegant presents received by the bride were duly admired. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson took the train for the west and after a brief honeymoon tour will return to take residence at the home Mr. Davidson has long been preparing for his bride, where his friends wish he and Mrs. Davidson will spend many happy years. "Sandy" as he is familiarly known to his friends, enjoys great popularity and will receive many congratulations upon the happy change in his life.

District Meeting.

The annual meeting of L.O. District Lodge of West Peterborough, was held in Unity Hall on Tuesday evening Jan. 9th. A large representation of members of the Order was present. After the general rotuine of business was transacted the following officers were elected for the coming year: District Master, Bro. Kindred, L.O.L., No. 80, re-elected; Dep. M. Bro. J. Beggs, No. 457, re-elected; Chaplain, Bro. Batten, No. 321, re-elected; Rec.-Sec., Bro. J. Bartley, No. 80, re-elected; Fin.-Sec., Bro. Robert Wilson, No. 80; Treas., Bro. J. Murry, No. 80, re-elected; Dir. of Cer. Bro. McCarthy, No. 321, re-elected; Lecturer, Bro. Holden, No. 321, re-elected. The newly-elected officers were then installed by Past County Master Bro. J. B. McWilliams. Short and appropriate addresses were then given by the newly elected officers and other members of the Order. God Save the Queen.

Britons Three.

During the past few days a treat has been offered to the public in the form of a magnificent picture entitled "Britons Three," a reproduction of a tableaux of the same name which was recently given at the "Red Cross Society's entertainment. The picture is the work of Mr. R. M. Roy, who certainly deserves great credit for it.

TOO MUCH HONEY.

Palls on the Palate.

A man ate a heaping saucer of Grape-Nuts every morning because they "tasted so good."

In about ten days he began to turn against the food, and finally lost the pleasure of his favorite dish altogether.

The same thing happens to a child who eats too much honey or candy, or any other good thing. The system gets more than it needs and nature revolts, in order to prevent further over feeding. Grape-Nuts furnish a condensed food, and when eaten in moderation, give one a delicious dish every morning that is looked forward to with pleasant anticipation. When not more than three heaping teaspoons are used at a meal, the system quickly absorbs all of the nutriment, and the person discovers this fact by his improved feeling of health and strength. Use Grape-Nuts steadily, but avoid excess.

PETERBOROUGH WINS

The Second Round in the Intermediate Series.

The second half of the Belleville—Peterborough II draw in the O.H.A. series was played off last night on the Charlotte street rink.

Ernie Wasson acted as referee and the umpires were W. Holton for Belleville, and Geo. H. Giroux for Peterborough. The teams lined up as follows:—

Belleville—Winchester, goal; Adams point; Wallace, cover point, and Long, McGuire, Erley and Marks, forward.

Peterborough—Miller was between the posts; Cavanagh, point; H. Armstrong, cover point; and Morgan, Whitcroft, Young and Walton, forwards.

The game was very exciting and fast, and although the Peterborough boys had the best of the game, by long odds, in the first half, their centre forward Young, did not seem to know his place and seemed unable to cover the puck for he was given chances repeatedly to score, but overran the puck every time. He should have had five or six goals to his credit in the first half, but failed every time. In the second half the positions of the men were changed and the result showed itself in the score.

The game started at 8.11 and Belleville scored the first half in four minutes.

Peterborough the second in five minutes, while Belleville chalked up the third and fourth in 10 and 15 minutes respectively.

In the second half the onlookers had a chance to cheer, for Peterborough scored as follows:—
1st in four minutes; 2nd in one minute; 3rd in ten minutes; 4th in two minutes; 5th in eight minutes; 6th in three minutes; 7th, Belleville in two minutes 8th, Peterborough in four minutes and 9th in ten minutes. The total for both halves being Belleville 4, Peterborough 9, a majority of 5.

As Belleville won at home last week with five goals to the good it leaves the result of the round a tie. The visitors were asked to play off the tie but refused.

The usual cheers wound up the game.

The juniors are to be congratulated for retriev the fortunes of the club which seemed to have been thrown away by the seniors at Belleville.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The poultry men dine at the National to-night.

If "Subscriber" wants his letter published, "Subscriber" must send in his name.

The annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company will be held on Monday next.

ATTACK RESUMED.

London, Jan. 11.—The Telegram s the following: Frere Camp, Monay, firing from the Boer positions ound Ladysmith began early toy and still continue, but the cannading is light and irregular. Our naval guns at Chieveley sent ree shells again this morning into e Colenso lines.

FRENCH'S POSITION.

London,Jan. 11.—A Rensberg, Cape olony despatch states that the British hold a position on the Boer's right mmanding the Colesberg bridge oad.

Cape Town, Jan. 8.—A man who has st returned from Rensburg says General French holds a very strong osition. He has hemmed the Boers n on three sides, and there is now nly one exit opened to them. Another ,000 men would enable him to surround the enemy. The reverse to the uffolk Regiment does not affect the osition in any way.

BOER PRISONERS.

Modder River, Jan. 8.—Forty-one prisoners belonging to the Sunnyside commando of the Colonial Dutch took a train here yesterday afternoon for Cape Town, under the escort of a section of the Duke of Cornwall's Infantry Regiment. The prisoners were allotted to comfortable seats in the train. Like all other Boers, except the Statts Artillery, they were without uniform. About a dozen wore blue white-spotted scarfs around their wide-brimmed hats. Most of them were men at least 40 years old, but there were half a dozen youths. They looked like typical veldt peasants, loose-jointed, unkempt and round shouldered. They carried blankets given them by the British troops at Belmont, and watched the preparations for sending them to Cape Town with stolid indifference.

Among the prisoners are second and third leaders of commandos.

Documents captured include the political records of residents of the country for 50 miles in the neighborhood of Sunnyside. Stationery of the British Government has been used for Boer correspondence, which was found in the magistrates' offices of evacuated towns.

There was the usual outpost cannonade this morning.

BOERS LOST HEAVILY.

London, Jan. 11.—Winston Churchill sends the following:

Camp Frere, Jan. 8.—A powerful British army concentrated at Frere and Chieveley is awaiting with impatience the order to march to the rescue of Ladysmith. News of Gen. White's triumphant defense of the town Saturday produced intense satisfaction and an arden desire to go immediately to his relief.

The official accounts from Ladysmith show that the Transvaal and Orange Free State forces in unusual strength attacked General White's position around Ladysmith, particularly Wagon Hill, not sign Post Hill, as first reported, and Caesar's Camp, before dawn.

The besieging army, reinforced from the commandos which are holding General Buller's force in check, pushed the attack with great courage and vigor in spite of a terrible fire. The assault actualy penetrated the British lines. Some intrenchments on Wagon Hill were taken and retaken three times. Col. Hamilton, who commanded there, made a stubborn and brilliant defence, remaining master of the position at the finish.

The Boers continued their attack till 7.30 p.m. They had succeeded in holdinging one position all day, but at dusk during a heavy rainstorm they were expelled by a splendid bayonet charge of the Devons led by Col. Park.

All attacks had failed, the Boers being everywhere repulsed with heavy losses, which greatly exceeded those of the British.

METHUEN STAYS.

London, Jan. 11.—The officials of the War Office here deny the report published in the United States that Gen. Methuen has been recalled.

AMMUNITION GONE.

London, Jan. 11.—Even the announcement of the arrival of Field Marshall Lord Roberts and General Kitchener at Cape Town, has failed to stem the growing impatience of the country at the prolonged inactivity in the main British camp and the entire absence of news giving an adequate insight into the local situation.

The public and press, being unable to form any just judgment as to the actual position of affairs, stores are rife that inaction is orced upon Gen. Buller, owing to the exhaustion of the reserves of ammunition, and there are even wild rumours of a shell famine at home. But not much importance need be attached to these rumors.

It is almost universally assumed that when the landing of Generals Roberts and Kitchener, a prompt return will be made to the original plan of campaign, namely a great central advance on Bloemfontein. But the most impatient of the enthuiasts admit that General Roberts will be unable to move before the end of the month.

Up to the time of filing this despatch no news of any importance has been received to-day from South Africa.

BATTLE IN PROGRESS.

London, Jan. 11.—There was a rumor current in the clubs late in the day that a battle was progressing at the Tugela River, but nothing could be obtained in corroboration of the report.

A TANGLED PROBLEM.

London, Jan. 11.—The Times says—Lord Roberts arrived at Cape Town yesterday, and the nation trusts that when he has had time to master the problem before him the operation will display a coherence and intelligence that they have hitherto lacked. Mr. Balfour's successive speeches at Manchester, by completely ignoring the fiduciary relation in which the Government stands to the country, affords confirmation of Lord Beresford's statement that no siuhc thing as Ministerial responsibility exists with regard to the army and navy. The course of the war is a clear proof that somebody is to blame. The fault must lie somewhere between the Generals, the system and the Cabinet.

SAYS BOERS ARE LYING.

London, Jan. 11.—The War Office announces that the list of British casualties at Ladysmith last Saturday has not yet been received.

The following despatch, dated at Frere Camp, Jan. 10, noon, has been received from General Buller:

"A Transvaal telegram gives the enemy's loss at Ladysmith on Saturday as follows: Four killed and fifteen wounded, and this after it is admitted they had endured a withering fire from six masked batteries and had been defeated at all points.

"Natives here assert that the Boer loss in one command alone was 150 killed and wagon loads of wounded.

"The heaviest loss is said to have been among the Free Staters, who were forced by the Transvaalers into the most dangerous places."

BY KRUGER'S ORDERS.

London, Jan. 11.—The Standard's correspondent at Frere cables that he hears from a good authority that President Kruger asked the Boer headquarters why Ladysmith had nto been attacked.

A reply was sent saying, "We would lose too heavy."

President Kruger then suggested that the Orange Free State troops be put in the forefront. The hiont was taken, and the Free Staters justified the suggestion, they behaving better than the Transvaal Boers.

The former at least managed to seize a hill from the British, while later the Transvaal Boers retired before General White's counter attack amid the jeers of their Free State comrades, who stuck to the captured position until the British were upon them with their bayonets and a number of them were killed with this weapon.

FORBADE THE BANNS.

Sensational Proceedings in a Church in Belleville.

Belleville, Jan. 11.—For some time past Mr. Harry Demarsh and Miss Jennie Ruttan have been keeping company together. The young man is Roman Catholic, and the young lady is a Methodist, but she did not propose to allow her religious convictions to stand in the way of her future happiness, so she went over to the church of her intended.

Saturday morning at the services in connection with the feast of the Epiphany in St. Michael's church, Rev. Monsignore Farrelley published the banns of the young couple. Mrs. Ruttan, the young lady's mother arose and forbade the marriage. No little sensation was caused among the worshippers at this unusual proceeding, but as the young lady's mother had a perfect right to do so, nothing was said or done.

Mrs. Ruttan was not satisfied with this, but she then went to Magistrae Flint and asked him to write to Rev. Monsignore Farrelley, forbidding him to perform the marriage ceremony. The young lady is only 19 years of age and if she wishes to marry she will have to wait until she is 21 years of age. At present she cannot marry without her parent's consent. Magistrate Flint wrote the letter and the outcome of the case will be watched with interest.

ASKS MONEY FOR KRUGER.

New Yorker Explains Method of Equipping Recruits From America

Sedalia, Mo., Jan. 11.—A well-known resident of Sedalia who publishes a secret society journal has received a comunication that should throw light on the question concerning the source of the funds provided to transport volunteer recruits from America to South Africa to join the Boers.

The letter to the Sedalian is from George W. Van Siclen, who has been seen often around the Orange Free State consulate in New York. Inclosed in the letter is an appeal to Americans in behalf of the Boers asking for liberal donations of money to aid the Boers in their struggle against the British and fo r the relief, of the widows and orphans of the Boers killed in battle. The appeal also advises Americans to join the ranks of the Boers under Kruger's banner.

Mr. Van Siclen writes that the money will be placed in bank to the credit of the fund and that he will send formal receipts to contributers. He is the treasurer and his office is given at 111 Broadway, New York.

Repudiated by the Archbishop.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—Father Younan, who is at present preaching a series of missions to Protestants in St. Patrick's church, in reply to a querry, states that His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi, has repudiated entirely the article published in Semaine Religieuse last week.

Father Younan added that he was requested by the Archbishop to express publicly the loyalty to the British crown, of himself, the clergy, and every Catholic in his archdiocese.

Big Fire in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 11.—About 4.45 this morning, fire broke out in the Manitoba Produce Company's building Bannatyne street east, and soon the whole building was in flames, notwithstandingthat three engines were constantly employed the whole structure and its contents were totally destroyed. The loss will considerably exceed $70,000. The fire was caused by a defective stove in a wooden shed back of the premises.

DILKE BLAMES THE GOVERNMENT.

He Says They Did Wrong to Refuse Capable Colonial Troops Offered Them.

London, Jan. 11.—Sir Charles Dike, member of Parliament for the Forest of Dean division of Gloucestershire, speaking at Cinderford last night, said that Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Government leader in the House of Commons, had asserted that a sufficiency of steps had been taken by the Govern ment, considering the knowledge possessed by the Government at the time, but had admitted a full knowledge of the Boer armaments.

Sir Charles declared that he was prepared to ask in the House of Commons "Whether the Government had taken sufficient steps—the right steps in the military situation, with due regard to the facts known at the time?

"The language Lord Salisbury employed in Parliament," he continued, "constituted an unnecessary menace—the very thing which Mr. Balfour said it was a Government's first duty to abstain from—and made war probable. Mre than this, the Government is responsive for the fact that at the outset of the war we were without guns enough for one army corps."

Sir Charles criticized the Government's refusal of capable colonial troops, qualified to ride and shoot, and their acceptance instead of these of 10,000 Imperial Yeomanry. Of the latter he said it had been alleged that they were neither good horsemen nor good shots. In his own own opinion, the yeomanry probably rode well enough, but there was a very great doubt as to the shooting capabilities of a large percentage.

AT A DISTANCE OF TWENTY PACES.

Col. Watson Led His Men to Top of Hill and Into an Ambush of the Boers.

London, Jan. 11.—Fuller details of the disaster to the Suffolk Regiment do not improve the original story. The companied of the Suffolks reached the summit of the hill, where the Boers lay. Lieut.-Col. Watson addressed the men and officers, and an advance was made with fixed bayonets. The Boers, who were hidden in entrenchments, reserved their fire until the Suffolks were within twenty yards, and in the meanwhile crept around Watson's force. On the order being given to charge, Col. Watson was immediately shot through the head; then the adjutant fell, but still the British troops advanced, mown down by a storm of bullets. They were eventually stopped by the stone breastworks of the Boers. Here they were surronunded and compelled to surrender.

THE FLOUR RELEASED.

London, Jan. 11.—The American flour seized off Delagoa Bay has been released. Ambassador Choate had an interview with the Marquis of Salisbury this afternoon, and received a verbal reply to the representations of the Washington Government. The British note on the subject was sent later to the United States Embassy. The gist of it was cabled to Washington. In brief, footstuffs are not considered contraband of war, unless intended for the enemy's forces.

A BRITISH MASSACRE OF BRITISH TROOPS!

In the Darkness Yorkshire and Surry Regiments Mistake Each Other for the Enemy.

FEARFUL CARNAGE BEFORE BLUNDER DISCOVERED

British Soldiers Shoot and Bayonet Each Other and Fight Their Own Friends for Fully Half an Hour—Boers Charge on Contestants, Who Have to Retreat.

London, Jan. 11.—A British massacre of British troops is the startling news that shocked London to-day. It reached here by mail from a correspondent with General Buller's army in Natal, and told of a mistake that set two British regiments fighting each other in the darkness, until the ground was strewn with dead, when the blunder was discovered.

Col. Kitchener, brother of Lord Kitchener, was in command of the force that moved out of Estcourt on November 2nd to drive off a force of Boers reported by scouts to be in camp at Willow Grange. In the attacking force were four companies of the West Yorkshires, two of East Surrey, two of the Queen's Imperial Light Horse, the Sixtieth Mounted Rifles and the 15th battery of Field Artillery. The correspondent thus describes the scene of bloodshed that followed—

The little expedition marched out in good order. Major Hobbs at the head of the West Yorks, the officers of that regiment carrying rifles for the first time. Arrived at a prearranged destination, the force bivouaced for the night amid one of the most terrible hailstorms ever seen in this country of tropical showers. As they lay uponthe veldt fearful to make a move or sound, the hail beat down upon them like gravel from a shute. The hail had given place to when at 3 a. m., Thursday, November 23, the order was given to commence the attack.

Complete silence reigned over the supposed position of the Boer camp. The darkness was extreme. The East Surreys were to attack from the left. The Yorkshire Regiment was to swing around and attack from the right. Strict orders were given that not a shot should be fired, the object being to rush the Boers from their position at the point of the bayonet. All went well until both columns had reached a point 200 feet from the summit of the supposed Boer position, when a sentry challenged, at the same time covering Major Hobbs with a Mauser. A lucky shot from a colored sergeant saved Hobbs and killed the sentry—a lucky shot for the officer, but an unlucky one for many of his men for the right division had swung around higher on the hill than the Surreys, and when that shot rang out the Yorkshires were mistaken by them for the enemy. The Surrey men immediately poured a volley into their comrades higher up the hill, and the Yorkshire boys getting excited fired down upon their friends. For many minutes the battle raged between two British regiments. Then with a yell the Surrey men charged up hill with bayonets fixed, killing and wounding their countrymen in the Yorkshire men standing their ground and giving as good as they received. In the darkness khaki uniforms were not recognized, and it was not until the hill was strewn with dead and dying that the terrible mistake was discovered.

By that time streaks of light were shooting upward in the eastern skies, and the Boers, whose camp was about two miles further north, were upon the British in force. The Yorkshires took a position on the hill behind loose stones, but it was afterwards found the Boers' guns on a further hill had the range of this wall to the inch, and soon the Yorkshiremen were swept by a tremendous fire. Fortunately the Imperial Horse and 60 Rifles Mounted Infantry came to the rescue of the little force, and the action became general. The Boers numbered fully 800 men and were well supported by artillery, so that the order to retreat was given.

Deeds of Valor.

At this time the infantry had been without food thirty hours and exposed to a terrific storm. Moreover, they were entirely demoralized by the thought that they had been killing and maiming their own men. During the retreat many deeds of valor were done and at one time the Imperial Light Horse held in check the whole Boer force. Major Hobbs, of the West Yorkshires, remained to the last, looking after his wounded, especially those who had been hurt by their own countrymen, and as a consequence he was captured by the Boers and is now a prisoner.

The full casualties in this most unfortunate action amounts to two hundred, and perhaps half of these were due to the extraordinary blunders which led British soldiers to shoot and bayonet each other and fight their own friends like demons for fully half an hour in excitement and darkness, before their terrible mistake was discovered. This was one of the most cruel episodes in all this cruel war.

ROYALLY ENTERTAINED.

BANQUET OF THE POULTRY MEN LAST NIGHT.

A Splendid Feast Held in the National—The Visitors Pleased With Peterboro—Great Credit for Our Local Association.

The Peterborough Central Poultry and Pet Stock Association entertained the visiting poultry men to a very elaborate banquet at the Hotel National last night, and taking the opinion of the representtive visiting gentlemen, they have not had any better time, no better accommodation, and by far the best service of any place where the Ontarion Show has been held before. The banquet was held in the hotel dining room, which had been most gaily decorated for the occasion with bunting, flags and national mottoes. The layout of the festive board was of not an ordinary kind, while the service extended by Mine Host White was loudly commended by visitors and local men. They were pleased in every way. There was a tone about everything and not a guest left for home who but felt that he had spent a royal time, both internally and externally.

It was shortly after nine o'clock when the guests were called to order by Hon. J. R. Stratton, President of the Ontario Association. The wants of the inner man were at once relieved by the service of the menu. This duty it was not hard to do, and the viands were done justice to by all.

When this important part of the entertainment was completed the chairman, Hon. J. R. Stratton, introduced the toast list in a few well chosen remarks, and he proposed a toast to the health of "The Queen." The proposer referred to the unanimity of the British Empire, and pointed out that it was the aim of the Queen, assisted by good advisers, to protect the welfare of her subjects the world over. It is needless to say that the toast was heartily responded to with rousing cheers.

The Governor-General and Lieutenant Governor came next on the toast list, and was drank to with the greatest of enthusiasm.

Mr. Allan Bogue, of London, President of the American Poultry Association, proposed the toast of the "House of Commons and Legislative Assembly," in a very clever eulogy on the beauties of Canada's system of government. This toast was responded to by Mayor James Kendry, M. P. and Hon. J. R. Stratton, M. P. P. The latter gentleman made one of his clever speeches, which are always to the point and appropriate to the occasion. He pointed out the chance there was to develop the poultry industry, and expressed regret that the farmers had not taken more interest in it. He also expressed the wish that the Association would in the near future return again to Peterborough.

It was the pleasing duty of Mr. Brown, secretary of the Ontario Association, to propose the toast of "The Mayor and Corporation." Mr. Brown was delighted with Peterborough's reception of the Association, and hoped to have a chance of coming back in the near future.

Mayor Kendry, responding, thanked the gentlemen for the hearty manner in which they had received the toast, and expressed pleasure in extending the freedom of the town, and stated that he would endeavor to have the police called off during their visit in town. The Mayor's joke was heartily appreciated.

Messrs. T. Cahill, Harry Winch and T. B. Bradburn also responded as ex-Councillors to the toast.

"Our Guests and Members of the Ontario Association," was well received wre proposed by the chairman. Responses were made by Mayor Burns of Tilsonburg, Mr. Bogue of London, Dr. Bell of Toronto, Mr. McNeil of London, Mr. Jarvis of Baltimore, Mo; and Mr. Gesborn, President of the Eastern Poultry Association.

It was evident from the remarks of the speakers that their reception in Peterborough had been more than ordinary. They all referred to the beautiful hall , Peterborough had for holding a successful show and Mr. Bogue stated without hesitation that it was the best hall for the purpose the show had ever been heldin. It was gratifying to the local Association to hear the words of praise which came from the lips of these representative visitors and it was the wish of one and all that they would have the privilege of voting for Peterborough again at the earliest opportunity.

The toasts to the Ladies and the Press followed and were heartily received, after which with expressions of regret the banqueters disbanded hoping to meet again.

During the evening Prof. Doucets orchestra furnished music much to the enjoyment of the guests.

The War in Mexico.

Oritz, Mexico, Jan. 11.—Small bands of Yaqui Indians have become very annoying to the Mexican troops during the last few days and frequent skirmishes have occurred. It is almost impossible to get supplies to the troops owing to the Yaquis tactics. General Torre's men are living on the country, and there are times when they must suffer severly for lack of food. Americans who have come from the Yaqui country say the troops have made no headway toward putting down the rebellion.

Lost at Sea.

Paris, Jan. 11.—Heavy gales are blowing along the entire French coast and a number of small vessels with their crews have been lost, although several life boat rescues are reported. A fishing boat foundered off Boulogne Sur-Mer, nine of the crew perishing.

LADYSMITH.

That the eyes of the empire should be turned anxiously toward Ladysmith in these days of supreme test, is inevitable. A disaster there would bring a sincere sorrow to all of us which could hardly be equalled by any other reverse that our arms are at all likely to suffer on the sweeping ring of fire from the Tugela to the Modder. But it will never do to get the notion that the fall of Ladysmith would be the end of the war, or would even greatly augment the difficulty of the British task. Its effect upon the Cape Dutch is about all we have to fear—except of course, the loss of so many good fighting men. It would at once release General Buller to follow up his original plan of campaign, which was, it is believed, to invade the Orange Free State from the South in company with Gatacre and French, and draw the Boers back to the defence of their capital.

Then is not the peril to Ladysmith exaggerated? The fierce assault upon General White's defence was co-incident with the flooding of the Tulega from hills, and probably means that the Boers thought this a capital opportunity to withdraw some of their men from the trenches opposite General Buller and hurl them upon the garrison. The determined character of the assault would indicate that the Boers felt that it was "now or never" with them—that they were shooting their bolt. They have not been in the habit of charging right up to the bayonet point in that reckless fashion. Yet they were repulsed. Genreal White slept on his defences. The flooding of the Tugela would only last a day or two, and the Boers would soon have to hurry back to man their trenches. Is it not possible that the garrison has passed a crisis, and that it is again to enter upon a period of sporadic shelling and slow seige? The relief of Ladysmith is devoutly to be wished for, but neither to be dispaired nor elevated into exaggerated importance.

THE TRANSVAAL'S OPEN DOORS.

Another consignment of heavy guns has recently been landed in Delagoa Bay and forwarded by rail to Pretoria. The fine Portuguese harbor, nearly four-fifths of whose trade has been with the Transvaal ever since the railroad was completed has suddenly come into prominence as a factor in South African affairs, though it has helped the Boers no more since the war began than it did during the four years in which they were preparing every day for the impending struggle.

Dr. Leyds, the Boer agent in Europe, says that the war material accumulated in the Transvaal will supply the republican armies for several years, and his opinion is supported by facts that have come to light since the war began. We know now that ever since the Jameson raid the Transvaal Government has been buying in Germany and France, rifles, ammunition, and light and heavy artillery, to the amount of over a million dollars a year. This is proved by the generalized statement as to the expenditures of the Transvaal war office beginning in 1896, in January of which year the Jameson raiders were captured. Every dollar's worth of these munitions passed through Delagoa Bay and over the railroad to Pretoria. It would not have been possible to enter them at the British ports further south or to carry them over the Cape or Natal railroads without the full knowledge of the British authorities. The Delagoa Bay route and doubtless the port authorities at Lorenzo Marques have thus been of inestimable service to the Boers. They made it possible for them to strain every nerve to place their country on a war footing and at the same time to deceive the British completely as to the magnitude of the preparations.

The fact is well knowy that the Transvaal Government was long opposed to the extension of the British railroads to their capital, while desiring a rail connection with Delagoa Bay. This harbor is one of the most spacious and naturally one of the best in the world, and geographically it is the best outlet for the mineral and other resources of the Transvaal. It is easy to see one of the motives that inspire the opposition of Germany and France to the mere suggestion that the bay shall ever pass into the hands of Great Britain or that the British Government shall interfere with its commerce in any way.

The Germans have large material interests in the Transvaal. The maps and statistics in the "Deutscher-Kolonial-Atlas" show that they have colonies in twenty of the largest towns and cities and that these colonies are prominent in the business affairs of the Republic. The German steamship line to Delagoa Bay is subsidized by the Government and the German immigrants at Lorenzo Marques are among the leading shippers who have started the port on the way to prosperity. The French are much less prominent, but Marseilles merchants are established at the port and are securing a part of the Transvaal trade. These powers believe that the possession of Delagoa Bay by Great Britain would be inimical to their commercial interests in the Transvaal. There are other considerations, but the purely business aspect of the matter is the chief reason why they are watching the drift of affairs at Delagoa Bay with intense interest.

PASSING OF STATUTE LABOR.

Municipalities Throughout Ontario are Abandoning the System.

The appointment of a Provincial Good Roads Commissioner was one of the most praiseworthy acts of the Provincial government in recent years, and has already led to a strong agitation in almost every municipality in favor of better roads and a more systematic expenditure of the money devoted to road improvement.

As might be expected, town and villages have been the first to take action, but many progressive townships are discussing the advisability of commuting all statue labor and placing the repair of the roads in the hands of permanently appointed road foremen or superintendents, who will follow closely the method laid down by the provincial commissioner as the one best adapted to local conditions.

At the recent municipal election the ratepayers of North Orillia township gave a majority of 90 in favor of abolishing statute labor, and a number of other municipalities in various parts of the province registered a similar decision at the same time.

Speaking of the situation as it exists in North Orillia, and which may be considered fairly indicative of the conditions which prevail generally throughout the province, Mr. A. W. Campbell, the provincial commissioner, said—"The condition of the road were not in keeping with the expenditure made on them, and it was time to rectify matters by changing the system. Without wishing to speak disparingly of the statute labor system, he did not believe the people has money or labor to waste on the roads. He was convinced that statute labor, having served its purpose, could be of no future benefit to Orillia township; neither did he think the old system could be recognized to the point of usefulness. People were, he said, deceived as to what road maintenance was actually costing under the present system. He had looked into the township's record of money spent on roads and found, that in addition to labor expended, there had been a money expenditure of $2,500 last year. The record for eight years was $17,178.36 expended, and from information he had received he learned that in ten years $21,000 had been spent in cash and 28,510 days of labor, in all nearly $50,000 in cash and its equivalent. At a far less outlay Orillia or any other township ought to have at least 100 miles of good roads. The township could not afford to pay one-third of its tax bill on roads if it was not productive of results, and it seemed to him that it was time to settle down and accomplish something."

We commend the above arguments to the careful consideration of the council and ratepayers in the townships in this district.

Lt.-Col. Hughes' Case.

A private cable has been received from Lt.-Col. Sam Hughes stating that he is at Cape Town unable to get any military employment. This is attributed to the action of General Hutton towards Col. Hughes mistake was that owing to overzeal in the military cause he wrote an indiscreet letter to General Hutton. That letter will make interesting reading next session of Parliament. Most people will imagine that Col. Hughes in being deprived the privilege of wearing his uniform on the Sardinian and now being prevented from getting any military employment at the front is meeting with a severer punishment than he deserved for any injudicious remarks he may have passed upon Imperial officers, or his recommendations of the fighting qualifications of Canadians. This country has no use for men like Hutton.

Obituary.

MR. ELEAZER YEOUMANS.

There passed peacefully away at his residence at Rockdale in Belmont on Monday, Jan. 1st, Mr. Eleazer Yeoumans, at the advanced age of 81 years and 8 days. Mr. Yeoumans was born in the township of Camden and was married in 1846 to Miss Lumba Ellis Hungerford. He came to Belmont in 1850, settling on lot 18 in the third concession and underwent all the hardships of the early pioneer. He was a man who was highly respected by all who knew him and he died with a firm hope of a glorious resurrection and the salvation of his soul. The deceased gentleman leaves a wife and eight children to mourn his loss. The remains were interred at Rockdale on Wednesday, the last sad rites being conducted by Rev. J. W. Bunner of Havelock.

THE LATE RICHARD LEESON.

The death occurred Sunday, at the age of 60 years, of Richard Leeson, Esq., of the township of Douro. The deceased came to the county from Ireland about thirty-five years ago, following and taking up residence with his brother, Mr. William Leeson, who had settled in Douro, a number of years previously. He was a descendant of the Vanston's of Hackettstown, County Carlow, and the Leesons, of County Wicklow and had strong Orange principles. For the past five or six years the deceased has been unwell and as a result of a stroke of apoplexy passed away, as stated, Sunday morning, being conscious to the last. The funeral took place on Tuesday, and was largely attended.

BOSSY.

Bossy is a kind old cow.
She dreams beneath the apple bough
And swings her tail and rings her bell
While roaming up and down the dell.

I see her through the pasture bars
Eat all the pretty daisy stars,
Then gently toss her head on high
To watch the clouds that dot the sky.

When night makes all the meadow black,
She lets the chickens on her back
Fall fast asleep, and sleep until
The sun comes peeping o'er the hill.

—R. K. Munkittrick in Woman's Home Companion.

THOSE BOER LADIES.

By Middle Life They Are Almost Too Fat to Walk.

The Boer woman is very little like the trim, handsome Dutchwoman of her ancestral Holland. She is seldom pretty. Her complexion is her principal charm, and she guards this carefully whenever she goes out. She is never seen outdoors without a great peaked bonnet on her head, her visits to church being made behind an almost oriental seclusion of veils. This is necessary to preserve the pink and white of her skin, for the climate would otherwise soon tan it to the color of sole leather. Her eyes are small and set close together, and her features are irregular. Her cheeks are broad and flat, and her hair is naturally light in color, although time and weather soon bleach it from its early straw color. At a very early age she loses all her teeth, for she is constantly chewing sweet cakes and confectionery.

A European woman would replace the molars that nature has deprived her of with well mounted works of art, but the Boer woman does not do this. She thinks it would be impious thus to try to duplicate the work of the Creator. Her figure is thick and almost waistless. While still a young woman she begins to grow fat, and by the time middle life is reached she is often so unwieldy that the only exercise she is able to take is to waddle cumbrously from one armchair to another. She is clad in a loose, scantily made gown, devoid of trimming and apparently waistless. The day garments of the Boers are also their nightclothes, so the gown is generally wrinkled.

Samoa's Talking Man.

Samoa's talking man, or "tolafail," is a character. All the affairs of state of the village in which he holds office are carried upon his shoulders. In ordinary he is the chief adviser, persuader, convincer and restrainer of the leading chiefs.

Having the gift of eloquence, he makes the most of it. He enjoys immunity from many things. He cannot be spoken of in ordinary terms. If it should be necessary to speak of his eyes or his mouth or his limbs, special honorable words must be used, words which attach to him alone and have never been applied to the personal parts of ordinary men.

As he stands to deliver his soft, persuasive, mellifluous oratory, with staff of office in his hand and his fly duster thrown over his shoulder, any one can see that he is a man of great importance, or if this is not apparent from his attitude it may be gathered from the attention paid to his utterances by gray haired chiefs and by youths and maidens. If the talking man is a clever fellow and understands his business, he is the chief ruling power in his tribe, although the nominal headship is always vested in a chief or patriarchal figurehead.

Slow Suicide.

A source of great evil among all workers is the widespread habit of eating a hearty meal hurriedly when the body is in a state of exhaustion. Too often, alas, the evil is enhanced by the fact that the food is innutritious, badly cooked and clogging in itself. This is one species of slow suicide, causing a long train of evils which are usually attributed to overwork. Now, it were better to go without food than to take it under these conditions. Your dog knows better than to eat when he is tired, and if you will watch him you will notice that he is always reluctant to be enticed into play after eating. Left to himself he will take a nap, or at least drop care for awhile and rest. Humanity might raise its standard of health by following the example set by the instincts of the brute creatures.—Health Culture.

The Health Inspector, Chief Rossel, made an inspection of the hotels today in compliance with the Board of Health's recommendation.

A QUEER EXPLOSION.

HOW A MOUNTAIN LOCOMOTIVE CAME TO AN UNTIMELY END.

There Was Neither Fire In Her Furnace Nor Water In Her Boiler, and Yet She Managed to Blow Up In the Most Approved Style.

Mr. Henry Alquist, a prominent railroad man, relates the story of a curious wreck, the facts in which he will vouch for.

"It is such a remarkable thing," said Mr. Alquist to a reporter, "that I fear many will be inclined to brand it as 'pipe.' I have been railroading now for over 20 years, and never in all my varied experience have I seen such a unique and complete wreck as the one I speak of—that of engine 1,129 of the Rio Grande Western. Railroad men will tell you that locomotives seldom explode nowadays, but 1,129 did and in a very peculiar way.

"At the time this wreck occurred I was holding down the job of train dispatcher at Soldier Summit, Utah, and a tough old job it was. Never been there, I suppose? Well, Soldier Summit is a station on the top of one of the Wasatch divides, a bleak and lonely place, where the Rio Grande Western has a roundhouse and coal chute located. At the summit are long snowsheds covering the tracks. These sheds protect the line from the winter. And it is only due to this method that a train ever gets over the mountain.

"On both sides of the mountain the line winds down in a succession of winding curves to lessen the grade. Running off from the railway are switches, which, diverging from the grade, run up into the hills and gradually come to a dead level. These switchbacks, as they are called, are so constructed that they can be thrown from any point on the grade. And if a train breaks in two while ascending the steep grade the runaway cars can be switched on to one of these spurs, where the breakaway finally stops after it has run up the spur as far as the momentum attained in its descent will take it.

"All heavy trains have an extra locomotive before the grade is tackled. These are called helper engines and are kept in roundhouses at each side of the mountain with steam up.

"One night I got word from Clear Creek, a town in the western valley, that the 9:20 freight would be 30 minutes late on account of having to pull out a crippled engine, 1,129. She had burned out her flues and had to be hauled to Grand Junction for repairs.

"That night about 10 o'clock, after I had passed down the Salt Lake express, I heard the freight coughing up the long grade from Clear Creek. There was a snowstorm raging, and the wind howled around the station like the mischief. When the overdue 9:20 pulled into the shelter of the big snowsheds on the wind swept summit, the first thing I asked was, 'Where's the dead engine?'

"'Behind the doghouse!' shouted the 'con.' But as I held my lamp above my head I failed to see it. I was just about to call his attention to it when, during a lull in the storm, we plainly heard the familiar rattle of the rails as the runaway engine flew at lightning speed down the mountain. No. 1,129 had broken loose and was tearing down the grade to destruction.

"I jumped and pulled the lever which opened the spur switches. This I knew would prevent a smashup, as the engine would run up on the switchback and come to a stop. But I was too late. Almost at the same instant I threw the lever a terrific explosion was heard from far down the mountain. The runaway had exploded."

"I thought you said a moment ago, Mr. Alquist," interrupted The Scimitar man, "that the locomotive was a 'dead one?' If she had no fire under her boiler, how could she explode?"

"That was the only thing I couldn't understand myself," the railroad man replied. "I could easily see how the dead engine could break loose on that grade, and I could understand not hearing its descent during such a howling blizzard, but the explosion floored me. The only theory which in any way solved the mystery was that the old kettle was blown up by compressed air.

"You see, when the engine broke loose from the freight and started down the mountain the pistons in the cylinders began to act as air compressors. During the rough trip up her throttle probably jarred open, and as the speed increased with every revolution of her drivers her boiler soon filled with compressed air. It was not long before those flying pistons had worked up a pressure of nearly 500 pounds to the square inch, which came in faster than it could escape by the safety valve, and before the old machine reached Clear Creek her boiler let go."

Wanted to See the President.

The Washington Star says that a big, gawky country lad went to the White House the other day just as the president had gone out for a morning stroll.

"I wants ter see the president," he announced to the first man he met.

"Well, there goes the president now," said the man addressed, pointing to the president's retreating form.

"Dern my time!" the young man ejaculated. "He walks just like any other man," and the fellow struck out so that he could get close enough to see the president well.

CLEVER, BUT SOULLESS.

One Woman's New Way In Which to Pay Social Debts.

"I don't know much of the ways of fashionable people," said a young physician not long ago, "for I am not in society, but if many society women are like one I know here in town I think I'm safer to be out of it. It was not this season, but it wasn't so long ago but that plenty of people can remember the circumstances. I had among my patients an elderly woman who lived with the daughter's family. The daughter lived, if not beyond her means, at least up to the very edge, went out a great deal and was entertained a great deal.

"The mother fell sick with a complaint which I knew would prove fatal. I did not inform the family till one day the daughter asked me to tell her frankly what her mother's condition was and just how long she could live. I told her that the old lady could not possibly last more than a fortnight. She begged me not to let anybody know how serious the case was. She didn't want her young daughters distressed, she said.

"Of course I told nobody, and just a week after that I read in the papers that Mrs. Dash, the daughter of my dying patient, had sent out invitations for a large dancing party, to be given on an evening a fortnight away. My patient did not live as long as I had expected. The day after she died I read in the papers that 'owing to the sudden death of her mother Mrs. Dash had been compelled to recall her invitations.'

"She had never intended to give a ball. She could not have afforded it, and she 'bluffed.' I have cold shivers every time I see her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN EXCITING LIFE.

Why the Chicago Girl's Brown Hair Turned Golden Hued.

"Gosh, Marier, but that wus a close shave!" exclaimed Uncle Eben as he dragged his worthy spouse out of the way of a street car that was yet 20 feet away. "This yer Chicago life is 'nough to make a man's h'ar turn gray."

"Turn gray!" snarled his wife. "'Twouldn't be so bad of thet wus all it done. It's decent and respectable to have gray ha'r, but when it comes to makin a poor young gal's ha'r turn yaller jist on account of the excitement uv all these cars an railroads on stilts an bowlin people thet's when I say it's a sin to hev sich big cities. I'm a-goin right out to 'Liza Jane's house, ef I kin ever find it, an stay right in it till we leave Chicago."

"How do you know it makes people's ha'r turn yaller?" asked Uncle Eben. "I ain't never hearn tell of ennything of that kind."

"Well, I see it with my own eyes—leastwise I see it turn brown agin after the poor dears wuz rested all summer in the country. You know them four gals what staid all summer over at Cousin Ellen's? When they fust come, they'd big brown eyes an fa'r complexions an right yaller ha'r. Purty soon every one of 'em's ha'r begin to get streaked in spots, an before the summer wuz gone they all had rich brown ha'r. Then I ast one of 'em what made their ha'r turn brown, an she said it wuz alla's brown, but that the excitin life she'd been livin in Chicago, whar she had to act in a theater every night, made it turn yaller. Poor thing! She looked so much better at the end of the summer that I hate to think of her comin back to this great, wicked city."—Chicago Journal.

The Pent-up Dissatisfaction at its Lack of Energy Bursts Into a Storm.

THE CABINET TERMED A BODY OF PATRIARCHS.

To Call Out Every Available Man Would be the Cheapest Measure of Certain Success—Buller's Delay in Striking the Blow Causing Uneasiness.

London, Jan. 10.—The plight of British arms in South Africa is overshadowed for the present by the storm which is bursting over the head of the home government. The Manchester speeches of Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Government leader in the House of Commons, have loosened such a torrent of criticism from the press and individuals of his own party that were Parliament to assemble to-day, it is doubtful if the Conservatives would retain power, in spite of the tremendous majority of the past session.

Government Lack of Energy.

The pent-up dissatisfaction with the Government's lack of energy in waging war is no longer concealed. When such ardent Conservative papers as the Times and Globe come out boldly with reproof there is no knowing where the agitation will end. The provincial press has already taken up the cry. For the moment Mr. Balfour is the scapegoat, but there is a terrible rod in pickle for the Marquis of Lansdowne, while Lord Salisbury and other Cabinet Ministers will not escap—e unless a wonderful change comes over the war situation.

"A Body of Patriarchs."

A representative of the Associated Press learns that the Conservative leaders privately admit the gravity of their position, but fail to see what can be done. In the meantime they hope that success in the field will abate the popular clamor. Some of the Conservative papers go so far as to regret the extreme age of the Cabinet Ministers, and refer to the Cabinet as a body of patriarchs.

Under these circumstances it is doubtful whether events transpiring between now and the reassembling of Parliament will be powerful enough to restore confidence in the Government and maintain its majority.

Ignoring Lord Wolseley.

There is the important alternative that Lord Lansdowne or Lord Wolseley may be sacrificed. A representative of the Associated Press learns that Lord Wolseley not only disapproved of Lord Roberts' a—pppointment to the chief command of the British troops in South Africa, but allowed his disapproval to be generally known, and that it is a fact that he knew nothing of the Government's intentions in this respect until he saw the announcement of the appointment in the newspapers.

It is said that if it should ever come to a public disagreement between the commander-in-chief and the Secretary of State for War, it would be a more bitter fight than the one waged between Generals Alger and Miles. Whatever ensues the immediate future will doubtless see attacks on the Government such as Lord Salisbury has not had to withstand during the course of his political career.

MORE TROOPS DEMANDED.

London, Jan. 10.—The forces in the field evidently is insufficient, declares the Morning Post's war critic to-day, for no progress is made by either Generals Buller, Methuen, Gatacre or French. The cheapest measure now possible is that which will most rapidly and most effectively increase the forces in the field to a point at which success will be assured.

The proper way to do this is by calling to arms all the trained men the country possesses, embodying at once whatever militia battalions have not yet been called up, then calling out the volunteers as a whole and then calling for all the trained men who have passed through either force, and for fresh recruits for both.

The stoppage of Delagoa Bay as a channel for supplies to the Transvaal has been urged as the most effective metho—d of stopping traffic, and is that which we suggested some time ago, giving a liberal supply of cash and large discretion to the British agent at Lorenzo Marques.

The national determination to win has been expressed by all classes. Now is the time for action. And yet the measures taken so far all bear the marks of a mere continuation of the original plan of gradual reinforcement.

What is Buller Doing?

The Leader's military expert says—

"Still there is no news of any turning movement of Buller, and no news whether he is well or in poor state of health. Looking at telegrams sent through, we should say that they are sent by his staff in his name. We cling to the idea that he is engaged in developing a movement in concert with General White.

"The Leader announces that steps have been taken to form a committee of persons interested in the abortive proceedings of the South African investigation committee for the purpose of a searching enquiry into the alleged complicity of officers of the Government in the Jameson raid. Cartwright Latham is secretary of the movement. P. Stanhope, Llou dGeorge and John Burns, members of Parliament, have been invited to address public meetings before Parliament sits.

The Censor.

The military writer for the Mail notes—"We are informed by a gentleman who has returned from the front that if letters sent to England are calculated to annoy the authorities, erring journalists will be immediately withdrawn from the front. This matter and others will be brought before Parliament at an early date. If General Buller's army has any purpose it is to rescue 9,000 British soldiers from destruction at Ladysmith. It is not possible that Ladysmith will fall before the eyes of 30,000 British troops."

ALL UNITS EQUIPPED.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—The military branch Oof the Department of Militia say that the delay of two days in forwarding the troops to Halifax is due to the Montezuma trouble. But this is in all probability becuuse of the unreadiness of some of the units which were timed to entrain during this week.

At all events there is no evidence of unreadiness on the part of the Militia Stores Branch, or what is known as the Civil Branch, more directly under the eye of the Minister and his Deputy, in selecting anmd forwarding clothing and equipments. Not only have Leiut-Col. MacDonald and his staff received and sorted all the outfits from the contactors, but the troops at all ghe concentration points are practically equipped.

The last of the clothing was shipped from the stores yesterday. So far as equipment is concerned, the units at Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec are all ready to move.

It is not too much to say that hhe aim of the Department is to be able to have it recorded that no better equipped force ever took the field from any country.

A ROMANTIC EVENT.

Quebec, Jan. 9.—What is doubtless one of the most romantic incidents in connection with the despatch of the second Canadian contingent to South Africa, occurred here this morning when the marriage of Captain R. E. W. Turner, of the Q.O.C.H., to Miss Harriet Augusta Goodday was celebrated in the Anglican Cathedral by Very Rev. Lennox William, Dean of Quebec.

The wedding was to have taken place early next spring, but owing to his recent appointment as lieutenant in charge of No. 3 troop "B" squadron Canadian Mounted Infantry, the event was advanced. Captain Turner, upon receiving notice of his appointment, at once cabled his prospective bride, who, on two hours' notice, started at once for Canada.

Should the Earl Die.

New York, Jan. 10.—A London cable says that should the Earl of Ava, eldest son and heir of the Earl of Dufferin and Ava, die of his wound, received at Ladysmith, Lord Terence Blackwood, who married Flora Davis, of New York, would become heir to the title and estate of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, his brother. The wife of Lord Terence is the daughter of John H. Davis, and was married in Paris six years ago.

IS MARS PEOPLED?

Such a Claim Advanced by a German Scientist.

"Is Mars inhabited?" has been asked very often during recent years and has engaged the serious attention of many astronomers and especially of M. Camille Flammarion, a noted French ecientist and author.

Some new light is now thrown on this subject by Professor Ernst Haeckel, an eminent German philosopher, in a book entitled "World Problems. After pointing out that men have been studying the heavens for more than 4,500 years and have only been studying themselves for the last half century he says we may safely assume that the many fixed stars whose light requires thousands of years to reach us are suns and are surrounded by planets and worlds similar to those we know. We may also assume, he holds, that thousands of these planets have arrived at the same stage of development as our world, and it naturally follows that on them the same conditions of life prevail as on this earth, and there is no valid reason why human beings should not live there as they do here.

Professor Haeckel takes care to explain that there are doubtless many planets the temperature of which is such that life, as we understand the term, cannot be sustained on them. He thinks it very probable that there are types of animals and plants on some planets which are not to be found on the earth. According to him it is very likely that the biogenetic process exists on Mars, Venus and possibly some other planets of our system, as well as on planets of other solar systems, but plants on these planets have reached a higher stage of development than has been reached by animals and plants of this earth.

If we assume that Mars is inhabited—and Professor Haeckel seems pretty well satisfied that it is—we must assume, he holds, that the men and women whose home is on the planet are not such as we, but of a far higher type. They may resemble us exteriorly, but they are free from our physical defects and excel us in strength and gracefulness. It is in the intellectual sphere, however, that their superiority is most clearly shown. If there are human beings on these planets, says Prof Haeckel, it is extremely probable that they far surpass ordinary men and women in intelligence.

Finances of Germany.

Berlin, Jan. 10.—In introducing the estimates in the lower house of the Diet to-day, the Minister of Finance, Dr. Von Miquel, declared the budget was the most favorable ever submitted. He added that the surplus for 1898-99 was 84,360,000 marks, and the current year was expected to furnish equally satisfactory and favorable results. The new estimates are no longer based on railroad receipts as formerly. Dr. Von Miquel referred to the reserves contained in the estimates available for times of distress, and said debts amounting to 890,000,000 marks had been redeemed during the last decade.

New Cabinet in Manitoba.

Winnipeg, Jan. 10.—The Conservative Cabinet will be composed as follows:

Hon. H. J. Macdonald, Q.C., Prime Minister, Attorney-General, Minister of Education, Commissioner of Railways and Municipal Commissioner. He will also be president of the Council, of course, though this office is elective by the Council, the president not being sworn in by the Lieutenant Governor as such.

J. A. Davidson, of Neepawa, Minister of Agriculture and Immigration, Provincial Treasurer, and Commissioner of Provincial Lands. Mr. Davidson at present has no seat in the House, but will run again for Beautiful Plains, R. C. Ennis' election having been protested.

D. H. McFadden, Emerson, Provincial Secretary and Minister of Public Works.

Two Officers Shot Dead

Ripley, Tenn, Jan. 10.—Early today Marvin Turner and W. D. Turner, officers, arrested a desperate negro named Gingerly, and were escorting him to the Ripley jail, when two negroes, brothers of the prisoner, shot both officers in the back, killing them. The latest reports from the large posse which went in pursuit of the Gingerley negroes, are that two of the miscreants have been caught and lynched.

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards and letter heads. On a great red splotch intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood," the capital "C" for the three first letters of those words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryville, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

A Scotch Scheme.

The following appears in a Glasgow paper. It would be interesting to know whether it has led to business. If so, the supply of grand pianos in Scotland must be considerably in excess of the demand.

DEADLY SNAKES.

arious Signs by Which Their Character May Be Recognized.

To distinguish between venomous and armless snakes is easy in practice, but it difficult to explain in words alone, as ere is one external characteristic which stinguishes them. It is rather a peculiar, varying union of many separate arks that brands the dangerous reptile. Generally speaking, all snakes may be vided into two great classes—those hich have the head covered with numerous small scales and those which ave it covered with large, regularly fitted plates. Leaving out the elapidae and e poisonous sea snakes, with which e hunter will have nothing to do, all nakes with small head scales move bout by night and those with the large lates on the head by day. This may be nown by their eyes, for the first have ertical pupils like the cat's, while those f the latter are generally circular in orm. The long, active day snake, gliding about from bush to bush or hurriedly aking refuge beneath some protruding ock or tree stump, is harmless. Even hould he lie coiled in the sunshine he will flee from approaching danger. But serpent nicely coiled in some secluded ook which instead of fleeing gathers imself closer together is most probably angerous, particularly if he be more or ess marked with a suggestion of irregular crossbars or whitish or dirty yellow and darker brown or blackish. This is he characteristic coloring of our most angerous snakes, the rattler, the copperhead and the moccasin.

The following points embrace all the eculiarities of our American vipers, and he last two are especially noteworthy as he crowning proofs of venom:

(1) Moving about at dusk or by night, enerally on the ground, and very rarely scending trees or bushes. (2) Seldom lying in alarm, but rather coiling for defense. (3) Colors generally subdued in int, with a semblance of irregular crossbars of lighter and darker shades. (4) Tail short, body stout, neck thin, head flat and very broad, especially behind. (5) Scales keeled—i. e., each scale has a idge down the middle, which gives the kin a rough appearance like a rasp. (6) Head covered with small scales, sometimes larger over the eyes or nose. (7) Eyes with vertical pupils like a cat's. (8) Two pits or holes between the eyes and nose, suggesting four nostrils. (9) Two long, curved, perforated fangs in the upper jaw just in front of the eye, one on either side and so hinged that they lie backward, hidden from view in a membranous sheath, but erectile at will.

Some of the first seven peculiarities may be found in harmless snakes, but it is only in the vipers that they are united.—Outing.

How She "Guides" Them.

There is a jolly mother in Brooklyn who has several grown up sons boarding at home with her, and they declare she wants to "boss" them all the time, just as if they were children. She laughingly repudiates their charge and declares that she merely wishes to advise and guide them, but has long ago ceased to rule them. Here is an example of the way she "guides" them: At dinner the other night a big meat pie and a small roast duck were brought on together. The duck was intended for the father principally. The boys were death on duck, their mother well knew, but it would not make a mouthful apiece for them; so, addressing the boy who sat nearest her, she said, "Which will you have, Bobbie, duck or pie?" and at once began cutting the pie.

"Duck!" said Bobbie promptly.

"No, Bobbie," answered his mother cheerfully, "you can't have duck, dear. Take your choice, my son, take your choice, but you can't have duck!"—New York Tribune.

New Zealand Oddities.

The crow in New Zealand strikes as sweet a note as any heard in the woodland, says Henry D. Lloyd in The Atlantic. The robin has no song and no red breast; the native hen is the greatest of rat killers; there is a caterpillar which turns into a plant. These and some other productions of nature have done for New Zealand what the kangaroo and the ornithorhynchus have done for Australia—given it the suggestion of oddity and the marvelous. Rabbits and sweetbriers, introduced for pleasure, spread like wildfire, and it is an attraction to be duly advertised in the sale of land that it has been cleared of sweetbrier and fenced against rabbits, and then later the rabbit becomes a profit instead of a pest and is exported by millions to feed the English.

Amateur Photography.

Let me call attention to one of the most universally popular mistakes that have to do with photography—that of classing supposedly excellent work as professional and using the term amateur to convey the idea of immature productions and to excuse atrociously poor photographs. As a matter of fact nearly all the greatest work is being and has always been done by those who are following photography for the love of it, and not merely for financial reasons. As the name implies, an amateur is one who works for love, and viewed in this light the incorrectness of the popular classification is readily apparent.—Alfred Stieglitz in Scribner's.

Minnesota's First Book.

The Rev. S. W. Dickinson, an agent for the American Bible society, says that the first book printed in Minnesota was a Bible. It was printed in 1836, about 13 years before the first issue of a newspaper in St. Paul. The Bible was in the Ojibway language and was printed on the mission press at Lake Pokegama, Pine county, under the supervision of Rev. Mr. Ayer, who likewise had charge of the mission farm at that point.

RETRIBUTION.

He saved a little day by day,
Withheld from something that he craved.
"The dollars grow," he used to say,
"From extra pennies that are saved."

His pile of savings grew and grew.
Each day he hoarded more and more;
Each night he ran his fingers through
And gloated o'er his golden store.

And as his wealth increased his heart
Shrank, hardened, shriveled and decayed.
He cheated, gouged and played the part
That many another fool has played.

He rose to power through his wealth;
He crushed those who were in the way;
He gained a fortune, lost his health
And miserably died one day.

Then came his drunken cousin, who
Had thrashed him when the two were boys.
His savings and his stealings, too,
One whom he hated now enjoys.

SCAVENGER OF THE VELDT.

The Aasvogel, Which Keeps the Wide Plains Clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest opprobrium, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it expresses a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.

And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the veldt. But for his quick eye, carrion taste and love of dead meat the disease germs in the carcasses of dead oxen would be far more prolific and dangerous.

Throughout South Africa is found the aasvogel. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and sooner or later—and in all probability the former—you will find the remains of his ghastly meal. There are hundreds of thousands of oxen used in the transport and trekking service. Many of them die from exhaustion, want of water or cruelty from their Boer masters. Or they may eat of the poisonous tulp, a bulbous plant growing in marshy places.

A kurneyor, or teamster, soon knows if any one or more of his oxen have been eating tulp. The neck of the ox swells, his eyes close up, he gives short, sharp coughs, and his case is generally hopeless. Sometimes, however, he may be saved, and this by a peculiar, homeopathic sort of remedy. If the bulb of the tulp plant is crushed into pulp, mashed with hot water and forced boiling hot down the throat of the ox he may recover.

The quickness of the eye of the aasvogel is simply astounding. An ox falls out of the team, evidently ill. He is outspanned from his yoke fellow, and he goes down to the spruit, or stream. The sky above and away to the horizon on all sides is absolutely clear and cloudless.

Hardly has the breath left the body of the poor ox than you may observe far, far away up in the sky a tiny black speck, then another and another and another, until there are 20 of them. Gradually they get larger and larger, circling round in ever diminishing circles all the while they descend. The dead ox forms the center of the circumference of their flight. Within a few minutes the grisly horde swoop down upon the still warm beast and commence their ghoulish task.

An hour afterward there is nothing in the spruit but a bundle of bleached white bones that might have been there for months. The sky is clear and speckless again. The aasvogel has scavenged the veldt.

Whittier's Predicament.

Whittier held "Gail Hamilton" (Abigail Dodge) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them are really most delightful. Here is one of the series in The Ladies' Home Journal that is truly characteristic of Whittier. It was written in 1866:

"I must tell thee something droll. Last week the Amoskeag veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house, and Governor Smyth of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them civilly off, the men in epaulets got up a grand military salute, with music and three cheers to wind up with! Was ever a Quaker in such a predicament? I did, I fear, somewhat compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat. But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows by way of testimony."

He Set at Eight.

He was only a little boy, and this was his first diary. It had been given him as a birthday present and was bound in a red cover, with a highly colored picture adorning the front.

He meant to begin well and early, so he carefully wrote, "Got up at 7." Then, according to instructions, he took it to his governess for approval.

That highly proper lady frowned. "Got up!" she said; "got up! You careless boy! Does the sun get up? No, it rises."

Very neatly she scratched out the barbarous words and made him write, "Rose at 7." This settled Master Tom; no more mistakes of this kind for him again!

So on retiring for the night he wrote, with the air of a man who knew his business well, "Set at 8."

Art Treasures in Japan.

The Japanese idea in regard to art treasures is quite different from the American idea, as seen in the home. The American method is to keep all the good pictures or beautiful bronzes or unique vases in evidence all the time. The Japanese way is to store the artistic belongings, bringing different ones to light for a time, and thereby avoiding the too abundant appearance that is often the rule here.—New York Sun.

Was It Consumption?

Doctors are often wrong.

The local doctor is an overworked individual. He hurries from a case of scarletina to a case of diabetes and from that to the amputation of a leg. He must act quickly—sometimes hurriedly. It is not strange that he makes an occasional mistake. But mistakes are dangerous and should be avoided.

Mrs. G. R. Kerr, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, recently had some experience. She says:

"Last spring I was taken with severe pains in my chest, and was so weak I could hardly walk about the house. I tried several physicians and they told me I had consumption. Before I had taken the first bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I was very much better. I took five bottles of it and have not yet had any return of the trouble."

Was it consumption?
Probably not.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has been said to cure consumption. It surely and infallibly cures all bronchial and throat troubles. It strengthens weak lungs and cures lingering coughs. It is a healer and builder of tissue. It cleanses and enriches the blood—regulates the heart action—puts the whole body in tune with nature.

Mrs. Kerr's trouble was probably bronchial. It was painful—dangerous if let run—dangerous in the hands of an incompetent doctor. Don't take a local doctor's word for everything. Write to Dr. Pierce. Tell him your symptoms. For over thirty years he has been chief consulting physician at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Consultation with him will cost you nothing.

Jimmy and the Baby.

Jimmy's mother kept cows and sold milk. Jimmy himself had nothing to do with the cows, though sometimes he used to carry the milk pail to his mother's customers. The customers all liked Jimmy, with his round, freckled face and bashful grin, and they used to ask him how business was, for, although Jimmy was only 13 years old, he had a business. He made coffins—baby coffins—and sold them to the undertaker. They were nice pine coffins, with all the edges carefully joined. Jimmy received 50 cents for each one.

One day Jimmy stopped at the house of one of his mother's customers to leave some milk. A little boy met him at the door.

"We've got a new baby!" said the little boy. "Would you like to see it?"

Jimmy nodded. The little boy's aunt laughingly led Jimmy to the cradle where the new baby was. Jimmy gazed at the infant for some time, speechless with admiration or some such emotion.

"What do you think of it, Jimmy?" asked the aunt.

Jimmy grinned.

"I guess I'll have to make a nice little coffin when I go home," he said.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Boers Great Pioneers.

The Boer is the ideal pioneer. From the days of the great trek, in 1837, and even before that he opened up countries hitherto unexplored by a white man. A great deal of fuss has been made of mighty travelers, English and foreign, who have traversed Africa, to the vast pecuniary benefit of their publishers and with no small meed of fame to themselves, but there was scarcely one of the old voortrekkers and hunters of the forties and fifties who did not accomplish feats of endurance, pluck and lengthy travel which were ten times as trying.—London Mail.

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

KILLED ON THE TRACK.

Two Fine Young Horses Caught by a Freight Train

Reeve Hunter of North Monaghan met with a serious loss on Sunday last when two fine young colts belonging to him got out on the Grand Trunk track and were killed by a passing freight. The colts were on the Campbell farm with a quantity of other stock and the fence being down between it and the adjacent farm, they were able to obtain access to a field from which a gate led out on the road. The gate was open and the colts wandered out and crossing the cattle guards proceeded down the track, where they were eventually caught and instantly killed by the train.

I. O. O. F. Notes

Hiawatha Encampment, o. 66, met last Wednesday evening and elected officers for the ensuing term.

A large number of the Order came down from Pontypool last night to attend the regular meeting of Peterborough Lodge, No. 111, bringing with them a number of candidates, who received their degrees from the "team" of Peterborough Lodge. Pontypool is a great Oddfellows' town.

Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Workingmen's Building and Savings Society was held when the following officers were elected—President—T. B. McGrath.

Vice-President—A. J. Gough.
Secretary—J. Corkery.
Treasurer—James Murty.
Directors—H. LeBrun, J. J. Dolan, W. Hinchcliffe, Jas. Lynch, A. Murty, P. Corkery, W. Merrill, P. Simmons, sr., A. McDonald, R. Sheehy, M. Riley, G. H. Giroux.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The elections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

Oyster Supper.

A pleasant time was spent Wednesday evening in the C.L.A. rooms, it being the occasion of an oyster supper to the Minstrel Club. There was quite a number of young men and ladies present and a few hours of pleasure were enjoyed. Short addresses were made by Rev. Father F. O'Sullivan and Mr. John Haurahan.

THE HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Annual Meeting of the Society on Wednesday Evening.

On account of want of space our report of the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society, which took place on Wednesday evening, was crowded out of yesterday's issue.

The President's report stated that the attendance at the annual exhibition was better than on former occasions, and the display of plants, cut flowers, etc., ahead of previous years.

The treasurer's statement showed total receipts of $436.96, including $61.96 balance on hand from previous year. The payments were as follows—Salaries, $325; Water Co., $40; tools, etc., $54.31.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year—

President—Dr. Geo. Burnham.
1st Vice-President—D. W. Dumble.
2nd Vice-President—Jas. Stevenson.
Sec.-Treas—Felix Brownscombe.
Directors—Percy Hamilton, Benjamin Cooney, T. A. S. Hay, J. H. Roper, H. Nesbitt, T. E. Bradburn, J. H. Cobb, W. H. Foord, Col. H. C. Rogers, J. R. Stratton, M. P. P., Adam Hall, W. H. Hill, and Rev. H. Symonds.

Messrs. Adam Hall, W. H. Foord, H. Nesbitt and John McClelland were appointed a Park Committee and Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, D. W. Dumble, W. H. Foord, J. H. Roper and W. Stocker were appointed a committee to revise the prize list.

The President, Dr. Burnham and Messrs. Adam Hall, Jas. Stevenson and H. C. Rogers were appointed a committee to wait on the Town Council and to hand the management of the park over to them if it is their wish to take care of the same in future.

It was decided to discontinue the special prizes offered for lawns.

Don't Want It Longer.

Editor of The Morning Times.

Sir,—Please stop the Times; I don't want it any longer.

J—— D——.

That's all right, my dear boy, but we cannot oblige you. We intend to continue printing this great family journal, notwithstanding your desire to have it stopped. Besides, we do not intend to make it any longer. It's long enough for us, and "we are the people" just now, No, sir when this great moulder of public opinion ceases to exist it will be when there is no further work for us in fighting the battles of the people.—Editor.

This is a crowing time in the market building.

GREENWOOD'S SEND-OFF

The Gallant Colonel of Dragoons Has Many Friends Here.

Our report of the send-off given to Col. Greenwood in yesterday's issue, was necessarily brief, as the proceedings took place the previous evening.

The prefix title Colonel, to Col. Greenwood's name, dates from Wednesday, his promotion having been gazetted since he joined the second contingent, Col. Greenwood, though Captain of B. Squadron in the contingent, will, if detached from his command and given staff duty, still retain his new rank, that of Colonel.

In addition to the gifts from the citizens, the Battalion, his personal friends and the Dragoons, Col. Greenwood was the recepient of a very fine field glass from the engineers and inspectors of the Trent Valley Canal. The presentation was made by Superintendent Rogers.

It is not known when Col. Greenwood will take his deppartune for Halifax. It will, however, probably be to-day.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

A party of young people drove out to the residence of Mr. George Fitzgerald, Smith, on Wednesday evening and spent a most enjoyable time

A new delivery system is being put into operation by this great family journal. Fact is, our lists are extending so fast that we found it impossible to keep the old system in vogu any longeer.

A charge of selling liquor after hours was heard at the police court yesterday. Judgment was reserved.

A meeting of the non-coms, of the 57th battalion will be held next Saturday night in the opera house block to prepare for the smoker with which the new battalion rooms will be opened.

A Parry Sound locomotive ran over and killed a silver grey fox that was on the track. One of the employees picked it up and received $100 for the pelt. It again changed hands fro $150

John Hollyoak, a C.P.R. employee, who runs occasionally into Brockville, shoveled his gold watch into the fire box a few days ago at Carleton Place. It dropped accidently on the shovel and went in with it.

The Times is headquarters for wedding stationary of every description. At home and calling cards up to date.; All the modern styles.

The service preparatory to the Communion will be held in St. Andrew's church this evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. Wm. Kannawin will conduct the service. The offertory will be on behalf of the poor fund.

That end of the century dispute shows the time can be almost as much a subject of talk as the weather.

Mayor Kendry will fill the position of chief magistrate the last year of the old century. The town will start the new century with a new mayor and council.

Montreal doctors are puzzling over the case of a girl who has been asleep for 15 days. She must imagine she is a reporter on the staff of one of of our local boiler plate contemporaries.

With a mortgage debt of $325,000, and numberless vacant stores and houses, it is time for the Mayor to call the turn.

It is said that the Council is contemplating the appointment of a sanitary engineer. The report is current that the appointment was promised before the municipal elections took place.

A meeting of the Court of Revision and License Committees will be held this evening.

Mr. J. H. Brandon, of Fenelon Falls, was in town yesterday with two carloads of hogs for the Matthews company.

London News:—The Dominion Express Company made an unusual shipment yesterday to Peterborough. It consisted of a full carload of prize chickens shipped by breeders in London and this district to the grat poultry exhibition now in progress at Peterborough. Mr. Wm. McNeil, the well known fancier and breeder of this city, accompanied the shipment.

When perchance a man gets funny,
And tries not unto his wife.
Gives a mortgage—raises money,
And begins a sporting life,
Takes to betting on the races,
Drops his money in a lump,
Or stakes it all upon three aces—
That man is a blessing chump.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

To Nationals of Guelph have been protested against by the Parkdales. It is said that some of the Nationals are paid men, and do not live in Guelph.

There was a big mistake made by the officials of the hockey club in regard to the score made at Belleville. It seems that the referee, our old friend Perry, was much rattled, and although he announced the score as 12 to 7 in favor of Belleville, he afterwards sent to Toronto what he called the official score, 13 to 6, so that Peterborough II are out of it. It will not make much difference, as we think the club undertook too much when they place three teams in the race. They have not enough men to make up an intermediate team without taking in some of the juniors and thereby spoiling the latter's chances.

Cobourg and Peterborough juniors are two clubs that are going to have something to say about the final disposition of the championship banner in the junior series.

If the seniors want to defeat them Wellingtons they will have to get down to practice, stop smoking so much and keep better hours. This goes

The Ring.

George Dixon, for ten years the light weight champion of the fistic world, feels badly over his defeat by the Brooklyn wonder, Terry McGovern. Dixon has enjoyed the cleanest record of any of the fighters of the last decade, and has put up 800 fights during that time, but he met a better man, or rather a younger and more powerful man at last. If McGovern takes decent care of himself he ought to hold the honors of champion for the next five years.

PERSONALS.

Mr. Will Shannon, of Buffalo, is visiting friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McMullen, of New York city, are the guests of Rev Mr. and Mrs. Shorey.

Mr. W. Cavanah, of Medicine Hat, N.W.T., is business college here.

Mr. J. H. Carnegie, M.P.P., who has been in town attending the nuptals of his sister, left for his home at Coboconk yesterday.

Mr. J. H. Brandon, Fenelon Falls, spent a day in town, the guest of his sister, Mrs. W. H. Robertson.

Mr. T. Bradburn and Mr. Huston, his son-in-law will leave in a few days for Southern California for the winter. We hope they will both return with renewed health.

Master Hall and Master Burritt left on Wednesday for the Drope's school.

Miss Rackham and Miss Lilian Rackham leave this afternoon for a few week's visit in London.

Miss Rose Clarke left for her home in Toronto last night.

Mr. R. Junkin is in town re-establishing an agency of the Manufacturer's Life Assurance Co.

Life Insurance.

One of the largest insurance policies ever placed on a single life in Canada was that of $200,000 taken out by G. T. Fulford, of Brockville. It was fully paid up, on the guaranteed income plan, the premium amouniting to $100,000. Mr. Junkin, of the Imprial Life, secured the risk.

The Young Soldiers.

There are two sixteden year old soldiers going to South Africa on the second contingent. One is a son of Mr. C. C. Parker, of the militia stores at Ottawa, who is going as a trumpeter, the other is a son of our respected townsman, Mr. Jno. Green, barrister, who goes as a gunner in the artillery Our best wishes go with these patriotic young Canadians.

Raw Recruits.

Editor Morning Times:

Dear sir,—It is stated by the press tat there will be some delay in the departure of a section of the second contingent at one of the points owing to their being mostly raw recruits, who need a month's drill before they will be ready to go to the front. What I would ask you is the use of the country going to great expense in time of peace to support a large volunteer force, if in time of war they lag behind and their places have to be filled with raw recruits.

ller Likely to Have Passed Around Western End of Boer Lines at Colenso.

ORD ALVA DIES FROM WOUNDS AT MAFEKING.

Death List From Entric Fever and Dysentry at Ladysmith is Considered More Serious Than the Four Hundred and Twenty Casualties.

London, Jan. 12

report of the death of the Earl Ava is officially confirmed.

London, Jan. 13

Daily Telegraph has the following espatch dated Jan. 9 from Frere amp:

eavy storm has been raging all ght and there is every prospect at it will continue. The roads are passable and the rivers and spruit e full. There has been no firing Ladysmith or Colenso. The renches must be filled with water. he Boers are holding Mount Hallane but they are certainly quite olated, as their bridge over the ugela must have been carried way.

London, Jan. 13

eral Buller's 28 words announcing is forward movement of Thursday interpreted as meaning that he s passed around the western end the Boer lines at Colenso and is ow several miles behind them and ithin fourteen miles of Gen. White utposts at Ladysmith. The Boers few days ago had forces with guns Springfield where Gen. Buller ates his despatch.

se commandos have been obviously islodged, either by fighting or by anoeuvers the Boers retiring across e Tugela as Buller advanced.

m General Buller's despatch coupled ith the fact that unofficial intelligence from the seat of war has virtually ceased since Monday, the deduction drawn that important operations are program, as he cannot move far with t going against the Boer entrenchents.

death list from enteric fever and ysentary at Ladysmith averaging from to 10 daily, are considered more serious than the 420 casualties of Saturay's fight, as they indicate the frightully unsanitary condition of the beleagured town. A letter from Ladysmith, dated Dec. 7, says that even n 90 out of 540 men in the battalion which the writer was a member) ere sick with fysentery or enteric fe, and according to a despatch to e Daily Chronicle, dated Jan. 3, the atients and attendants in Tombi Camp here the hospital is, then numbered ,500 men.

BULLER MOVES AT LAST.

ondon, Jan. 12.—The War Office eived this morning the following spatch from General Buller, dated ringfield, Jan. 11, at 9.20 in the evening:

"I occupied the south bank of the gela River at Potgieter's Drift s morning and seized Pont. The river is in flood. The enemy is strongly entrenched about four and one-half miles to the north."

PLAN SUBMITTED TO ROBERTS.

London Jan. 12.—Apart from the definite news that General Buller has commenced a second attempt to cross the Tugela river, the only official news this morning was the list of casualties among the British officers in the fight at Ladysmith on Saturday, Jan. 6th, showing 13 killed and 27 wounded. Among the latter was Lieut.-Col. William Henry Dick Cunyngham, V.C., commander of the second battalion of the Gordon Highlanders since 1897, who has since succumbed to his wound He was immensely popular everywhere and his death will cause widespread sorrow.

General Buller's movement, obviously, is of a flanking character, but whether it is intended to push the advance home or whether his operations are only a feint to cover an attack in force on the Boer position at Hlangwana Mountain remains to be seen.

Springfield, from where General Buller's despatch was sent, is twenty miles west of Frere. The last news from Springfield was that it was held by the Johannesburg corps under Gen Ben. Viljoen, and that the Boers had big guns in position at Potgieters Drift, ten miles north of Springfield and across the big Tugela. The possession of the Drift and the bridge is regarded as of great importance.

It is reported here that Gen. Buller submitted his plan of campaign to Lord Roberts immediately after the latter landed and that Roberts sanctioned it.

WILL SUCCEED METHUEN.

London, Jan. 12.—There is a belief in some quarters that General Hector Macdonald will succeed Lord Methuen in command of the British force at the Modder River.

LONDON VOLUNTEERS START.

London, Jan. 12.—There was a unique and interesting ceremony at the Guild Hall to-day when five hundred of the City o London Imperial Volunteers received their kits and the freedom of the city. The big crowds in the vicinity cheered the arriving volunteers, each of whom received a parchment certificate of the freedom enclosed in a neat blue case. The ceremonial admitting the officers was more elaborate. It occurred in the presence of the Lord Mayor, Mr. A. J. Newton, the councillors and the Duke of Cambridge. This portion of the regiment, which sails to-morrow, will attend a special service in St. Paul's cathedral to-night and will afterwards be entertained at supper by the Benchers of the Inner Temple.

MISERY AT LADYSMITH.

London, Jan. 12.—From the Ladysmith correspondent of the Daily Chronicle comes a grim touch of besieged misery: "Dishevelled women are peering out of their dens in the rocks and holes in the sand. They crawl into the evening light, shaking the dirt from their petticoats and the sand from their back hair. They rub the chiooldren's faces round with the tails of their gowns. They tempt scraps of flames to take the chill of the yellow water for the children's tea. After sundown a steady Scotch drizzle settles down upon us.

KILLED 135; WOUNDED, 242.

London, Jan. 12.—The War Office later in the day announced that the British casualties at Ladysmith, Jan. 6th, among the rank and file were 135 killed and 242 wounded.

TO USE EXPANDING BULLETS

London, Jan. 12.—Lee-Metford cartridges are running short in the British magazines, and according to semi-official report the War Office purposes to fall back temporarily upon 100,000,000 "Mark IV. expanding bullets," most of which are already in storage in South Africa. The War Office, however, has issued a strict order to the regiments that the ammunition of "Mark IV." given out in England must be used in practice at home, none being taken to South Africa.

METHUEN HAS SPINAL TROUBLE

London, Jan. 12.—It will be learned with regret that the injuries which General Lord Methuen sustained when he was wounded have proved serious. His charger reared and threw him heavily, causing severe spinal trouble

WITH CANADIAN HAY.

New York, Jan. 12.—The British steamer Hortensius left Barber & Co's pier in Brooklyn yesterday and cleared for Cape Town, South Africa, with 25,000 bales of hay aboard for the Commisarit Department of the British army. The Hay is said to come for the most part by rail from Canada.

TO DIE ON THE SCAFFOLD.

A Jury Finds Henry Williams Guilty of the Murder of Varcoe.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—After being out nearly two hours, the jury in the murder case last evening brought in a verdict declaring Henry Williams gulity of the murder of John Edwin Varcoe, Nov. 8th. last. With the verdice was coupled a recommendation to mercy.

The prisoner's counsel, Mr. Robinette, moved for a reserve case, on the ground that Varcoe's dying statement was not admissible as evidence because his exact words had not been given, no were the questions put to him taken down in writing. Other objections were raised, but Chief Justice Meredith overruled them.

When he asked Williams if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, the prisoner reiterated a few words ofthe story he told in the witness box. Then the judge said—

"Henry Williams, the sentence of this court is that you be taken from the place whence you came, and that on Friday, the 13th day of April, you be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul."

The prisoner was apparently unmoved by the sentence. He cooly picks up his overcoat and walked out briskly when the officers took him to the cells. After being locked up he was as composed and self-collected as he was throughout the trial. The jurymen, whose oath bound them to condemn him, were much more affected than he was.

April 13th, Good Friday, the date of the execution, is a legal holiday, and the question has been suggested that an execution on such a day is not legal. The question was once raised in this country, and the presiding judge would not carry out the sentence until the Minister of Justice could give a decision.

Ex-Cashier Gets Eight Years.

New York, Jan. 13.—Lewis E. Goldsmith, for years the assistant cashier of the Port Jervis, N. Y., National Bank, who pleaded guilty of having stolen $91,000 from that institution, was to-day sentenced to serve eight years in the penitentiary of Sing Sing.

Scarboro Brakeman Killed

Belleville, Ont., Jan. 13.—While Walter Secord, a brakeman on the G. T. R., was coupling cars at the station here at 8.30 this morning, he slipped and was caught between the couplers and terribly injured. He died about four hours later. D—ceased was about 22 years of age and his home was in Scarboro, where his mother and sister reside. He was in such a condition that he could not be removed to the hospital.

LORD STRACONA'S MUNIFICENT OFFER.

He Will Pay the Entire EXpense, About a Million Dollars, for a Third Canadian Contingent of Four Hundred Men.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Lord Strathcona, Canada's High Commissioner, has made an offer to raise two mounted squadrons, of two hundred each, or four hundred men in all, in the Canadian Northwest to go to South Africa.

All that Lord Strathcona desires is to get the militia machinery of Canada, in other words, the assistance of the Department of Militia, in enrolling, outfitting and equipping the troops, and he will defray the entire cost, as well as that of the transports and everything else necessary to take the soldiers from the great prairies of the West and place them at the front, thoroughly equipped with modern weapons and in good fighting condition.

The matter is still under consideration of the Dominion and Imperial Governments. A military expert says that it will take about a million dollars to carry out what Lord Strathcona suggests.

Nothing official is to be had on the subject. If the matter is carried out, an opportunity will be given to a number of those in the west who were disappointed in not getting on this contingent to go to South Africa.

There is yet any amount of material to pick from west of Winnipeg.

London, Jan. 12.—Lord Strathcona's patriotic offer to supply a contingent of 400 Canadians evoked a chorus of approval. It is regarded, as the Westminister Gazette says, as far and away the greatest individual effort made thus far. The Gazette adds: "No one, at all events, can say that Lord Strathcona is a South African millionaire paying conscience money"

The Times says: "How immense is the reserve strength on which Eng-England in a just caused can draw is strikingly revealed. Lord Strathcona's munificent gift comes from one who is at once a Canadian citizen and a British peer."

The Times adds there are not many countries in the world where individual citizens are found able and ready to prove their patriotism on so splendid a scale. Such an offering to the common cause of the empire would be welcome from any quarter, and is doubly welcome from the representative of the greatest self-governing colony.

MGR. FALCONIO AND THE BISHOPS.

His Appointment the Result of Merry del Val's Report That Some of the Canadian Bishops Were Too Impetuous.

Quebec, Jan. 12.—The fact that some of the leading newspapers are calling upon Mgr. Falconio to chide the priest who edits the Semaine Religieuse for expressing views in his paper that cause a great deal of discord if any significance were attached to them, has caused an interesting rumor to gain circulation. It is stated that Monseigneur Mery Del Val on returning from Canada to the Vatican made a very exhaustive and minute report upon the conditions of the Church in the Dominion, explaining the Manitoba school question and all other matters in which religion and politics are mixed. This report being a confidentail document, was naturally drawn up in terms of the completest candor, and in it, so your correspondent is informed. Mgr. Mary del Val expressed the opinion that some of the Canadian bishops quite misconceived the situation of the Church, and unless some guiding mind could at critical moments restrain them, something in the nature of a permanent breach might one day result between the hierarchy and the people of Quebec, or between Quebec and the other provinces.

In some mysterious manner the gist of Mery del Val's report found its way to Canada, and there was a conference of the Bishops, with the result that one was selected to write a protest to Rome. It is understood that it was Archbishop Begin of this city who drew up a remonstration—the same archbishop under whose sanction the Abbe Gosselin publishes the Semaine Religieuse. The result of the archbishop's representations are not known, but at all events it is recalled that on his arrival Mgr. Falconio found Archbishop Bruchesi absent on the Pacific coast and other evidences were not wanting that the coming of the new papal delegate was dubiously regarded by some of the archbishops of this province. The importance of the story, if true, is that it shows that the statesmanship of the Vatican is on the side of those bishops who contend for harmonious relations between the different creeds and races in Canada.

PLENTY OF FOOD.

London, Jan. 12.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Pietermaritzburg, dated January 8, says:

"Private advices from Ladysmith, dated January 2, say that rations of bread and meat are plentiful, and the garrison had not then touched the 'bully' beef and biscuit supplies.

"Luxuries are scarce in Ladysmith, but the hospitals are well supplied with milk, and the horses are in good condition."

PARLIAMENT SUMMONED.

London, Jan. 12.—The Queen has proclaimed a meeting of Parliament for January 30, a fortnight earlier than the date originally fixed.

The Nicaragua Canal

Washington, Jan. 12.—The House Committee on Interstate Commerce to-day reported favorably the Hepburn Nicaragua Canal Bill.

Malietoa's View of It

London, Jan. 12.—Malietoa Tanus, in a letter to the London Times published today characterizes the partition of Samoa as a gross violation of the treaties and as a crime against the law of nations only equal to the dismemberment of Poland, Denmark and France.

Plague in Brazil.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The bubonic plague has made its appearance at Rio Janeiro, Brazil. There has been one death there as shown by a cablegram received here by Surgeon-General Wyman.

BRITISH HEROISM AT THE MODDER RIVER.

Graphic Description of the Long, Fierce and Victorious Battle at That Place.

SOLDIERS CROSS THE STREAM ONE AT A TIME.

Two Brigades Were Obliged to Act Independently, But Fought on Just the Same—Boers Were Surprised at Such Bravery—Scenes at Belmont.

London, Jan. 13.—British war correspondents are pouring in, by means of the mails, columns of descriptions of the operations in South Africa. The Times 'correspondent at Modder River has written a graphic account of the long, fierce, battle that takes its name from this stream. "For the whole of the day," he writes, "the Guards' brigade lay on the open veldt in a heat that was actually 110 degrees in the shade at midday. Meanwhile the left flank had not been idle, and after the General had personally led them to the summit of a slight rise that commanded the only possible means of crossing the river—the dam that had been built to turn the Modder River into an ornamental water for the picnics of the Kimberley excursionsits—they moved in echelon towards the edge of the river bank on the enemy's extreme laft flank.

How they Crossed.

"That it could even be attempted to cross the river siding sideways through the rush of water, one by one, clinging to the short supports in full view of the opposite shore, was an attack of reckless heroism against which the wary Cronje had not provided. This was actually done, and one at a time some four hundred of them crossed. Then a detachment of the Royal Engineers followed, and little by little a force collected which cleared several of the nearest houses on the right and effected an occupation of an irrigation patch from which they were never dislodged.

Slept on the Field.

"To fight for thirteen hours is an ordeal that in any kind of warfare would be a terrible strain; but, on the shadeless veldt, with the thermometer at the degree above mentioned, the exhaustion suffered by our men was so great that in hundreds of cases men and officers alike slept as they lay in the scrub, careless of the shell and rifle fire that surged over them. To provide them with food was impossible and to bring a water cart on to the field was only tempting men to expose themselves to death.

Methuen's Wound.

"Early in the afternoon the General was shot through the thigh, and for some time the two brigades, in the absence of orders, were compelled to act independently, the only command being a warning to the ninth brigade not to fire upon the first, of which there was some danger.

"The magnificent manner in which the Boers had realized and augmented the strength of the position, the success with which they had kept their works and disposition secret until the crucial moment, the feint on the extreme right by which they drew off the entire artillery strength of our force from their main position and the astonishing accuracy of their picked shots at the longest ranges should be remembred to the credit of their generals. But it was in the material which formed the commandos that they failed. They could do no more than they actually did with the men under their command. Already jealousies had sprung up between the generals, the men accused each other of cowardice, and the threat of physical force had—if rumors were true—to be held over them more than once.

The Maxim Gun.

"The one-pound Maxim gun was the most effective weapon used by the Boers. The five or six shots fired in one second while the gun was traversed had more moral effect than the steady discharge of shrapnel from the ordinary 15-pounder at half-minute intervals. One man not far from me had both thighs blown off as he sat by one of these little shells, landing on ground between them, but there is no question that the moral effect was as a rule greater than the practical results."

Of the lessons to be learned from Modder River this correspondent says—"It will be impossible in any future war for the officers to retain their swords, and it will be worth while for the War Office to construct some light carbine that may be carried by them instead of the weighty rifle served out to the men."

BOERS IN THEIR CARRIAGES.

London, Jan. 13.—Julian Ralph, writing for the Daily Mail, says—"Let me describe the top of the small hill in the Belmont engagement, the one in storming which the brave Grenadiers suffered part of their fearfully heavy loss. On this kopje the Boer commander had compelled the poorer men of his commando to live for weeks. I took it that these were men of the servant and the laborer class. Their dead, whose untidy and neglected bodies I saw seated as the British bullets and bayonets found them, confirmed this theory, for they were poorly clad, unshaven, unclean, and hungry looking. I knew when I saw such men among the dead, the wounded and the prisoners, how it could be that white men could misuse the white flag and mock the sacred purpose of the Geneva cross.

Dirty Boers.

"The food, the dirt and the extraordinary profusion of cartridges and cartridge wrappings were all mixed together. But the earth and disorder were not so offensive as the grimy, beastly condition of the dead.

"If I could write steadily for a week —and if there were no such strict censorship such as fetters me—I could not exhaust the list of peculiarities, eccentricities, anamolies, and novelties of this war waged against us by an undisciplined force of rebels who are soldiers by instinct and farmers or cattle raisers for livelihood. But I could not in all that week state a more astonishing fact than that at some of these battles the better class of Boers have come to battle in their carriages like gentlemen driving to the Derby at home, and, having done their best have retired the same way, leaving their vassals to cover their retreat."

DUTCHMEN RAISE $3,000.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—H. Vanderploeg, the secretary of the South African Fund Association, reports a fund of $3,000 on hand which will be forwarded to the Red Cross Society when $2,000 has been added. Enthusiasm among the Dutch Americans is at high tide over the subscriptions now being taken to aid the sick and wounded Boer soldiers.

King Tape War Fund

Moscow, Jan. 12.—A despatch from Belgrade announces it has been discovered that King Alexander and his father, ex-King Milan, have appropriated a goodly share of Servia's war fund. The former king is now in Hungary, whither he has gone on a shooting excursion, and it is not expected in Belgrade that he will return to Servia.

Lard Famine in Germany.

Bremen, Jan. 12.—There is almost a lard famine in Northern Germany. Neither in Bremen nor in any of the other ports, nor at interior ports, is there any large stock of lard. Hamburg dealers are buying from Berlin dealers lard they have hitherto supplied them, and it is believed that a sharp advance in prices will come before the equilibrium of the market can be restored.

Thugs in Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Mrs. John Corse, of 230 Dearborn avenue, was seized by robbers shortly after midnight at Chestnut street, thrust into a cab, and afterwards robbed of diamonds valued at $600 and her pocketbook containing $5 in money and a draft for $250. She was brutally beaten.

A Clergyman Decorated.

Bern, Jan. 12.—A German clergyman, named Wyss, residing at Baden-Baden, has just received through the French Embassy at Berlin the cross of the Legion of Honor in recognition of services rendered to French soldiers detained as prisoners at Baden-Baden during the Franco-Prussian war.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey

The Cobourg juniors are not disappointing their admirers. They turned Lindsay down on Thursday evening by a score of 6 to 0.

Brockville has dropped out of the senior series. They have an open rink and other claub don't want to play on it after dark, and Brockville won't play in the afternoon. This gives Queen's an easy thing in the first round.

Stratford juniors will have a look in for the finals in the western division of the O. H. A. They beat the junior Nationals of Guelph badly, on the latter's own ice.

Two games in the intermediate series were played last night, Varsity II vs. Newmarket and Orillia vs. Midland.

The president of the O. H. A., J. Ross Robertson, expects to use the goal nets in Toronto next week. They are being made of white cotton cord with one inch mesh.

The O. H. A. executive will have two protests to decide on Monday night. Barrie has protested Collingwood for playing non-residents, and Parkdale has protested the first team of Guelph Nationals for the same grounds.

Carruthers, the fast forward of the Wellingtons, leaves Toronto to-day to reside in Winnipeg. His absence will certainly not strengthen "them Wellingtons."

We have received a communication from "A Lover of Winter Sports," which we overlooked in yesterday's edition, and as it is too late now we have to apologize and promise to be more careful next time.

The Ring.

That man McGovern, the featherweight champion, is a daisy, is one can judge by his record. During 1899, he fought 30 times, the fights averaging only four rounds each, and in all but one he knocked out his man. This is as good a record as John L. ever had.

There is a funny story coming from the New York State Capital, Albany. It seems that most of the sporting Senators and Assemblymen backed Dixon to win his fight from McGovern. They of course lost their money and now they threaten to recind the Horton law, under which all the boxing bouts are taking place. The law makes seem to be does nit drink, smoke or swear; he is revoted family man.

Dixon is to have a benefit on Tuesday night. He deserves one.

McGovern is 20 years old, married and a father, and is worth thousands of dollars. Out of the ring he is a gentleman,

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, JANUARY 12, 1900

TO IMPROVE ONTARIO HOTELS.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, the Ontario provincial secretary, is showing that he is no figure head, by taking means to ascertain the views of the travelling public with regard to needed improvements in Ontario's hotels, the license branch of the administration having been transferred to his department by the recent cabinet shuffle.

Circulars have been addressed to the License Inspectors and License Commissioners, requiring them to see that hotels lacking in certain respects are made as complete in the matter of equipment and appliances for the comfort of the travelling public as the requirements of the law demand and the circumstances of the locality will permit.

To further assist in reaching the end aimed at a letter has been addressed to the presidents of the Commercial Travellers' Associations in Ontario, intimating that the department would be glad to receive suggestions as to how hotels, in certain respects, may be improved, which would be acted upon as far as the public interests, the interests of those concerned and the circumstances of the case would warrant.

There has been a steady improvement in the nature of the accomodation furnished by the hotels of the Province to the travelling public in recent years. New hotels have replaced the old, larger and well ventilated bedrooms have taken the place of stuffy cubby holes, and fire escapes and sanitary appliances are a part of the paraphernalia of nearly every public house of entertainment, but there is still doubtless room in many cases for improvement, and Mr. Stratton is apparently going the right way about it to learn what is needed.

PLAY FAIR, GEN. HUTTON.

It is an outrage if a Canadian officer possessing the practical qualifications of Col. Sam Hughes is left without employment at Cape Town on account of black marks put against his name by Major-General Hutton.

Objection to Col. Sam Hughes as a politician do not hold against him as a soldier. Many Canadians who have never been counted as warm friends to Col. Hughes have an idea that he is being unjustly treated by Major-General Hutton.

Britain has an over-supply of officers like Major-General Hutton in South Africa and too few officers with the qualities which Col. Sam Hughes would display in active service. Bravery may be taken for granted in the case of all officers who were Her Mayjesty's uniform, but Col. Sam Hughes has more adaptability, more shrewdness, more capacity for leadership in the sort of warfare which Britain has to wage in South Africa than Major-General Hutton is ever likely to possess.

EN VOYAGE.

While Canadian mothers and fathers have given their sons, the bravest and best, to go forth and fight the battles of empire in South Africa, there to face danger and death in their varying forms, they are unwilling that they shall be exposed unnecessarily to the perils that lurk in overcrowded, over-heated, illy-ventilated apartments, en voyage to the field of operations. The reports that are being sent back to this country of the experience of the first contingent on board the Sardinian threaten to raise a storm that may make it very uncomfortable for the responsible parties, should there be a recurrence of like conditions. The Toronto World, thus voices the popular demand —

The government must see to it that the second contingent receives better accommodation than that which the first contingent had to put up with on the Sardinian. It is dreadful to think of the discomforts that the men who were going to fight our battles were subjected to. They were huddled together like cattle in a car. They were short of water during the day, and at night the men had to sleep in an almost air-tight compartment, with the thermometer ranging about 120 degrees. The expenditure of a few hundred dollars before the ship sailed would have secured the necessary ventilation, and the shortage of water could easily have been anticipated. It is to be hoped the minister of militia will profit by the experience gained from the despatch of our first transport to a foreign shore. The vessels that are to carry the men and horses forming the second contingent must be fitted up under the direction of some one who understands what is required. Provision must be made for ventilation, and for water, especially. More space must be allowed, per man, and, if necessary, another steamship must be chartered. There is positively no excuse for subjecting our soldiers to the privitations which those on the Sardinian underwent. The least we who remain at home can do for those who are going to face death for the defence of our country is to see that they are decently and humanely cared for. It will be criminal to subject the second contingent to the discomforts that their predecessors had to put up with.

WHEN HEART FAILS.

Life's Charm Vanishes—No case of Heart Disease Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart Will not Relieve in 30 Minutes, and Permanently Cure.

Thos. Petry, of Aylmer, Que., says that for about five years he was a constant sufferer from acute heart derangements—endured untold pain, was unable to attend to his daily work, and exertion caused great fatigue. He was recommended to try Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart. One bottle did him great benefit; four bottles drove every symptom of the trouble away from him. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

TRAVELLERS' STORIES.

A Few of the Patrons of the Snowden House Grow Talkative.

"I've heard so many incredible stories about the cyclone and its eccentricities," said the solemn looking man to a party of fellow knights of the gripsack, in the back parlour of the Snowden House last night, "that I've been to Kansas making some personal investigations in the interest of science.

"I find that many reports from that section have been greatly exaggerated. Nothing occurs there that is not in accord with our understanding of these terrific outbursts of nature. For instance, the tornado, often mistaken for the cyclone, has a rotary motion. I have known it to dip low enough to bore a well, and then bound once more to the region of the clouds. This wonderful phenomena was an accomplished fact in far less time than it takes me to tell of it.

"An extensive farmer there heard the roar of an approaching storm, and just had time to get his team from his reaper to a place of safety. The wind caught the reaper and sent it round and round and round the immense tract till the grain was all cut."

"But didn't it blow away?" asked ex-Alderman Davidson, who happened to enter.

"Not at all. That would have destroyed our theory. The circular whirl of the irresistible power swept the grain to the centre of the field, and into an immense stack such as human hands could not have piled.

"One of the strangest but best authenticated incidents I learned of occurred where a cyclone struck the base of the mountain and went burrowing through it. A few feet in the twister encountered a solid granite formation. It was two weeks later when the tunnel was completed and the terrific wind resumed its devastating way on the other side. The tunnel was promptly appropriated by a railroad company."

"I had rather an unpleasant experience in that section," said Mr. Snowden, as he slowly lit his corn cob. "I bought a farm there, on spec. Everything in three counties was plastered thick with mortgages. A cyclone wound them all up into one great package and pastered them down on my little place. We drilled and blasted to get them off, but it was no go. My land is mortgaged $40,000,000 deep."

The first speaker never turned a hair but took notes.

Accident in a Lumber Camp.

A sad accident occured in one of Mr. A. McDonald's lumber camps (C. Legan, foreman) on Monday the 8th inst, where Mr. Thos. Steen was struck by a falling tree. It appears that Steen and Bert McIlmoyle were sawing down a tree together, and the tree they were working at, on falling, struck another, which fell on the unfortunate man, falling on his head and shoulder, inflicting some scalp wounds and paralyzing one side of his body. He was immediately conveyed to Apsley to Mrs. Mrs. Wilson's boarding house, and placed under the care of Dr. Caldwell, who has been most attentive to the injured man. At time of writing, he is unconscious and little hopes are held out for his ultimate recovery.

THE Canada Business College!

CHATHAM, ONT.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these, there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

[illegible] of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

The Rheumatic's Millennium

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN RHEUMATIC CURE ushers it in—the days of suffering from this relentless disease in all its phases need not be prolonged.

THIS POWERFUL SPECIFIC wins daily encomiums for its splendid work in dispelling pain. It gives perfect relief in 6 hours.

It drives out the causes—cleanses the system—paves the way and helps to perfect health.

Only those who have been its victims—whether for a shorter or a longer period—in its milder forms or in its more acute forms, can really have any correct conception of the excruciating agony that comes to the sufferer from Rheumatism.

Only those who have been its victims and have been cured by that most powerful and never-failing remedy, South American Rheumatic Cure, can really appreciate the blessing it has proved to man-kind in relieving pain, dissolving and eradicating from the system all the foreign matters, the irritating acids, the unnatural substances which through cold and exposure collect in the joints and muscles, cause swellings, stiffenings, inflammation and oft-times cripple and incapacitate those who have been so unfortunate as to be caught in its meshes.

South American Rheumatic Cure is a specific for Rheumatism and Neuralgia in all its forms. It is not an experiment. It is compounded on the most scientific principles known in modern medical science. It is the concentrated essence of the best and most potent ingredients recognized as being the most searching and healing. The formula is the outcome of years of study on Rheumatism in all its forms; its causes and medicines that are calculated to give the quickest relief and are most promising of a permanent cure. That the highest results have been attained by South American Rheumatic Cure that have been attained by any remedy of modern times is attested by the splendid testimony, the thankful words, the encouragement and faith shown in it by the hundreds and hundreds who have over their own signatures told how it has healed those who have been bed-ridden for years—those who have through its use "thrown away the crutches"—those whose stiffened joints that were affected by every whim of the weather—those who have suffered the deathly pains and pangs that are incident to the inflammatory and neuralgic forms of Rheumatism.

Words cannot too strongly express its great merit, and sufferers need only to put to the test what others say of it to prove the claims of the great South American Rheumatic Cure. Years of pain may be dispelled in an hour, but it's only a matter of days at most till the most stubborn cases will vanish, and in the place of pain and suffering there'll be a joyous and lasting freedom.

J. D. McLeod of Leith, Ont., says: "I have been a victim of Rheumatism for seven years; confined to my bed for months at a time; unable to turn myself; have been treated by many physicians without any benefit. I had no faith in Rheumatic cures I saw advertised, but my wife induced me to get a bottle of South American Rheumatic Cure from Mr. Taylor, druggist, in Owen Sound. At that time I was in agony with pain. Inside of 12 hours after I took the first dose, the pain had all left me. I continued until I had used three bottles, and to-day I am completely cured."

South American Nervine is a power in restoring wasted nerve force; cures nervous prostration, stomach troubles and general debility. It cleanses the system and builds up the waste places.

South American Kidney Cure is a liquid Kidney specific; cures Bright's Disease, Diabetes Bladder troubles and all Kidney disorders. Helps in four to six hours and heals permanently.

THE BOER'S GREAT SKILL

Learned Their Strategy in Other Wars.

THEY LACK GOOD GUNNERS

This is the Chief Weakness of the Army of the Burghers.

"Is the Boer a first-class fighting man?" asks Douglas Story in the London Mail. He had been the editor of the Boer paper, the Standard and Diggers' News, and his observations are considered of value.

He has yielded a superior intelligence and, perhaps, a deeper determination at Glencoe and Elandslaagte; but in no engagement has he proved himself a contemptible foe in courage or in tactics. Nor would we British have it otherwise. It is no part of the British character to depreciate an enemy, and, for their very stubbornness in opposing us, we today acclaim the Zulus, the Afghans, the Afridis and Dervishes as first-class fighting men. Has the Boer likewise earned a right to a place among the foemen worthy of our highest skill and most exalted courage?

The strength of the Boer forces is an unknown quantity. Shortly before the outbreak of hostilities I received a cable giving the field cornets' return at 52,000 men capable of bearing arms. At this time this was received by the British press as an exaggerated estimate, and it was only after careful calculation, and after consultation with the men best able to form an opinion, that I accepted its approximate accuracy. Events have proved that it was within the mark.

Three years ago the Transvaal under secretary for foreign affairs assured me that the Boer strength was 34,000 men armed with rifles. Dr. Leyd's more recent estimate is 35,000 burghers. The number and strength of the commandos now in the field prove that the British ante-war calculations greatly undervalued the Boer force. Today there cannot be less than 60,000 men in arms—no mean army of sharpshooters.

Boers Expert With the Rifle.

I used the word sharpshooter with intention. The idea has gone abroad that the Boer can no longer shoot straight; but this applied to the bulk of the burghers is a fallacy.

Uitlander critics—and published comment has been almost wholly confined to these—have judged the Boer race from the weaklings who have drifted into Johannesburg and the mining camps along the Rand. But these are no more representative of the nation than the Hooligans ofof Blackfriars and Lambeth are typical of the great mass of the people throughout the length and breadth of England.

It needs a Selous, who has hunted by day with them and lain by the camp fire alongside them at night, to speak with authority of the Boers who are now opposing Great Britain on the border of the Transvaal. The police is the last resort of the indignant Transvaaler, and the Johannesburg Zarp is—alike in courage and in morality—every way comparable to Wellington's Peninsular soldier. From them the Uitlanders have judged the race.

But the great mass of the nation is today, as in 1836, a people of simple habits—gazing wide-mouthed at a train and fearing the wrath of God in chastisement for a street lamp or a telephone. One sees them upon the veldt, tripping lankly on shaggy South African ponies, caring naught for anything beyond their sheep and acknowledging no authority save God's, the Veld Kornets and the Presidents.

Loses Men He Can Spare Best.

These are the men on whom the defence of the republic has developed, and the British forces have yet to measure strength with them in the field. General Joubert is not devoid of a Moltke-like indifference to human sacrifice where the existences of the case demand. But Slim Piet is careful to offer only such lives as he can best spare. These lay in Johannesburg contingent—the commando where clerky Hollanders bivouacked alongside weedy Boers from the Fordsburg slums—and they were sent to draw the British fire at Elandslaagte.

There was a fitness in this that is not at first apparent. The commando was that most easily spared by Joubert, re-for his ultimate support, and was that containing the largest number of townsmen acquainted, colloquially at least, with instruments of modern warfare. They alone have stood by their artillery in the campaign.

It is the rule of Zulu warfare for the young impis to go first into the battle, while the men of the Old Guard stand by and criticize their conduct in the fight. Much of the Boer method has been learned from the savages upon their border. The Johannesburg contingent possessed the qualifications of indifferent material and respected familiarity with the weapons engaged. Hence their place in the van of the Boer attack. Afterward, at Nicholson's Nek and in circumstances better suited for their method of fighting, appeared the men of the back country—the true Boers of the Transvaal.

Town Boers Have Degenerated.

The Boer degeneracy has been confined in great part to the men of the towns, the other are shepherds, hunters and transport-riders, as in the days of their wars against the Matabele, the Xosas and the Zulus. Game has grown pitiably less in quantity, but proportionately more difficult to take. I do not find that Boer prowess in the chase has markedly depreciated. The men of the Wakkerstroom district, for instance—those nearest to the present seat of war—take their herds for six months of every year into the highlands in search of forage and water. They live there the traditional open life of the Boer, dependent on their guns and woodcraft for their sustenance.

Some two years ago I was present at a wapenschouwing at Roodekoppen, in the Heidelbery district, and saw there an exhibition of shooting on the part of the local commando that impressed me with the present-day marksmanship of the Boer as much as anything I have read of his prowess in the past.

There was a force of 700 Boers mounted on the customery veld ponies, each man with a remount. A canvas target was raised a mile distant, and, at the word, the whole commando thundered down upon it, riding loose-reined, guiding with their knees. Some 300 yards from the mark the men threw themselves to the ground, and, in squads of twenty, fired a hasty volley, remounted, and rode back to re-form column. The manoeuvre was executed as smartly as anything I have seen done by specially trained troops at Bisley or Aldershot. As they galloped away, only a few tattered ribbons remained fluttering in the breeze. The target was no more.

Secret of Boer Success.

In that single evolution lies the whole secret of Boer tactics—rapid advances, accurate volleys at short range, speedy retreats. The retreat is as important as the advance, and therein lies one explanation of the employment of the Johannesburg contingent at Elandslaagte. They were the only troops who could be trusted to remain beside cannon in position on a hill.

In all the engagements since Elandslaagte the cannon have been withdrawn soon as the British advance became definitely apparent. The Boers freed from the anchorage of artillery, have pursued their old tactics of rapid retreats from the point of most virulent attack with compensating attacks on flank. In Carleton's case the strategy, aided by the old native trick of stampeding the enemy's horses, proved successful.

To the Boer a position has no importance save as a place to fight from. One kopje top is the same as another kopje top, and, if the enemy beset one overmuch, it is wise to remove to another. With canon this manoeuvre is impossible. Men must stand by their guns or lose them. The typical Boer will lose them; and I question if any of the old commandoes will consent to give battle hampered by stationery or cumbersome artillery.

The strength of the Boers, then, lies in the back-country commandoes who will engage, maybe in considerable numbers, but who will invariably avoid heavy assaults by rapid retreats, followed by re-formations on the flank of the opposing force. The weakness lies in the inability to co-operate with artillery—not that their commandos do not understand its value, but that the burghers resent its immobility.

Burghers Need Artillerymen.

The most serious weakness of the Boer army is the scarcity of its gunners. Already there has been a terrible death rate among the artillerists, and it must be remembered that each vacancy is a permanent vacancy. Joubert can bring up commando after commando to take the place of the killed among the mounted artillery, but he has no recruits wherewith to man his depleted guns. Their efficiency is dependent upon the lives of the men who have been trained to work them. It is for that reason that the naval contingent has become, of a moment, worth a whole division of reinforcements to General White. The average Boer would as soon stand before the muzzle of a loaded cannon as to take charge of it at the breech. It was with the greatest difficulty the native born members of the State's artillery were induced to practice with their guns at Pretoria. At no time have they been fond of their mighty and mysterious arms. In the artillery lies the chief weakness of the Boers.

The strength of the Boers on the other hand, lie in the presence at their head of all the old leaders save Nicholas Smith died in 1896, and J. H. M. Kock, killed at Elandslaagte. The Boer brain is still intact.

A BRITISH MASSACRE OF BRITISH TROOPS!

In the Darkness Yorkshire and Surry Regiments Mistake Each Other for the Enemy.

FEARFUL CARNAGE BEFORE BLUNDER DISCOVERED

British Soldiers Shoot and Bayonet Each Other and Fight Their Own Friends for Fully Half an Hour—Boers Charge on Contestants, Who Have to Retreat.

London, Jan. 11.—A British massacre of British troops is the startling news that shocked London to-day. It reached here by mail from a correspondent with General Buller's army in Natal, and told of a mistake that set two British regiments fighting each other in the darkness, until the ground was strewn with dead, when the blunder was discovered.

Col. Kitchener, brother of Lord Kitchener, was in command of the force that moved out of Estcourt on November 2nd to drive off a force of Boers reported by scouts to be in camp at Willow Grange. In the attacking force were four companies of the West Yorkshires, two of East Surrey, two of the Queen's Imperial Light Horse, the Sixtieth Mounted Rifles and the 15th battery of Field Artillery. The correspondent thus describes the scene of bloodshed that followed—

The little expedition marched out in good order. Major Hobbs at the head of the West Yorks, the officers of that regiment carrying rifles for the first time. Arrived at a prearranged destination, the force bivouked for the night amid one of the most terrible hailstorms ever seen in this country of tropical showers. As they lay upon the veldt fearful to make a move or sound, the hail beat down upon them like gravel from a shute. The hail had given place to when at 2 a. m., Thursday, November 23, the order was given to commence the attack.

Complete silence reigned over the supposed position of the Boer camp. The darkness was extreme. The East Surreys were to attack from the left. The Yorkshire Regiment was to swing around and attack from the right. Strict orders were given that not a shot should be fired, the object being to rush the Boers from their position at the point of the bayonet. All went well until both columns had reached a point 200 feet from the summit of the supposed Boer position, when a sentry challenged, at the same time covering Major Hobbs with a Mauser. A lucky shot from a colored sergeant saved Hobbs and killed the sentry—a lucky shot for the officer, but an unlucky one for many of his men for the right division had swung around higher on the hill than the Surreys, and when that shot rang out the Yorkshires were mistaken by them for the enemy.

The Surrey men immediately poured a volley into their comrades higher up the hill, and the Yorkshire boys getting excited fired down upon their friends. For many minutes the battle raged between two British regiments. Then with a yell the Surrey men charged up hill with bayonets fixed, killing and wounding their countrymen in the Yorkshire men standing their ground and giving as good as they received. In the darkness khaki uniforms were not recognized, and it was not until the hill was strewn with dead and dying that the terrible mistake was discovered.

By that time streaks of light were shooting upward in the eastern skies, and the Boers, whose camp was about two miles further north, were upon the British in force. The Yorkshires took a position on the hill behind loose stones, but it was afterwards found the Boers' guns on a further hill had the range of this wall to the inch, and soon the Yorkshiremen were swept by a tremendous fire. Fortunately the Imperial Horse and 60 Rifles Mounted Infantry came to the rescue of the little force, and the action became general. The Boers numbered fully 800 men and were well supported by artillery, so that the order to retreat was given.

Deeds of Valor.

At this time the infantry had been without food thirty hours and exposed to a terrific storm. Moreover, they were entirely demoralized by the thought that they had been killing and maiming their own men. During the retreat many deeds of valor were done and at one time the Imperial Light Horse held in check the whole Boer force. Major Hobbs, of the West Yorkshires, remained to the last, looking after his wounded, especially those who had been hurt by their own countrymen, and as a consequence he was captured by the Boers and is now a prisoner.

The full casualties in this most unfortunate action amounts to two hundred, and perhaps half of these were due to the extraordinary blunders which led British soldiers to shoot and bayonet each other and fight their own friends like demons for fully half an hour in excitement and darkness, before their terrible mistake was discovered. This was one of the most cruel episodes in all this cruel war.

FORBADE THE BANNS.

Sensational Proceedings in a Church in Belleville.

Belleville, Jan. 11.—For some time past Mr. Harry Demarsh and Miss Jennie Ruttan have been keeping company together. The young man is Roman Catholic, and the young lady is a Methodist, but she did not propose to allow her religious convictions to stand in the way of her future happiness, so she went over to the church of her intended.

Saturday morning at the services in connection with the feast of the Epiphany in St. Michael's church, Rev. Monsignore Farrelley published the banns of the young couple. Mrs. Ruttan, the young lady's mother arose and forbade the marriage. No little sensation was caused among the worshippers at this unusual proceeding, but as the young lady's mother had a perfect right to do so, nothing was said or done.

Mrs. Ruttan was not satisfied with this, but she then went to Magistrate Flint and asked him to write to Rev. Monsignore Farrelley, forbidding him to perform the marriage ceremony. The young lady is only 19 years of age and if she wishes to marry she will have to wait until she is 21 years of age. At present she cannot marry without her parent's consent. Magistrate Flint wrote the letter and the outcome of the case will be watched with interest.

Repudiated by the Archbishop.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—Father Younan, who is at present preaching a series of missions to Protestants in St. Patrick's church, in reply to a querry states that His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi, has repudiated entirely the article published in Semaine Religieuse last week.

Father Younan added that he was requested by the Archbishop to express publicly the loyalty to the British crown, of himself, the clergy, and every Catholic in his archifiacese.

Big Fire in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 11.—About 4.45 this morning, fire broke out in the Manitoba Produce Company's building Bonnatyne street east, and soon the whole building was in flames, notwithstanding that three engines were constantly employed the whole structure and its contents were totally destroyed. The loss will considerably exceed $70,000. The fire was caused by a defective stove in a wooden shed back of the premises.

ASKS MONEY FOR KRUGER.

New Yorker Explains Method of Equipping Recruits From America.

Sedalia, Mo., Jan. 11.—A well-known resident of Sedalia who publishes a secret society journal has received a communication that should throw light on the question concerning the source of the funds provided to transport volunteer recruits from America to South Africa to join the Boers.

The letter to the Sedalian is from George W. Van Siclen, who has been seen often around the Orange Free State consulate in New York. Inclosed in the letter is an appeal to Americans in behalf of the Boers asking for liberal donations of money to aid the Boers in their struggle against the British and for the relief of the widows and orphans of the Boers killed in battle. The appeal also advises Americans to join the ranks of the Boers under Kruger's banner.

Mr. Van Siclen writes that the money will be placed in bank to the credit of the fund and that he will send formal receipts to contributers. He is the treasurer and his office is given at 141 Broadway, New York.

CHURCH AND CHURCHMEN.

The old "Second church" in Boston celebrated its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary recently.

The Universalist church reports 1,003 parishes and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,200 families over last year.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will not occupy the pulpit of his church in Boston again until spring. Dr. Lyman Abbott will be the supply for the month of January.

Rabbi Emanuel Schreiber of Youngstown, O., who has been chosen rabbi of the Emanuel synagogue of Chicago, is 45 years old and a native of Austria. He is a doctor of the Royal college of Vienna and has written a number of religious works.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Glassware should be washed in warm water with a dash of soap powder, rinsed off in clear, warm water and polished with soft linen towels.

Hot or cold water cans or jugs should be turned upside down when not in use, so that they can drain and dry thoroughly. If left damp, they will rust inside and be spoiled, because rust eats holes in the metal.

For dishwashing kerosene oil has been found to form an emulsion with the grease, so that a few drops of kerosene dropped into cold or tepid water will keep knife handles from being injured, as in the case where soap and hot water are used.

Steel Combs.

A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by furriers in combing furs. There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid end serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The untoothed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French poodle.—New York Sun.

Too Small.

Uncle 'Zek'el Watson was accustomed to seeing good sized squares of cup cake, 'lection cake or gingerbread on the supper table, and when he had his first plate of ice cream in a city restaurant he looked with some disfavor upon the macaroons and small sponge drops which accompanied it.

"How do you like it?" asked his niece, who was doing the honors of the city for her uncle.

"The ice cream is first rate," said Uncle 'Zek'el. "I call it extry good. But when you come to these things," he added, lifting one of the sponge "lady fingers" and surveying it doubtfully, "I presume to say they're all right enough, what there is of 'em, but there isn't enough of 'em; just nothing but gape and swallow!"—Youth's Companion.

Books.

When I consider what some books have done for the world and what they are doing, how they keep up our hope, awaken new courage and faith, soothe pain, give an ideal life to those whose homes are hard and cold, bind together distant ages and foreign lands, create new worlds of beauty, bring down truths from heaven, I give eternal blessings for this gift.—James Freeman Clarke.

The War in Mexico.

Orita, Mexico, Jan. 11.—Small bands of Yaqui Indians have become very annoying to the Mexican troops during the last few days and frequent skirmishes have occurred. It is almost impossible to get supplies to the troops owing to the Yaquis tactics. General Torre's men are living on the country, and there are times when they must suffer severly for lack of food. Americans who have come from the Yaqui country say the troops have made no headway toward putting down the rebellion.

e wish to suggest to our loyal citizens who take such an interest towards the welfare of our glorious Empire, to follow the brilliant example set forth by a great number of our country towns and cities, which is to get up a concert or entertainment in aid of the Red Cross Society, whose work in the dark continent of Africa is beyond praise. And we have no doubt that sufficient of our own town local talent could easily be gathered, with a little enterprise on the part of some of our prominent citizens, to make a successful entertainment, which we have not the slightest doubt would be largely patronized, both by town and country on account of the inestimable value of the work done by this noble society. Trusting my proposition will meet with your approval, and that it may be pushed forward for an early date, I remain.

UNITED SONS OF REST.

Quickstep John Sloan opened wide the doors of the U.S.O.R. hall Tuesday evening, after calling in the assistance of about a dozen members with crow bars, the mahogany wood of the doors having swollen to such an extent with the frost that he was unable to pry them open till he had broken two panels and destroyed one glass of his leather spectacles. But as the members had not been subpoened with an invitation announcing the night of meeting, owing to the absence of the secretary, no one arrived on the scene, accepting those the janitor had called in, and Jimmy Elliott, of Cavanville, poet of the noble order, who claimed he was about to write a poem upon the departure of our two gallant sons. The meeting was then adjourned until the following Tuesday.

Burleigh Elections.

The municipal election passed off quietly, and we were not disappointed at the result. Mr. Gallon, our old Reeve, was elected by a large majority over J Holbrook, which plainly shows the intelectuality of the ratepayers.

Mr. Holbrook, if he wishes to assume civic honors, will have to return to Havelock, as Burleigh and Anstruther are perfectly satisfied as to the capability of Mr. Gallon to fill the office of Chief Magistrate, even supposing that he is a small measure.

Two old Councillors were elected again, Mr. Geo. Mathews and Mr. Wm. Hales, both good and responsible men who have been tried before and never found wanting.

Mr. Edwin Brinsset is one of the new men. He came out last year and was only beaten by Mr. Hales by a few votes. This year he tried it again, and was returned at the head of the poll. There is no doubt that the country is safe as long as "Ned" sits at the Council board. Fair dealing and justice to all is his motto.

Mr. Benjamin Windsor is the other man. He served before as a Councillor until he removed to Ottawa district, but as he has returned here once more, and been elected to his old place there is every occasion to believe that he will give good satisfaction.

THE SEAT OF WAR.

A Most Interesting Letter From Lieut. Joe Matthews.

The following extract from a letter recently received by Mr. Geo. Matthews, of Lindsay from his son, Lieut. Joe. Matthews of the Canadian Contingent, now at the seat of war in South Africa, will be perused with interest by our readers —

DeARR CAMP, Dec. 4th.

I have a chance just now to write a brief letter; that is all I can promise for some time to come. Although we are not actually at the front, still, we are near enough to realize that this is no jubilee parade. We don't know just when we are going forward, but there is a rumor that we go to-night to the relief of Kimberley. These rumors are flying about all the time, and I don't know whether to believe this one or not.

We Arrived at Cape Town.

last Wednesday, and anchored in the harbor about noon. The harbor was fairly filled with transports which had brought General Buller's forces out. The 1st battalion of Gordon Highlanders got in just ahead of us, but we went into dock first, about four o'clock. We lay at the dock all night and disembarked in the morning. We were given a good reception as the Sardinian moved into her place. We had no end of fun tossing pennies to the Kaffir boys on the dock; they scrambled and fought like little wolves. We were allowed to walk on the dock a short time that evening, but weren't allowed to go up town at all. In the morning we disembarked at nine, and after a short wait, were marched up to about four miles from the harbour.

Cape Town is a very pretty place, but there are so few trees that it did not suit my style. The mountains at the back are simply magnificent, and the scene from our camping ground is beyond any words of mine. Along with us there were detachments of a great many corps, but only a few of each. There were a number of wounded, and a few Boer prisoners as well. In talking with one of the men (one of the Scots Guards) he told me that the Boers in fighting are very treacherous, and even shoot on ambulance men while attending to the Boer wounded.

We left Cape Town on Friday afternoon, and got here early Sunday morning. Travelling on the train was very pleasant. There were eight in each compartment, so there was lots of room, and we managed to buy extras at the station, so we had plenty to eat.

The Country is a Desert

nearly all the way up. We went for miles without seeing a sign of habitation, while what few farms there were were poor affairs. We passed a few ostrich farms and some large herds of goats. The railroad all the way is parolled by the Duke of Edinburgh's regiment and some of the Volunteer cavalry. Our train ran very slowly, and about every two miles passed a sentry with a flag or lamp.

Our camp here is not too bad except for the dust. Yesterday, high winds prevailed and in consequence no one could see for more than a few feet at any time through the day. It is hot, of course, but none of us mind that. There is very little water, so we belong to the "great unwashed." The nights are quite cool—in fact it is cold justh efore morning, and one blanket is not enough. We are not overburdened with kit as we left our valises at Cape Town. I have a great coat rolled, and inside of it a few handkerchiefs, a pair of socks and a shirt, and if we go up to Kimberley we will have to leave these behind and fight in the clothes we stand in.

This is a Large Camp.

About 3,000 men are here, and they say it is one of the strongest in this division. I don't know what troops are here, as they are scattered over the valley and we are not allowed to leave our lines. We have outposts on all the hills each side of the railway, so the position is indeed a strong one. The Cornwall regiment is next to us. So far we have found the British "Tommies" very fine fellows, and they seem only too glad to do anything for us. They seem to treat the Canadians privates with a certain amount of respect, and give us all the hints their experience prompts.

You at Home Know

a great deal more about the general progress of the war than we do, as we only know what goes on in our own camp. I will have to stop now. I hope you will explain to the rest of the family that it is impossible for me to write to them at length, so this letter will have to do for all.

I have just found out that we are not to leave camp to-day; probably we shall stay here a week or so. Love to all.

JOE.

P. S.—The supplies we are using were taken from the Boers.

RECRUITING IN THE STATES

REPUTED AGENTS FROM THE TAANSVAAL HAVE BEEN AT WORK.

Large Bonus Said to Have Been Offered to One Veteran—On the Other Hand the British Consulate Has Been Overrun With Men Who Want to Fight for England.

New York, Jan. 19.—From several quarters it has been learned that agents from the Transvaal has been working in this city for weeks trying to enlist men to fight against the British in South Africa. With what success these agents have met it is hard to tell, but the agents are offering fairly large sums for men "to serve in the Boer hospital corps."

An instance of the work of the Boer emissaries was told by a waiter in one of the large resturants in this city. The waiter had served for several years in the French army as an artilleryman. About a week ago a man who described himself as a Boer agent met the waiter and said he wanted him to enlist. The agent seemed to know all about the former artilleryman's record. The agent offered the waiter $1,400 and all his expenses to go to South Africa. The agent moreover told this man that within the last month, between 500 and 600 men, most of them Frenchmen, had enlisted and had gone to the war.

It was also said yesterday that two men who had made their headquarters at a saloon near Police Headquarters had announced to several persons their intention of starting a "Boer Association" for the ostensible purpose of retailing information about the Transvaal but really to form a nucleus for a recruiting bureau. These two men, according to the story, have announced to several that they want recruits for the hospital service. The agents have suggested, however, that if any of the recruits prefer fighting they can be easily transferred to any regiment they choose when they reach South Africa. The agents think they can evade the neutrality laws in that way.

One of the men who was approached by one of these Boer agents said he had received the impression that the agents were materially helped in their work by some of the foreign consulates, although probably in an indirect way.

Officials at both the Russian and Greek consulates in this city denied positively, of course, that they had ever heard of such enlistments, except through the newspapers. The Greek Consul-General, Demetrius N. Botassi, went so far as to say that his office had absolutely no interest in the subject.

It was said at the British consulate here yesterday that literally thousands of men had applied to the British Consulate-General for information as to how to enlist in the British army against the Boers. All of these, the officials at the consulate said, had been advised to go to England if they wanted to enlist. The Consul-General said that several soldiers in the United States uniform had applied at his office for information as to the best way to enlist.

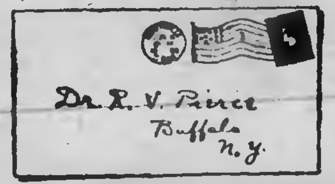
WRITE A LETTER.



Many women live where there is no skillful specialist in women's diseases, and still more cannot afford to pay the high fees charged. These sufferers should follow the example of Mrs. Anna Willy, of Northville, Spink Co., S. Dak., who writes as follows to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.:

"I am enjoying good health, thanks to your kind advice and valuable remedies. I suffered very much with female ailments for more than two years, when I wrote to you for advice. After carefully following your free advice, and taking six bottles each of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I am now a well and happy woman. I have also taken several vials of your 'Pleasant Pellets,' which did me a great deal of good."

Dr. Pierce has probably treated and cured more cases of female weakness, pains in the back, side and abdomen, nervousness, headache, irregularities, ulcerations, tumors and other female troubles, than any other living physician. His wide experience peculiarly fits him to bring about cures when every one else fails. He charges no fee whatever to those who write him for advice, and he invites all to consult him free by mail. His wonderful remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, can be depended upon to overcome nearly every kind of disease that afflicts girls and women. It contains no alcohol, opium, or other narcotics, and does not create craving for injurious stimulants, as is so often the case with other medicines advertised for woman's ailments.

An honest medicine dealer will give you Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and not try to persuade you to take some inferior substitute for the little added profit he may make thereon.

Those who wish may enclose 31 one-cent stamps in their letters, and Dr. Pierce will post free his 1008-page Common Sense Medical Adviser, which is the most complete and practical family doctor book ever published. This includes customs. The same book, cloth-bound, 50 stamps.

St. Andrew's Guild.

St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild met Thursday night. A couple of articles on the war were read by Rev. Mr. Potter and Mr. P. Kerr. Mr. W. Connor, one of the charter members of the Guiold was presented with a short address accompanied by a very pretty celery holder and biscuit jar in connection with his recent marriage. He wrote a suitable reply.

Not Going

Through some misunderstanding Mr. "Chill" Turner, son of our esteemed townsman, Mr. J. J. Turner, will not go with the contingent. It appears that Chill's application was sent in too late. He was at first accepted, but there being too many, the application was subsequently refused. No one feels worse over it than Chill.

The Show Closed.

The 26th annual exhibition of poultry Association held by the Ontario Poultry Tuesday came to an end yesterday, the doors being closed at noon The exhibits were shipped away yesterday the railways carrying the stock to all parts of the province. Mr. Collins and the members of the local Association deserve much credit for the way the show has been conducted.

Buying Horses.

Mr. Percy Pearson, son of Mr. W. J. Pearson, the well-known horse buyer of Montreal, was in town yesterday Both Mr. Pearson and his father will be at the White House on Wednesday next, on their regular horse buying trip. Parties having horses to dispose of will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly. Mr. Pearson always pays the highest market prices.

THE POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

The Annual Meeting and Election of Officers Yesterday.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Poultry Association was held in the Council Chamber yesterday, the retiring president, Hon. J. R. Stratton, presiding.

It was decided to hold the next exhibition at Owen Sound.

The following officers were elected—

He Likes the Show

Yesterday the popular representative of East Peterborough in the Ontario Legislature told the Times that he had no idea that the Poultry show, which closed last night, was so live a thing until he saw it. Had he known he would have personally have asked that every school in the country, within reach of the town, be closed for a day, to enable the pupils to visit the show. He thought it was unfortunate that the farmers did not turn out and patronize the exhibition. They evidently do not know what they missed.

Births, Marriages and Deaths.

The statement of births, deaths and marriages in town during 1899 as compiled by the town clerk from the returns sent in shows a falling back. As compared with 1898 births are not so numerous, deaths are more popular and the eligibles in the marriage line are not doing their duty by themselves or the clergy. The comparative statement is as follows —

	1899.	1898.
Births	231	246
Marriages	96	116
Deaths	163	156

Slaughter of Deer.

Returns received by the Ontario Game Department show that more than 5,000 deer hunters were in the woods during the fifteen days of the last open season, and it is estimated that fully 6,500 deer were killed. The two express companies between them carried 2,033 carcasses, of which 1,939 carcasses, weighing 196,524 pounds, fell to the Canadian Express Company. The remaining 93 carcasses were handled by the Dominion Express Company. The number of carcasses of deer carried by the express companies does not indicate the actual number killed, as many deer were potted by settlers, while others again were despatched by hunters from inland towns and villages and the carcasses sent to the places of destination on teams. Permits were issued to 2,065 settlers, while the number of hunters that took out licenses were 3,550.

Annual Meeting and Election of Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association the following Board of Directors was chosen for the ensuing year—Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. McPherson, Mrs. Innes, Mrs. Roger, Mrs. Beck, Mrs. Burnham, Miss Halliday, Mrs. Stewart, Miss Forsythe, Miss Lundy, Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Lundy, Mrs. Jorey, Mrs. Nugent, Miss Ackerman, Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. Scott, Miss Nicholls, Mrs. Kennedy, Mrs. Davis, Miss Morrow, Mrs. Moore and Miss Mills.

At a subsequent meeting of the Board the following officers were elected—

President—Mrs. Roger.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. Hunter.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Beck.
3rd Vice-President—Mrs. McPherson.
Treasurer—Miss Morrow.
Secretary—To be appointed.

The president's address dealt with the work of the Association, and announced that the Association was beginning another year, greatly encouraged.

The treasurer's statement showed receipts of $1,243.81, all of which was expended in maintaining the Association.

The matron reported as follows—

Since March of 1899 the number of permanent boarders has ranged from four to nine a week, while twenty-one transients have been lodged, some only over night, others staying some weeks. Seven of these were girls out of employment.

The home has accommodation for 12 boarders, the rates ranging from $2.25 to $3 per week. The difference in price, varying with the location and size of the room.

It is our earnest desire to reach self-supporting girls without homes to surround them with Christian influence and provide a comfortable home at so low a rate as possible.

Durint the nin emonths we have servde 414 extra meals, the rates being for dinner 15c or 8 tickets for $1; tea 10c;girls residing at a distance from their employment avail themselves of this accommodation.

We have been encouraged by kind and appreciative words from transients and by the Christian spirit pervading the home evidenced by the kind consideration of one another and the faithful attendat prayers.

Profiting by the experience of the past year, our interest is intensified rather than abated, and we know better how to deal with those we love and wish to serve. deal with those we love and wish to serve.

The Secretary presented a lengthy report, which will be published on Monday.

An Infallible Remedy.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Allow me at this season to call discouraged people's attention through the columns of thy newspaper to The One Perfect Remedy for all human woes.

Sad faces throng our streets. Breaking hearts are everywhere. Suicides multiply. Surely this need not be so.

It can be changed instantly and forever for every man, woman and child who will only believe in God our Saviour, Who cannot lie, and Who says—"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

This is an instantaneous and perfect remedy for all ills that flesh is heir to, and is free for everybody. Many have proved it. All can.

ONE WHO KNOWS.

There to Greet Them.

Captain Kennedy, C.E., was the second man to board the Sardinian on its arrival at Capetown. He is the eldest son of the late Hon. W. N. Kennedy, of Winnipeg, and formerly of Peterborough. Capt. Kennedy was born in Peterborough in the house next to Hunter street, on the west side of Sheridan Terrace. He left Peterborough with the family shortly after the first Riel rebellion, his father being a captain in the force of Sir Garnet Wolsley, which captured Fort Garry in 1870 and ended the rebellion. Capt. W. N. Kennedy, subsequently became a member of the North West Council. He went to Africa on the Nile expedition, and died in London, on his way home. His son is evident a chip off the old block.

PERSONALS.

Mr. T. Blezard, M.P.P., was in town yesterday an dgave th eTimes a call,

The many friends of Mr. Thos. Fortye will pleased to learn that h eis on th emend. He was out for the first time yesterday.

We were pleased to notice our old friend, Mr. Henry Johnston of Hastings in town on Thursday. He came up to look at the chicken show.

The Archdeacon of Peterborough, Rev. W. Allen, of Millbrooke, will officiate at all services to-morrow in St. John's. The Rev. J. C. Davidson will take the Archdeacon's place in the parish of Millbrooke.

Sensible Hint on Food from a

CALIFORNIA WOMAN

"If you could hear all the experiences I have been at some pains to investigate, you would put a warning in the largest type on the boxes of Grape-Nuts and beg (?) consumers to limit themselves to the amount mentioned in the directions."

True you do say "Grape-Nuts food is condensed; eat but three or four heaping teaspoons at a meal;" but the food seemed to fill such a long felt want, and everyone found it so delicious, either alone or in combination with some other material, that, overlooking the small type announcement of its being condensed, they have eaten too much, and when the body is repeatedly given more food than it can use, even if that food be most delicious, there is a natural revulsion, and the long-looked-for and valuable food is laid aside.

I advise persons who have had this experience to put Grape-Nuts on their menu again and eat never more than four teaspoonfuls at a time. Then one gets the powerful rebuilding strength of the food and looks forward with zest to each coming meal. It has been a great blessing to our family." Mrs. W. P. Baker, Los Angeles, California.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The funeral of the late Thos Matchett, county clerk of Victoria, took place yesterday. The interment being made in Omemee.

The Minstrel Club of the C.L.A. gave a performance in Hastings on Thursday night to a fair audience.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Co., have decided to make a number of improvements on their road. Grading and other work between Havelock and Smith's Falls will be commenced April and the first cost will be $45,000

At the police court yesterday a hotel keeper was fined $10 for selling liquor during prohibited hours.

Charles Conners of Toronto Junction, an engine driver on the C.P.R., had the top of one of his fingers cut off at Indian River station yesterday morning. Connors was manipulating the lever in the engine cab when his hand in some way was caught, with the above result. When he reached Peterborough the wound was dressed by Dr. Young.

The Times has received from the Dominion Brewery of Toronto, a very pretty and useful "Vest Pocket Reference Annual." The Dominion people are always up to date.

Blow ye blizzards, blow your best,
All your bluster is a jest.
Every storm wind that blows,
Wafts us nearer to the rose.

Complaints have reached the Times that a number of horses are being driven in town without bells. This is contrary to law.

In Orillia they gave the retiring Mayor a bonus of $100, in Peterborough that official gets it when he assumes office. Probably the latter couse is the best, as it helps him to pay election expenses.

The Rev. H. Symonds is spoken of to fill thee plac emade vacant by the appointment of Provost Welsh to the incumbency of St. James, Toronto. We would be sorry, indeed, to see Mr. Symonds leave town as he would be greatly missed in literary as well well as in religious circles, for he has done more for the advancement of the literary taste of the town than any gentlemen who has ever lived here.

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH—Could often be prevented had the patient with a stomach and digestive organs predisposed to weakness, been stimulated by some such pure, wholesale power as contained in the vegetable pepsin out of which Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets are prepared. But the world is finding it out —medical science is making rapid strides —and the sufferers are not having their pockets "bled" for a cure. 60 tablets 35 cents. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

The Largest on Record.

Montreal, Jan 11.—The earnings of the G.T.R. and C.P.R. during the year which has just closed are the largest on record. The gross receipts of the Canadian Pacific were about $3,000,000 greater than for the year before. The running expenses were also heavier, but there will be a substantial increase in the net receipts. The increase in the receipts is attributed largely to the good times. Though the freight rates were raised somewhat it is stated that the average rate for 1899 was lower than for 1898. The Grand Trunk gross receipts were about $2,250,000 greater than in 1898 and about three-fourths of this increase was in the freight department. The Grand Trunk would have done much better still had it not been for the car famine.

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revolution has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

Was it not Richelieu who, paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "If it is versatility you seek, go find an architect. He must be an artist, or his buildings will offend the eye; an engineer, or they will crumble into trouble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in, and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up.

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offense. The charge was read, and as the statement "The state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honah, ef de whole state o' Iowa is ag'in dis one pore niggah I'se gwine to give up right now!"

ENCE OF THE EMPIRE.

This same authority contends that England will yet be compelled to call for the sward, and risk trouble with France and Russia over the division of Portugal's troubles. His contention is based upon the notorious accessibility of Delagoa Bay officials to Transvaal influences, rendering it impossible to stop the use of Delagoa Bay for Transvaal supplies, and upon the inevitability of further British seizures of foreign vessels, with consequent renewal of Anglo-German friction.

Balfour's Troubles.

The Ministry have this week made their first attempt at a defence of their South African policy, or want of policy, and as the man who, next to Lord Salisbury, commands the greatest popular confidence, Mr. Balfour was chosen as the Cabinet spokesman.

Mr. Balfour himself poses as a man who never reads the newspapers. He once said: "I prefer to gather my history from the men who make it." But his ears must have tingled this week if his colleagues told him what open contempt even Ministerial organs like the Times, the Standard, and the Morning Post, have passed upon his explanations.

What the plain Englishman clamors to know is why, after fourteen weeks of fighting, the greatest empire of history finds its territory still ravaged by undisciplined soldiers of two petty Boer republics. There is the sting.

Mistakes English will always condone readily enough. Had Mr. Chamberlain, even at the outset, confessed that in the matter of the Jameson raid he had made a mistake, he would have enchanced, rather than lessened, his ultimate place in English political life, and if Mr. Balfour had this week made a frank confession of failure, and shown a determination on the part of the Government to resolutely clear up the mess in South Africa, Englishmen would have simply said: "All right fire away." But his petty justification in the face of the great fact that the Boers still held Northern Natal and Cape Colony, have angered supporters and opponents alike.

Talk of Resignation.

Of course there is much talk of the resignation of the Ministry, of the weeding out of old Ministers to make way for young men like George Wyndham, Lord Selburne, and Right Hon. Mr. Broderick, now all three Under-Secretaries; but it is not Lord Salisbury's policy, or Mr. Balfour's either, to throw over their colleagues to please public opinion. The Cabinet will probably keep together, and when Parliament meets on Jan. 30, what they done and are doing to retrieve the mistakes here and in South Africa, and trust to the maxim against changing horses while crossing a stream, to carry them through the crisis.

Is Conscription Probable.

One of Mr. Balfour's speeches this week has been seized upon by a section of the press as forshadowing likely conscription here. The Ministry is certainly convinced that it is folly to continue, to attempt to police the world-wide Empire with a corporal's guard, but they know public opinion too well to attempt conscription. That is not to say they will not use conscription as a boguey to frighten taxpayers into a largely increased military expenditure, for an improvement of the pay and position of the common soldiers and officers, in provision for yearly manoeuvres on a large scale, in the purchase of better guns, in securing fresh training grounds and rifle ranges throughout the country, in strengthening the Yeomanry, the Militia, and the Volunteer forces, and generally leveling up Eniand's fighting machine.

War Office Projects.

Indeed, big projects are in hand at the War Office, some of which contemplate a direct encouragement to the colonies to take a more active share in Imperial defence. Hopes are, for instance, held in official quarters that the ten thousand or so Canadian and Australian and South African irregulars now engaed at the front in South Africa may form nucelues of an extra inter-Imperial army, kept in training and ready for service anywhere in the time of the Empire's need.

These developments must, of course, force forward the question of now far the outlying portions of the Empire are likely to join in permanent military organizations of this kind without some voice in the councils of the Imperial Government. It may very well be that some loose, elastic form of Imperial Federation may be the direct outcome of the present crisis.

NEWZEALANDERS SHINE.

Rensburg, Cape Colony, Jan. 13.—A strong force of British troops advanced this morning under cover of a brisk artillery fire and encamped at Slingersfontein on the Ber eastern flank. The Boer patrols retired, but subsequently a body of Boers attempted to seize the position, threatening communication between the British encampment and Rensburg. The Newzealanders, with a brilliant dash, frustrated the attempt. They raced and seized the position first and fired volleys at the enemy, who retired in the direction of Colesburg.

SITUATION REVIEWED.

London, Jan. 13.—Since General Buller's welcome report of yesterday that he had made the long-expected flank march, the curtain has fallen over the campaign area in Natal more completely than at any time since the war began. Herein may be seen the hand of Kitchener, who does not believe in the scheme of pulling up a plant by the root to see how it is growing, preferring to exhibit the matured specimen. It appears likely that the censorship will be more rigorously applied than ever during the remainder of the campaign, and that only results will be telegraphed.

It is assumed by some military experts that General Buller's movement has Dewdrop for its immediate objective. But Dewdrop is just outside of Ladysmith and is moreover not connected directly with Springfield by road. The road from Springfield over Potgieter's drift joins the Ladysmith road at Onderbroek, just in rear of the Boers at Colenso, against whom Buller is now acting. It must be borne in mind that the British cannot march upon Ladysmith until the Boers at Colenso are disposed of. This effectually disposes of the Dewdrop theory. It may be remembered that Buller's position at Springfield on the main road from Estcourt to the Free State enables him to send parties completely around the Boer positions and get between the Bores and the mountains through which they must fall back in case of defeat at either Colenso or Ladysmith.

FEELING AGAINST WAR OFFICE.

London Jan. 13.—The time has come when the people of Great Britain no longer keep silent regarding the mismanagement of the war. The flood gates of criticism have been opened, and undre the stream of adverse comment pouring fourth reputations are wilting. The stern upbraiding of the Government by papers that almost for a century have been Conservative has already been touchde upon in these despatches. Abuse of the War Office has always existed, and now it is only a few degrees more bitter than it was before.

What chiefly marks the passing of Britain from a period of passive discontent to most severe fault-finding is the outspoken abuse of their generals in the field. There are unpleasant stories of and, in short, all the army's shortcomings, which heretofre have been secretly whispered in clubs, are this week finding their place in print, and not in disreputable journals, but in organs that a month ago would fiercely denounce such tales as unpatriotic, whether they were true of otherwise. It is now well known that Gen. Buller despises Field Marshal Lord Roberts, and hates General Lord Kitchener. The Commander-in-Chief, Lord Wolseley, shares General Buller's feelings, and is scarcely on speaking terms with the Secretary of State for War, Lord Lansdowne. To such a flagrant extent does this enmity go, that Lord Wolseley wrote to Lady Buller that he knew nothing about Lord Roberts' appointment to command the British troops in South Africa, and that he disapproved of it.

A Serious Drawback.

Without enormous obstacles to overcome in the way of the Boers' strenuous resistance and initial advantages, this condition of affairs between the army leaders would constitute a stupendous drawback to the success of the British.

One paper, usually well informed on service matters, declares it is quite likely that Gen. Buller will throw up his command and come home and be a torn in the side of the Government. This is probably an exaggeration, but it is admitted on all sides that he is likely to make himagreeable as possible to Lord Roberts.

Wolsely May Resign.

How all this will end, and if the campaign drags o much longer without serious clange for the better, no one can tell. The resignation of Lord Wolseley would not surprise those who know of the inner workings of the War Office. A great victory would probably quiet the feeling of discontent till the day of reckoning in Parliament arrived. But, lacking that, there seems pending an upheaval which bodes ill for the Government, the War Office, and some of the generals in the field, for these ranklings are current not so much among the lower, sensation-loving classes, but among the highest born and most-even-minded of Great Britian's best citizens.

Vigorous Civillians.

Nor is the discontent confined to the inaction of the Generals. Several of the most powerful civilian factors in English life, some of them almost as financially interested in the furure of South Africa as the Government itself, have repeatedly urged certain reforms in the method of carrying on the war, not meddling with the purely military phases, but offering, for instance, to purchase horses for the Cape, pointing out a better method of transport, urging a more vigorous campaign, giving information as to the best routes towards the objectives, and supporting everything by expert witnesses brought often at great expense from the Cape.

War Office Ignorance.

A representative of the Associated Press learns that a distinguished body, including a former Governor and about a dozen men who have held civil, military, or irregular positions of control during the recent trouble in South Africa, waited on Major-General Ardagh, Director of the Military Intelligence Department of the War Office, the very week previous to that which marked the three disasters to the British army. These men begged General Ardagh to accept certain offers and intimated that he had under-estimated the opposing forces. The General listened and replied, "Thank you, gentlemen, but you are wrong. We outnumber them at eary point, and we have got them like that," thereupon General Ardagh banged his open palms together.

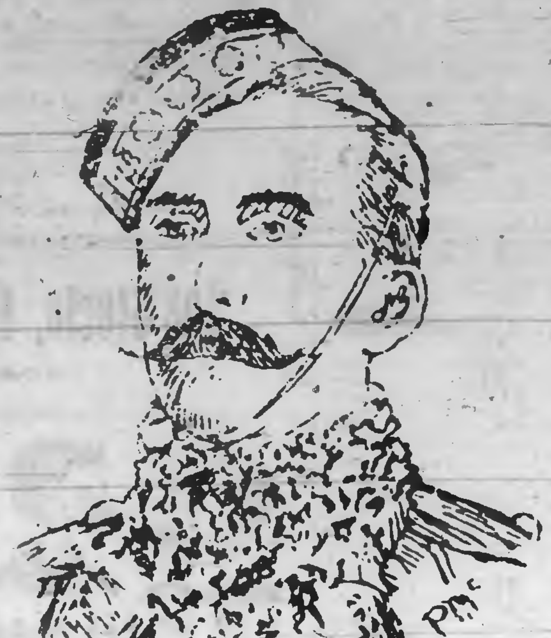
A Daring Project.

P. In spite of this discouraging reception, the men repeated their offers, and the War Office now seems to have awakende to the seriousness of the position, and the officials are likely to accept one of the most daring projects ever undertaken, the full scope of which the Associated Press is not at liberty to disclose, but which, if perfected, will work independently of the War Office, to achieve one of the most important British objectives.

Britain's Needs.

The Imperial Yeomanry, after the first flush of public applause, is being gauged gingerly. It is dawning on the minds of all, that what Great Britain wants are crack., shots and rough riders. What is being urged upon the War Office is that Colonials accustomed to bushwacking, cow puching and scouting, are what is most needed.

CANADA'S SECOND CONTINGENT.



CAPT. C. ST. A. PEARCE, R.C.D.,
Appointed Captain of 'A' Squadron, Canadian Mounted Rifles for Active Service in South Africa.

GEN. KITCHENER IN COMMAND.

The Conqueror of the Soudan Takes Hold of the South African Problem.

New York, Jan. 13.—It now leaks out that Lord Kitchener is really chief in South Africa at the head of the British troops, and Lord Roberts a figure head, says a London cable to the Herald. It happened thus—

The national defence committee met and decided that Lord Kitchener was the man for the place. He was Lord Salisbury's nomination. The Premier had made a stud of Lord Kitchener ony the occasion of the Sidar's visit to Hatfield, but endless difficulties were in the way. The trouble was that Lord Kitchener was the junior of Generals Buller, Warren and others.

But Lord Salisbury is never beaten upon a technibality, and his solution of the problem was to send Lord Roberts. He will restore the confidence of the men by his presence as field marshal, while the fact of Lord Kitchener being his aide will enable the latter, under cover of his superiority in authority, to conduct the campaign.

The general opinion is that the idea is not bad.

LONDON WILD WITH PATRIOTISM.

Volunteers Were Unable to Keep Their Ranks in the Immense Crowds.

London, Jan. 13.—Though many stirring scenes have marked the departure of the British troops for the front during recent months, to-day's outburst of patriotism on the occasion of the starting of the London Volunteers was quite unprecedented since the jubilee. It is the first time in the history of the movement that British volunteers had been permitted to serve side by side with the regulars in real warfare, and the people turned out in hundreds of thousands to celebrate it. The ranks were broken and the troops at times were almost lost sight of in the cheering, shouting, singing mob. Every now and then a halt had to be made in order to re-form the ranks. The troops finally managed to struggle through to the mansion House, actually fighting their way through the dense crowds. The Lord Mayor attempted to make a speech, but found it impossible, and had to indicate his good wishes by smiles and gestures. In leaving, the column had hardly covered a hundred yards when it again intermingled with the surging crowds

NATURAL GAS FOUND NEAR PETERBOROUGH

While Blasting at Lift Lock in Ashburnham, an Escape of Gas Was Discovered.

WOKK AT THE LIFT LOCK MAY BE SUSPENDED.

It is Evident That Natural Gas Exists and Can be Used for Heating and Lighting Dwellings and All Purposes for Which Ordinary Gas is Used.

Saturday morning, shortly after a blast had been set off in the excavation at the lift lock on the Trent Valley Canal in Ashburnham, natural gas was found to be escaping from the rock. After the loose rock caused by the explosion had been removed, the gas was lighted, and burned steadily all day and all Saturday night, in a dozen or more places. It burned without showing signs of diminishing until about eleven o'clock yesterday, when the water, which was steadily rising at the bottom of the hole, put out the flames.

A Times representative visited the spot yesterday and could see the gas plainly escaping through the water. At the top of the pit the fumes of the gas is very unpleasant.

The well holes for the plungers in connection with the lift lock is now sunk to a depth of about 30 feet below the bottom of the lift lock. It has to go about forty feet further. Just what will happen if natural gas is struck, in large quantities as seems most probable, is not known. It will be impossible to go on with the work in such an event.

It is now evident that natural gas exists, it is used for heating and lighting dwellings, and all purposes which manufactured gas is used. In Windsor, for instance, it is sold for 50 cents per 1000 feet, and in some places for even less.

Inflamable natural gas is found in great abundance within the earth in connection with carbonaceous deposits, such as coal and petroleum, and similar accumulations not unfrequently occur in connection with deposits of rock salt, the gases from any of these sources, escaping by means of fissures or seams to the open air may be collected and burned in suitable arrangements. Thus the "eternal fires" of Baku, on the shores of the Caspain Sea, which have been known as burning from remote ages, are due to gaseous hydrocarbons issuing from and through petroleum deposits. In parts of China gas is obtained at a depth of 1500 to 1600 feet, being brought to the surface, it is conveyed in bamboo tubes and used for various purposes. In Erie, Pa., there are 13 gas wells, and gas is sold for 20 cents per 1000 feet for domestic purposes. In one of these well there is a pressure of 200 pounds to the square inch. At Fredonia, N.Y., a natural emission of gas was discovered in a limestone formation, exactly similar to what we have in Peterborough, over the orifice of which a gasholder has been erected, and thus what appears to be an inexhaustible supply of marsh gas and hydride of ethyl has been made available for illumination.

The furtherf excavation at the canal will be watched with intense interest.

DRANK CARBOLIC ACID.

An Aged Toronto Woman Took a Large Quantity, and Ends Her Life.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Walter Palmer, an aged woman living at 16 Grant street, drank a quantity of carbolic acid, diluted with water yesterday morning, evidently with suicidal intent, and at a late hour last night she was still unconscious. The woman's husband, who is a horse dealer, left his home at 5 o'clock yesterday morning on some business, and a couple fo hours later the only daughter went to work. When Palmer returned hoem at noon, he did not see his wife about, and upon trying the door of her room, he found it locked. Becoming alarmed, he broke it in, and discovered his wife lying on the bed, an empty bottle marked "Carbolic acid" beside her. Palmer at once rushed away for Dr. Oleland, Queen street east. The doctor quickly arrived and did all that was possible for the unconscious woman. Notwithstanding his efforts, the woman did not revive, and there is small hope of her recovery. Ill-health is the only reason advanced for her deed.

Mrs. Palmer is Dead.

Mrs. Palmer, who took a dose of carbolic acid last night with intent to committ suicide, died at noon to-day. Coroner Grieg has issued a warrant for an inquest to be held Monday evening.

Must be Ratified.

London, Jan. 13.—The Foreign Office officials say emphatically that the question of the Newfoundland fishing rights has been settled for at least a year, through the acceptance by Great Britain of the French proposition that the modus vivendi be extended for another year. Great Britain is not prepared in war time to discuss the matter, which is now a question between Great Britain and the Colonial Parliament, as the latter must ratify the extension.

Via Suez Canal.

Kingston, Jan. 13.—It is current rumor here that the second contingent will go to Africa via Suez Canal.

The artillery brigade staff leaving here to-morrow will be attached to E Battery at Halifax.

Gunner Wallace, of Toronto, ill with pneumonia, is recovering, but will likely be left, as he cannot sufficiently recover to proceed with the contingent.

Petty thieving is goin on at the barracks and the men have been relieved of various sums of money. The culprits will be run down.

Prussia Makes Terms.

Berlin, Jan. 12.—It is rumored here that the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York, is to be remitted toP russia on condition that it will deposit with the Government the full policy reserve on Prussian policies, this deposit to be made in Prussian securities. If this deposit is made the Government will waive the requirement which calls for the disposal of the company's stocks, amounting in the case of the Mutual Life to $30,000,000. The New York Life Insurance Company, which was recently admitted to Prussia, was not called upon to deposit the full reserve, because it has agreed to dispose of all its stocks. Its deposit with the Government is therefore but half the amount required of the Mutual Life.

SEVEN BYE-ELECTIONS.

No less than seven bye-elections are to be held on the 25th to fill vacancies in the Dominion Government. The vacant ridings are —

Winnipeg—rendered vacant a year ago by the death of Mr. Jamieson (Liberal) who was elected in 1896 by a majority of 1,117.

West Ontario—vacant owing to the lamented death of Sir James Edgar, who had been elected by a majority of 720—constituency unrepresented for seven months.

Berthier—vacant owing to the appointment of Mr. Beausoleil to postmastership of Montreal ($4,000)—Mr. Beausoleil was elected by acclamation at last election.

Lotbiniere—vacant by the appointment of Mr. Rinfret (Lib.) to Customs inspectorship ($2,000)—Mr. Rinfret was elected by acclamation at last election.

Sherbrooke—vacant owing to the death of Hon. W. B. Ives (Con.)—Mr. Ives' majority in 1896 was 257.

Labelle—vacant through resignation of Mr. Bourassa (Lib.) as a protest against action of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in sending the first contingent—Mr. Bourassa's majority was 460; he is in the field again.

Chamby and Vercheres—vacant through the death of Hon. C. A. Geoffrion, a member of the Laurier Government—Mr. Geoffrion's majority was 394.

Of the vacant seats it is possible the Conservatives may capture Winnipeg, that is if the Liberal slump revealed in the recent Manitoba provincial elections extends to Dominion politics. If the Conservatives do this and succeed in retaining Sherbrooke they will probably be well satisfied.

LT.-COL. HUGHES' CASE.

It is known that Lt. Col Sam Hughes, M. P., who at the instance of General Hutton was refused a billet with the first Canadian Contingent, but who went nevertheless to the Cape in the hope of seeing military service, has been unable to get attached to any corps. The assertion is further made that this is because General Hutton, not contend with blocking Lt. Col. Hughes here, wrote to the Imperial war office or to the Cape unfavorably of Hughes.

The offence of Lt. Col. Hughes seems to have been that he advertised for Canadian volunteers for the war, and when notified by General Hutton that as an officer he had no business to do so, he replied that as a member of the Canadian parliament, he was free to call on his own countrymen, as he had done. The rumor is current also that he added some things, comparing colonial troops or officers not unfavorably to British regular troops or officers; but we give this as a rumor only.

No matter what Col. Hughes wrote, it will be pretty difficult to justify General Hutton in the estimation of Canadians if it should prove true that General Hutton wrote letters against him to British authorities. To block Col. Hughes' service with the Canadian contingent might be required by principle, although a magnanimous commander might well be content with apology, which Hughes did make to Hutton; but to follow the volunteer to Africa with damnatory letters would be no better than small-minded spite.

Col. Hughes had his faults. But the particular faults in this case were only over zeal and misconception of the privileges of a representative in parliament of the Canadian people. Col. Hughes was a type of a class of men not too numerous who give honorable and unselfish service to Canada to military ends; who spend their years, their energy and their money in large amounts in the often thankless task of maintaining and promoting our volunteer force in efficiency; and such men are no fit subjects for ungenerous treatment by any superior officer, simply because they may be in a little too much of a hurry to get to do some fighting for crown and country.

RIGHTEOUS WARS.

The Philadelphia Times, one of the leading papers in the United States says —"England is fighting the same battle in South Africa that the United States are fighting in the Philippines. Both flags represent the enlightened civilization of the nineteenth century, and both will be successful because they have assumed a task in the interest of mankind that must be carried to its consummation, and civilization will never have a safe foothold in either South Africa or the Philippines until the despotism and anarchy of the Boers and Filipinos shall be annihilated."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Writing to the Tablet, the chief Roman Catholic journal of Great Britain, Dr. Leyds affirms that Roman Catholics do not suffer from any civic or political disabilities in the Transvaal. In reply the Tablet produces evidence to the contrary, and proves Leyds to be a picturesque and versatile liar.

Ultimately these heavy fires around Ladysmith will cook somebody's goose.

With regard to a change of colors for the uniform of British soldiers in South Africa, they'd prefer the former red to these checks furnished by the Boers.

Following out the logical connection of that flour with bread, the German papers say when it comes to a question of seizure at sea, England takes the cake.

It can happen very naturally that if Britain persists in this right of search, she may ultimately find she's really been looking for trouble.

BOER AMMUNITION.

Enough Powder and Ball For Ten Years' War.

Most of the ammunition used by the Boers is the German or French manufacture. A comparatively very small quantity was made in England, and an equally small proportion was manufactured at the Transvaal government works, near Pretoria.

A vast amount of mystery and secrecy surrounded the government powder factory as it was called, and no one was allowed to visit it or even to approach within half a mile of the inclosed buildings without a very extra special permit. The factory was entirely run by Germans, and, curiously enough, the head thereof was Mr. Kruger, who was always careful to assert that he was no relation whatsoever to the president. This seems quite likely, as he was a very decent sort of fellow.

The works were near Daspoort about four miles outside of Pretoria, and in the immediate vicinity of the cement works, where so-called Transvaal Portalnd cement was very badly made. The powder factory is more jealously guarded from intruders, and even Italians from the dynamite factory, not many miles away, know nothing of its internal economy. It is thought questionable by many whether any actual manufacture takes place here, or whether, as in the case of dynamite works the imported ingredients are just put up in cartridges on the spot, so as to appear to carry out the requirements of the exclusive concession.

The ammunition is taken away at dead of night on mule wagons to one or other of the forts around Pretoria, and a portion is often sent over to the Johannesburg fort, but not by rail, as the jolting might be dangerous in the case of the very carelessly put together explosive. An escort of artillery rides with the wagons and reports the due delivery of the ammunition.

In the case of foreign imported ammunition—Lee-Metford, Mauser and heavy gun shells—it comes by German, French or Dutch steamer to Delagoa Bay, and is there unshipped, stored for a longer or shorter period in the wretched tin shanties on the wharf, which do duty for bonded warehouses, and then, when all the extraordinary Portuguese formalities are complete, it is forwarded by train, via Komati Poort, to Pretoria, where it is taken, again at the dead of night, from the railway station to one of the forts or to the government magazine out on the veldt, beyond the racecourse. Now and again, as indeed, happened just before the present war broke out, the Portuguese officials at Lorenzo Marques (Delagoa Bay), for some reasons best known to themselves, refused to pass the ammunition, and then there is an angry and heated exchange of letters in a queer mixture of Portuguese, Dutch and English, and after a long delay the goods may arrive at their destination, or they may not.

In at least one instance an amusing contretemps occurred. A large lot of ammunition, some 1,200 boxes, went astray at the port and could not be found. The port authorities were sure that they had been landed, but the railway officials could not account for them in any way.

At last, after the lapse of many months, it turned out that by some unaccountable error the whole lot had been reshipped to Beira, and had gone through the Buluwayo, and was comfortably reposing in the magazines of the Chartered company of British South Africa. The Boers indignant claimed their ammunition. Mr. Rhodes' officials said —"Very well, come and fetch it; but, as we happen to want some of this particular brand ourselves, you had better let us pay for it and say no more on the subject." This actually happened, but it was never found out whether the mistake occurred on purpose or by accident.

On the whole, it has been found that the French ammunition is more reliable than that made in Germany, and there has also been less palm oil, less bribery and corruption in its purchase, shipment and delivery. In the case of one particular lot of German cartridges it was reckoned that the original cost was quadrupled by the time they reached Pretoria, owing to the number of hands through which they passed, and the number of officials who had to be "insulted" before they were passed. Not only that, but when these cartridges were unpacked and distributed among the farmers it was found that they were faulty and dangerous, so that whole transaction was eminently unsatisfactory from every point of view. These were Mauser rifles.

The quantity of ammunition stored in the Transvaal is absolutely colossal, and would suffice for a ten year's war, even at the present rate of usage.

THE ARCTIC MOSQUITO.

It Is About the Most Terrible Insect Pest in the World.

"Nothing that has ever been written about the arctic mosquito begins to come up to the real thing," said a guest in the St. Charles corridor the other evening. "I went up the Yukon river in the summer of 1896, representing the Alaska and Dominion Trading company, and we struck mosquitoes as soon as we got into the hills. They are twice as large as our familiar bayou species, and their sting is like the prod of a hot needle. They sweep along the valleys in dense clouds, and if they catch a man unprepared they are liable to blind him before he can escape. I heard stories of children being stung to death and can readily believe them.

"Whenever we went ashore we wore heavy hat nets and took the utmost precaution, but were certain to suffer more or less. One of our party cut the tongues out of his shoes, and a narrow line of sock was exposed under the lacing. Next day he was bitten there at least a hundred times, and his feet were so terribly inflamed that the shoes had to be cut off.

"Another man, a fireman in the boat crew, got drunk on Alaska whisky one afternoon and lay down to take a nap in a corner of the engine room. I noticed him a little later and was horrified at the solid brown mass of mosquitoes that had settled on a small exposed section of his cheek and throat. In an hour his face was swollen out of all resemblance to anything human, he was unable to swallow and was burning with fever. It was a week before he was able to be about. I saw a number of cattle near Fort Hamilton that had been made stone blind by stings near the eye.

CHATHAM, ONT.
CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST! You must decide.

[illegible] of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

A QUEER SENSATION.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE HELD UP AT THE POINT OF A REVOLVER.

Curious Phenomenon That Causes Each Man in a Roomful to Believe That a Weapon Is Pointed Straight at His Own Head.

"If you will take my word for a little experience I had recently, perhaps I can make clear to you how it is possible for three bad men to hold up a roomful of fairly brave men and get away safely with their money," said a merchant from the state of Washington who was a guest at the Lotos club one night recently. "I was in such a hold up not long ago, and I have ceased jeering at fellows who have been through similar experiences. I was one of 70 men who were held up in a big gambling hall, and as I am not a regular patron of such places I kept quiet about it at home. The gambling house is one of the best known in the west, and on the night of the hold up it was filled with a representative crowd. A search would have disclosed the fact undoubtedly that many of the men present were armed. No trouble in recent years has occurred in this place, and there was no reason to anticipate any. It was nearly midnight when the door opened and three men, masked and each holding two revolvers, entered the room.

"'Hands up, quick!' shouted the foremost man.

"I was sitting at a faro table when I heard this command, and as I looked up I found a revolver pointing straight at my head. When I compared notes with the other seventy odd men later, I found that each one had the same experience. There were only six revolvers, and yet each man in the room was willing to swear that one of them was pointed at his head all the time. The crowd was simply paralyzed with fright. For two or three seconds not a man moved. Then over in one corner a Leadville sport brought his hand around to reach his hip pocket.

"'Stop that or I'll shoot,' said one of the masked men, covering him with his revolver. 'Hands up, down quick! We mean business.'

"Every man in that room did hold his hands up. There was no hesitation then. It was my first experience in that kind of game, but it was not until I was able to take my hands down that I realized how tiresome the operation was. There we stood, each man with his hands stretched high above his head, held up in a room on a busy street when an outcry would bring help at once. It was a pretty sure thing, however, that no one would make the outcry. The three masked men had eyes for every move, and their revolvers pointed all ways at once. It is easy for a man who has not been through such an experience to suggest that if several men had only made a break these fellows would have run. I can honestly say that the barrel of the revolver into which I looked seemed to me to be as large as a sewer pipe. I even thought that I could see the end of the bullet, and I was awfully afraid that the man who held the revolver might get nervous and shoot me by accident. I tried to look pleasant to appease him. All this had taken perhaps a minute and a half when the spokesman shouted to us:

"'Line up against that wall with your backs to me, and the man who takes his hands down will get shot. Quick now, gentlemen, if you please. Obey orders, and you won't get hurt.'

"We lined up as directed like a lot of schoolboys.

"'Now then, my friend here will relieve you of your valuables without your assistance,' said the spokesman. 'Don't move, because there are two dead shots behind you. Keep quiet, and it will soon be over.'

"It was a very cool piece of work, I can assure you. One of the three went straight down the row, taking each man's watch and money. He didn't get as much as he expected, and as near as we could estimate later the total haul was under $5,000. There was over $100,000 in the safe which the robbers overlooked. When we had been cleaned out, the spokesman said:

"'Now, gentlemen, we are sorry to inconvenience your further, but we shall have to request you to stand just as you are for five minutes more. Don't cut the time short, or you will get hurt.'

"The side door opened at this instant, and we heard the order 'Hands up, Chink, or you are a dead man!' It was one of our Chinese servants who was returning with a tray filled with drinks. He promptly dropped his tray, smashing all the glasses and threw up his hands. We heard no other sound for five minutes. Each man counted the seconds to make sure that he shouldn't take down his hands ahead of time. The proprietor was the first man to move, and as soon as he felt that it was safe he turned and found the robbers gone. He picked up a heavy chair and threw it through the window. It carried the sash with it, and the crash that followed attracted general attention in the street below. The proprietor stuck his head out of the window and profanely shouted such details of the hold up as might put the people in the street on the track of the robbers. It was useless, however. The fellows walked out quietly, took off their masks and disappeared without leaving any clew. We all piled out of the place to aid the search. When we found out that a chase was hopeless, most of us came back to the gambling room to talk it over. When we entered the place, we found the Chink standing in the ruins of his glasses with his hands still above his head. The proprietor told him to take his hands down. The Chink wouldn't do it, and two men who pulled his arms to his side had all they could do to hold him. He had looked in the big barrel of one of those small revolvers, and he hadn't forgotten it.

"Now this was an actual experience, and some of your New York papers had accounts of it. If I were mixed up in an affair of that sort again, I would raise my arms just as quickly. It was expediency and not a yellow streak that made that crowd act as it did."

TO DIE ON THE SCAFFOLD.

A Jury Finds Henry Williams Guilty of the Murder of Varcoe.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—After being out nearly two hours, the jury in the murder case last evening brought in a verdict, declaring Henry Williams guilty of the murder of John Edwin Varcoe, Nov. 8th. last. With the verdict was coupled a recommendation to mercy.

The prisoner's counsel, Mr. Robinette, moved for a reserve case, on the ground that Varcoe's dying statement was not admissible as evidence because his exact words had not been given, nor were the questions put to him taken down in writing. Other objections were raised, but Chief Justice Meredith overruled them.

When he asked Williams if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, the prisoner reiterated a few words of the story he told in the witness box. Then the judge said—

"Henry Williams, the sentence of this court is that you be taken from the place whence you came, and that on Friday, the 13th day of April, you be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul."

The prisoner was apparently unmoved by the sentence. He cooly picked up his overcoat and walked out briskly when the officers took him to the cells. After being locked up he was as composed and self-collected as he was throughout the trial. The jurymen, whose oath bound them to condemn him, were much more affected than he was.

April 13th, Good Friday, the date of the execution, is a legal holiday, and the question has been suggested that an execution on such a day is not legal. The question was once raised in this country, and the presiding judge would not carry out the sentence until the Minister of Justice could give a decision.

CHICAGO AND GRAND OPERA.

Chicago, having tired of grand opera, now proposes to become the world's art center, regardless of expense.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

One explanation of the failure of the grand opera season in Chicago is that the people are saving their money to buy automobiles.—Kansas City Star.

Mr. Grau says Chicago is a poor town for grand opera. The people out there will probably strike back by declaring that Grau is an all fired poor judge of packed meat.—Washington Post.

After losing a great deal of money Manager Grau has discovered that Chicago does not care for grand opera, her people being busy listening to the grunt of dying hogs and having no time to hark to the trills of a Sembrich.—Louisville Post.

Chicago is feeling rather mortified over the cold reception it gave to Mr. Grau. It would seem that Chicago is about on a par with Rochester as a "musical center" in the matter of giving welcome and support to great artists.—Rochester Democrat.

THE FRENCH PRESS.

Sober minded Frenchmen think that undue attention has been paid in England to the obscure draftsmen whose vulgarities have adorned the pages of the Parisian gutter press.—Philadelphia Record.

Considering all the abuse the English papers heaped upon France in the matter of Dreyfus, it is not surprising that the French papers should retaliate with such venomous comment upon English policy.—Philadelphia Times.

The sort of cartooning to which Queen Victoria is being subjected in the comic papers of Paris is a reminder of the fact that there is no country in the world where that sort of journalism descends to such depths as in France. Its cleverness and humor are impaired by coarseness and indelicacy.—Boston Herald.

BRITISH HEROISM AT THE MODDER RIVER.

Graphic Description of the Long, Fierce and Victorious Battle at That Place.

SOLDIERS CROSS THE STREAM ONE AT A TIME.

Two Brigades Were Obliged to Act Independently, But Fought on Just the Same—Boers Were Surprised at Such Bravery—Scenes at Belmont.

London, Jan. 12.—British war correspondents are pouring in, by means of the mails, columns of descriptions of the operations in South Africa. The Times 'correspondent at Modder River has written a graphic account of the long, fierce, battle that takes its name from this stream. "For the whole of the day," he writes, "the Guards' brigade lay on the open veldt in a heat that was actually 110 degrees in the shade at midday. Meanwhile the left flank had not been idle, and after the General had personally led them to the summit of a slight rise that commanded the only possible means of crossing the river—the dam that had been built to turn the Modder River into an ornamental water for the picnics of the Kimberley excursionists—they moved in echelon towards the edge of the river bank on the enemy's extreme left flank.

How they Crossed.

"That it could even be attempted to cross the river sidling sideways through the rush of water, one by one, clinging to the short supports in full view of the opposite shore, was an attack of reckless heroism against which the wary Cronje had not provided. This was actually done, and one at a time some four hundred of them crossed. Then a detachment of the Royal Engineers followed, and little by little a force collected which cleared several of the nearest houses on the right and effected an occupation of an irrigation patch from which they were never dislodged.

Slept on the Field.

"To fight for thirteen hours is an ordeal that in any kind of warfare would be a terrible strain; but, on the shadeless veldt, with the thermometer at the degree above mentioned, the exhaustion suffered by our men was so great that in hundreds of cases men and officers alike slept as they lay in the scrub, careless of the shell and rifle fire that surged over them. To provide them with food was impossible and to bring a water cart on to the field was only tempting men to expose themselves to death.

Methuen's Wound.

"Early in the afternoon the General was shot through the thigh, and for some time the two brigades, in the absence of orders, were compelled to act independently, the only command being a warning to the ninth brigade not to fire upon the first, of which there was some danger.

"The magnificent manner in which the Boers had realized and augmented the strength of the position, the success with which they had kept their works and disposition secret until the crucial moment, the feint on the extreme right by which they drew off the entire artillery strength of our force from their main position and the astonishing accuracy of their picked shots at the longest ranges should be remembered to the credit of their generals. But it was in the material which formed the commandos that they failed. They could do no more than they actually did with the men under their command. Already jealousies had sprung up between the generals, the men accused each other of cowardice, and the threat of physical force had—if rumors were true—to be held over them more than once.

The Maxim Gun.

"The one-pound Maxim gun was the most effective weapon used by the Boers. The five or six shots fired in one second while the gun was traversed had more moral effect than the steady discharge of shrapnel from the ordinary 15-pounder at half-minute intervals. One man not far from me had both thighs blown off as he sat by one of these little shells, landing on ground between them, but there is no question that the moral effect was as a rule greater than the practical results."

Of the lessons to be learned from Modder River this correspondent says—"It will be impossible in any future war for the officers to retain their swords, and it will be worth while for the War Office to construct some light carbine that may be carried by them instead of the weighty rifle served out to the men."

BOERS IN THEIR CARRIAGES.

London, Jan. 12.—Julian Ralph, writing for the Daily Mail, says—"Let me describe the top of the small hill in the Belmont engagement, the one in storming which the brave Grenadiers suffered part of their fearfully heavy loss. On this kopje the Boer commander had compelled the poorer men of his commando to live for weeks. I took it that these were men of the servant and the laborer class. Their dead, whose untidy and neglected bodies I saw seated as the British bullets and bayonets found them, confirmed this theory, for they were poorly clad, unshaven, unclean, and hungry looking. I knew when I saw such men among the dead, the wounded and the prisoners, how it could be that white men could misuse the white flag and mock the sacred purpose of the Geneva cross.

Dirty Boers.

"The food, the dirt and the extraordinary profusion of cartridges and cartridge wrappings were all mixed together. But the earth and disorder were not so offensive as the grimy, beastly condition of the dead.

"If I could write steadily for a week—and if there were no such strict censorship such as fetters me—I could not exhaust the list of peculiarities, eccentricities, anamolies, and novelties of this war waged against us by an undisciplined force of rebels who are soldiers by instinct and farmers or cattle raisers for livelihood. But I could not in all that week state a more astonishing fact than that at some of these battles the better class of Boers have come to battle in their carriages like gentlemen driving to the Derby at home, and, having done their best have retired the same way, leaving their vassals to cover their retreat."

DUTCHMEN RAISE $3,000.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—H. Vanderploeg, the secretary of the South African Fund Association, reports a fund of $3,000 on hand which will be forwarded to the Red Cross Society when $2,000 has been added. Enthusiasm among the Dutch Americans is at high tide over the subscriptions now being taken to aid the sick and wounded Boer soldiers.

The Architect.

One must wonder why it really is that so little is said or thought about architecture, the grandest, the mother, of all arts, a great, a most useful, science, one in which a greater revolution has lately taken place and in which more progress has been made, with more stupendous results, than in any other, remarks a writer in The International Magazine.

Was it not Richelieu who, paraphrasing an ancient writer, said: "If it is versatility you seek, go find an architect. He must be an artist, or his buildings will offend the eye; an engineer, or they will crumble into trouble; a lawyer, or he will get his patrons into trouble; a doctor, or his buildings will be hygienically unfit to live in, and, last, but not least, he must be a gentleman, or we will have nothing to do with him."

Time to Give Up.

An Iowa judge recently related an amusing incident that had occurred in his court when a colored man was brought up for some petty offense. The charge was read, and as the statement "The state of Iowa against John Jones" was read in a loud voice the colored man's eyes bulged nearly out of their sockets and he seemed overcome with terror and astonishment. When he was asked if he had anything to say or pleaded guilty or not guilty, he gasped out:

"Well, yo' honah, of de whole state o' Iowa is ag'in dis one pore niggah I'se gwine to give up right now!"

TAKING THE REINS.

The world's record for fastest clipping of a horse is 14 minutes.

Arlington, 2:22¾, has trotted in 2:14 on a half mile track and may be Gold Leaf's first 2:10 performer.

Bishop Hero, 2:21, the Pacific coast veteran, is being driven on the roads at San Francisco by General Shafter.

J. Sutherland has bought 50 acres from A. H. Bernal at Pleasanton, Cal., and will build a track. He will also erect a large training barn and some 40 box stalls.

N. B. Wheeler, Cresco, Ia., reports a new record of 2:23½ for his pacer Fitzgerald, by Flask, 2:13¼, and that he was timed in 2:17½ in a race at Charles City, Ia., over a poor track.

The latest device to encourage high stepping in coach horses is a glass worn like goggles, the crystals being so formed that the ground appears nearer than it is. It is said to work all right.

A horse show will be held next year under the auspices of the French government in connection with the Paris exposition. Twelve prizes, worth $2,300, will be offered for American harness horses.

Ardine, 2:23¼, and Abby Kelly, 2:24½, are two more new ones for Pilot Medium reported by D. D. Streeter of Kalamazoo, Mich., former owner of Peter the Great (4), 2:07¼, the star of the family.

Porter Bairy, Pyatt, Ills., reports that his stallion Santamego, by Indicator, 2:23¼, son of Gold Dust, won the free for all at Grayville, Ills., in September in straight heats, reducing his record to 2:18¾.

F. D. Spotswood of Harrodsburg, Ky., has a 3-year-old trotting filly by Baron Wilkes, dam by Nutbreaker, that is a speed phenomenon. Oct. 1, after a very brief preparation, she trotted a three-quarter track in 2:29 and Oct. 24 turned the same track in 2:15¼; last half in 1:06¾.—Horse Review.

THE CENSOR.

The English government has just announced its regular semiannual refusal to pardon Mrs. Maybrick.—Kansas City Journal.

The European nations may finally come to blows in their frantic efforts to get into friendly relations with the United States.—St. Louis Republic.

The shooting season in the Adirondacks has closed, and the record shows that 23 men were killed. It is believed that fully as many deer perished.—Washington Post.

When in after years the Transvaal bard sets out to immortalize in stirring, heroic hexameter the deeds of his sires, he stands to be distressed by Pietermaritzburg.—St. Louis Republic.

A Rossville (Kan.) woman died just after filing a suit for divorce. What a warning this should be to other women who are wincing beneath the chafing of the marital harness!—Denver Post.

Now that a French scientist has invented a successful steering apparatus for airships, all that is needed for the solution of the airship problem is the invention of an airship.—Louisville Courier Journal.

The colossal statue of De Lesseps just dedicated at the entrance of the Suez canal is described by an enthusiastic admirer of the distinguished Frenchman as the grandest monument in Egypt. What's the matter with the sphinx?—Boston Herald.

THE WRITERS.

Michael Davitt, during his days in parliament, did nearly all his literary work in the house writing room, where silence is enforced, sitting invariably in the same seat.

Paul Bourget has announced his intention of paying a second visit to this country. He will come next spring and gather material for a novel dealing with American social life.

Theodor Mommsen, at the age of 82 years, has published a new work, "Roman Criminal Law," as a companion to his great "Roman Constitutional Law." It is a volume of 1,078 closely printed, large octavo pages.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson lately saw for the first time the statue of himself set up before the National theater in Christiania. He turned red in the face and demands that it be removed, as it is a libel on his personal appearance.

THE PARIS SHOW.

The Paris exposition catalogue will contain 100,000 names.

The parks of Milwaukee will be part of the exhibit of that city at the Paris exposition. A series of photographic views of the public parks of that city will be shown.

It took a bid of 275,000 francs to secure the privilege of letting out seats for the Paris exposition of 1900. For the 1889 exhibition the successful bid for the monopoly was 39,000 francs.

Governor Mount of Indiana is personally supervising an elaborate exhibit for his state at the Paris exposition. One of the features of this will be a series of large photographs to show the progress of the "good roads" movement in Indiana, where there are now 30,000 miles of graded and graveled highway.

King Taps War Fund

Moscow, Jan. 12.—A despatch from Belgrade announces it has been discovered that King Alexander and his father, ex-King Milan, have appropriated a goodly share of Servia's war fund. The former king is now in Hungary, whither he has gone on a shooting excursion, and it is not expected in Belgrade that he will return to Servia.

Lard Famine in Germany.

Bremen, Jan. 12.—There is almost a lard famine in Northern Germany. Neither in Bremen nor in any of the other ports, nor at interior ports, is there any large stock of lard. Hamburg dealers are buying from Berlin dealers lard they have hitherto supplied them, and it is believed that a sharp advance in prices will come before the equilibrium of the market can be restored.

Plague in Brazil.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The bubonic plague has made its appearance at Rio Janeiro, Brazil. There has been one death there as shown by a cablegram received here by Surgeon-General Wyman.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF WAR.

..ers do Not Like Cold Steel. Merry Times in Besieged Ladysmith. What Will Occur When the War is Over.

letter written from Ladysmith by a ..ate says —

We were a few miles out of Lady-..ith collected the wounded who had ..ded at Nicholson's Nek fight when came across two of our boys, one in the neck, and the other a Glouces-... (whom I knew), in the leg. As soon he saw me he said—'Never mind my . Let that look after itself. Be a good , and give us a pipe of your tobacco. dying for a smoke.' Our sergeant d, 'You shall have it when we have pped you up comfortably in the van.' is same chum is now in hospital here, nus his left leg.

Talking of Nicholson's Nek, it turned t a stunner to us, as I daresay you ve heard before now. It was at first id that the Boers had hemmed our men and shot them nearly all down, not-thstanding the surrender of our col-m, but happily this turned out to be a ra. Nevertheless, a thrill of horror at through the town at our bad luck having fallen into one of many Boer ps. We counted forty-nine killed at is battle, and about eight-four wound-. The rest gave themselves up as pris-ers of war, but a few escaped the en-y's eye by covering themselves with , and are back again relating their periences."—London News.

Fun With Cold Steel.

Drummer Hearn, of the Royal Berk-ires, who was with Baden-Powell's ght horse and Mafeking when war was clared, and joined my regiment at ormberg a week after hostilities com-enced, gives an exciting description of e first engagement at Mafeking in a tter from Queenstown on Nov. 11 to his arents at Wycombe. He says—"I was the first big fight at Mafeking. It was grand go for our side. We gave them ch a doing. We fought them in the lls and then pretended to run away. here was a large field covered with wder mines. We cleared for this, and us encouraged them to run after us, nd when we got them on the field we ew the whole lot up. We cleared those ho remained at the point of our bay-nets and withour swords, for most of were mounted. It was really fine fun. ou should have seen what a fus the oers made about being 'pricked in the utton.' I touched one man and he mped for yards. They don't like cold eel. They are all right so long as they an keep behind rocks and shoot. . . . fortnight ago I rejoined my regiment t Stormberg, but had t oclear out in wo days because the Boers had crossed he border. Now we are at Queenstown, t the base of operations, and our fel-ows are grumbling because they cannot o to the front. We showed them no ercy at Mafeking, but it was only what hey deserved for what they have done o us before and since."—London News.

Life in Besieged Ladysmith.

Mrs. Llewellyn Mellor, wife of Colonel Mellor, of the First battalion of the King's Liverpool regiment, now at the Cape, has with her son, just returned to England. She states that when she left Ladysmith every one was in the best of spirits. There was no fear of ammuni-tion running short; in fact, no fear of ny kind. The water, however, was ab-ominably bad, and severe internal pains rom which many of the troops were suf-fering when Mrs. Mellor left Ladysmith re ascribed to this source. It was no ncommon sight, she says, to see ladies staying at the Royal hotel take into the ining room water which they had pre-viously boiled. At that time there were staying at the hotel the wives of fifteen fficers and several children, some of hem babies in arms.

A young fellow, well dressed and ap-parently with plenty of means, who had been staying at the hotel for some time, was overheard asking suspicious ques-tions. Inquiries were made, and as he proved to be a Boer spy he was prompt-y arrested. The town hall at Ladysmith is the general operating room, and if the Boers are shelling it they are firing on their own wounded, who in considerable number are being looked after there. Night alarms interfere with the rest of the troops and inhabitants, and flies make sleep impossible by day.

The newspaper correspondents are mer-ry and, despite the danger, drive four-in-hand round the camp and fortifications. Coffee, it is said, is the staple drink.—London News.

To "Telephotograph" the Boers.

For the first time in history the tele-photographer is about to play his part—it may be an important part—in warfare.

Second Corporal Ford, of the Royal Engineers, Chatman, has been detailed as telephotographer to the army in South Africa, and has sailed from Southampton with his cycle and apparatus.

Corporal Ford's camera, which is fitted with "telephoto" lenses, is a wonderful machine, which will take a clear photograph of a man, or battery, or intrenchments at any distance up to two miles. So that beyond the range of the enemy's rifles Corporal Ford will be able to get photographs of their positions which should prove of great value. As military telephotographic scout he ought to be able to render useful service to the British army.

This special apparatus was devised by Lieut. Poulin, R.E., and made by the London Stereoscopic company. It is fixed on to Corporal Ford's bicycle in such small compass as to be hardly noticeable, and the whole thing—bicycle and apparatus—is painted the familiar khaki color. —London Mail.

Women to Invade Transvaal.

Many intending emigrants to the Transvaal are already forming plans for the time when the war shall be over. Among them is a contingent of women gardeners.

In this country members of the fair sex have not proved conspicuous successes as horticulturists, despite the fact that special colleges have been established to train them. But when once in South Africa, it is stated, these fair gardeners are going to work on entirely different lines.

Among the things which the Transvaal can be made to produce by careful cultivation are such fruits as peaches, nectarines, and tangerines. It is these to which the women gardeners will devote most of their attention, growing not only for the South African market, but sending them preserved, tinned, and crystallized, and treated in various other ways to England and Europe generally, thus entering into competition with California, Australia, and other present sources of supply for such commodities.

Whether any practical result will ever come from such a scheme it is difficult to say with any degree of certainity; but the unsettled state of affairs which must necessarily obtain there for some time after peace is declared, the difficulty of feminine control of native labor, and the great distance from markets are only a few of the difficulties which the women gardeners will have to encounter.

Neither will the present boom in market gardening over here tend to improve the sale of colonial produce, even though its growth be superintended by a fair damsel from Kew or Swanley. However, there will be plenty of time when the Boers are beaten to think of supplying them with peaches.

Women Under Fire.

A Borderer writing from Durban speaks of the coolness of the women at Ladysmith during the battle of Farquhar's Farm. "Some of the most courageous," he says, "had ventured on the hill beside us to see the battle, and were standing conspicuously dressed in white. On their being asked to sit down and keep out of sight, as they made a splendid target for the enemy's guns, one woman calmly replied that she was not going to soil her dress by sitting on the dirty ground. At different parts of the town women were standing with cans of tea and coffee which they served to the tired out men as they passed along."—London Leader.

Rode for His Life.

Mr. W. Hearn, governor of the British prison at Umsinga, Pomeroy, Natal, writes home to Heldon—"I have only time for a few lines; I am tired out, having been turned out of house and home by the cursed Boers. I have ridden the ninety-one miles to Pietermaritzburg. We had to ride for our lives. They have burned our houses, court buildings, and jail to the ground. All our furniture is gone. I believe we shall be recompensed, but one never knows."

Was Bound to be a Soldier.

Corporal H. R. White, of the First Essex regiment, on his way to South Africa writes from Teneriffe to his father—"Here is an amusing incident for you. A recruit of about ten weeks' service, and who belongs to our depot, managed to fit himself with a suit of khaki somehow, and arming himself with a D. P. rifle fell in on the parade ground with the battalion, got through without being seen, and is now on board with us as large as life. I think he is going to be allowed to come to the front with us. I think he ought to come."—London Mail.

"Had No Mercy."

Trooper Thomas Dolan, of the Fifth Royal Irish Lancers, under the date of Oct. 28, writes—"I believe the shells the Boers fired are faked, or else they cannot time them to go off, for last Saturday no less than a dozen dropped among us as we charged about 2,000 Boers. As soon as they saw the lance they threw up their rifels and ammunition in the air and cried 'Friends,' but it was no go, for they fired on the Red Cross, and we had no mercy for them."—London Leader.

Writing to his parents from Ladysmith Private F. Woolmcroft, of the Second battalion, King's Royal Rifles, describes his first battle—"When we charged the Boers with our bayonets those who did not get away went on their knees for mercy, and I can tell you they got it—with a long hook. I had a narrow escape from being captured by three of them, but I lay down and shot the three within fifty yards of me. I though it was all up, but I believe what my fortune told me, 'that I should never die with my boots on.'"—London Leader.

HUMBLED THE SENATOR.

He Tried to Assert His Independence, but Failed Miserably.

The writer remembers a good many years ago when the late Ezekiel Clarke was a member of the state senate from Johnson county. It is well known that the senator or member from Johnson county is always expected to get a large appropriation for the state university. To fail would be political death. Senator Clarke was anxious to succeed and during the early part of the session voted for everything. If another senator had a bill, all he had to do was to go and whisper in Ezekiel's ear, and he would vote "aye."

One day, however, Ezekiel came into the senate with hair cut and a clean shave. He sat upright in his seat and began to slaughter right and left. State Senator George F. Wright looked across to where the senator from Johnson was sitting and inquired what change had come over the senator from Johnson county. The other senator replied that the appropriation bill for the state university had now passed both houses, and the senator from Johnson was going to make up for lost time.

Clarke kept on punching heads until the senator from Jefferson, Moses A. McCold, rose and solemnly introduced a bill for an act entitled "An act repealing the appropriation for the state university." A broad smile passed around the room, and everybody except the senator from Johnson saw the joke. But the spirit of levity passed away from Senator Clarke. He at once assumed his humble attitude, and the other boys voted him as usual during the remainder of the session.—Des Moines Capital.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

Lansing, Mich., has a driveway 88 feet in width.

Philadelphia is to have a labor temple to cost not less than $100,000.

Indianapolis has 3,500 dogs licensed and 1,500 unlicensed and still has no public place where one of them can get a drink of water.

New York has a school in connection with the fire department where firemen are taught to scale buildings, catch dummies and handle furniture.

Showing Him How.

"You young scoundrel!" said the father, seizing his disobedient son by the hair. "I'll show you how to treat your mother."

And he at once proceeded to show young hopeful the way by banging him across the ears two or three times and then shaking him until his hair began to fall out.

Dew.

Teacher—How do you account for the phenomenon of dew?

Boy—Well, you see, the earth revolves on its axis every 24 hours, and in consequence of this tremendous pace it perspires freely.—London Tit-Bits.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Soak flannels in cold borax water. If very soiled, make a slight lather. Souse up and down and rinse well. They must never be rubbed.

Scrubbing brushes should never be allowed to soak in water, either hot or cold. Shake them when finished with and stand them in the air to dry.

Shoes that are not in use need to be aired and cleaned once in a fortnight at least, or they will not wear as long as if they had been worn each day.

A broom that is plunged into boiling suds once a week will become tough, so that it will last much longer, will not cut a carpet and will always sweep like a new broom.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

The Theatricals.

The appearance of a number of ladies and gentlemen of the Golf club in amateur theatricals at the opera house to-morrow evening has aroused great interest and all the indications point to a successful presentation of the two comedies which they have prepared. The entertainment is under the auspices of the Golf clubs and the proceeds are to be devoted towards furnishing the new club house which is to be built at Auburn next spring. The cause is one worthy of support. Much time and labor have been spent in preparing for a correct and elaborate production of the dramas and it is safe to say that the entertainment will be one of merit.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The elections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

Come Seven Come Eleven

The boys made a big scoop a few evenings ago at their cock fight. The local birds were victorious, and the $100 pot was captured, besides a large number of side bets. We understand that there is to be a return match on the tapis. The party who rented the hall is in a peck of trouble over it, his brother Orangemen being wild with indignation over the fact that their edifice should be used for such a purpose.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c, Times Bookstore.

A Coming Event.

On Tuesday evening next there will be presented at the Opera House, two plays, in amateur theatricals, entitled, "Are Belle" and "My Lord in Livery." Admission 25 and 50 cents. Plan at Bradburn's Office.

Saturday's Market.

There was a large attendance at the market on Saturday, the sleighing no doubt inducing many farmers to attend. Considerable wood changed hands at from $3 to $4 per cord. Good long hardwood sold for $375; hay $7.50 beef $5.50 per 100; pork $5.25, chickens 35c; butter 22c; eggs 20c.

Found Guilty.

County Magistrate Edmision Saturday handed out judgment in the reserved Ennismore milk watering case. He found the defendant guilty of watering the milk brought to the cheese factory, and fined him $10.00 and costs. The ground on which magistrate Edmision found the party guilty was the fact that the milk had certainly been watered, and though defendant and his wife swore they knew nothing as to how the water came to be in the milk they admitted that no one else had anything else to do with the milk before it reached the factory.

SAM HUGHES WRITES.

The First Letter Since His Arrival in South Africa.

We clip the following from the Lindsay Watchman Warder of the 11th inst;

On Tuesday, Col. Hughes' family received their first letter from him after reaching his destination. It was written in haste and military preparations and hence was necessarily brief. The following sentences are of public interest:—

Cape Town, South Africa.
2nd Dec., 1899.

On Wednesday afternoon the Sardinian reached this place. The men were all in good condition and glad to reach their journey's end. I went on shore at once, anxious to set my foot on terra firma again. The Canadian government evidently did nothing for me after we set sail from Quebec. I found myself known however even here and was to-day ordered to hold myself in readiness to go to the front for active service.

The colonials are exceedingly well received here. Both Canadian and Australians got a good street cheer as they marched away. Cartwright is up at Orange River looking after supplies, but all the rest, Drury, Lessard and Forrestier, etc., are here. These officers will likely remain here for some weeks as the corps or service to which they are to be assigned is not yet selected.

I lunched with Sir Alfred Milner, Governor-General of Cape Colony to-day. He is a very clever official and a great man. I was asked if I would take command of a company of 200 sharpshooters and I immediately said, "Yes." That was informal however. I would like such service better than other but will take whatever I can get. I am to go forward in a week or two at most.

Faithfully,
SAM HUGHES.

GREAT REDUCTIONS

For THIS WEEK in Shoes at Kidd's

Ladies White Kidd Slippers, opera heels, elegent goods, $2.00, reduced to $1.10. Ladies Dongola Button Boots, $1.50, reduced to $1.10. Ladies' Chocolate Button and Lace Boots, from $3.75 to $1.76. Misses (Weston's make) Bals and Button, $1.35, down to $1.10. Misses Strong Skating Bals, were $1.10, down to 85c.

MOCCASINS.

Mens' Finest Moose, very heavy, from $2.50, to $1.00. Mens' Strong Moose, extra heavy, from $2.00 to 85c. Womens', boys' and girls' moccasins at about half the wholesale price—There is not space enough to advertise here the same reductions in Mens' leather goods. 296 George street.

The Mayor's Duty.

The entrance of Mr. Kendry into the municipal arena, in view of the probability of his again running for Parliament is, we think, a poor piece of political strategy. His conduct as mayor will be closely watched, and any mistakes that he may make will assuredly be heralded from the housetops when the big political fight is on. Besides, a large majority of the ratepayers are not pleased with the present methods of the Council in regard to street work, and will be satisfied with nothing short of a complete change. What the people want is that the services of our salaried engineer be dispensed with, and a practical man employed, who understands road making and handling men. Mr. Ed. Wade has been suggested for the position, and the Times is of opinion that he would fill the bill to perfection. An engineer might be employed occasionally when plans and specifications of any particular work was required, but with such a street inspector there would be little use for an engineer. With a practical man like Mr. Wade in charge of the streets, the trouble and enormous loss which occurred last summer would have been impossible. Mayor Kendry must do his duty now that he has taken office or he will assuredly be left at home when he asks the people to again send him to Ottawa.

Amateur Theatricals.

The amateur theatricals, to be given on Tuesday next, promises to be very interesting. The caste is as appended—

Sudden Death.

Mr. D. Walker, Inspector of Public School, received a telegram on Friday conveying to him the sad intelligence that his brother, Mr. Archie Walker, of Duart, had died suddenly. Mr. Walker left for Duart Saturday morning. The deceased who was highly respected in the community where he resided, leaves a wife and one child to mourn his sudden demise.

OBSEQUIES AT CENTREVILLE.

Funeral of the Late Miss Ferguson, Who Was Murdered in Toronto.

A correspondent from Centreville writes:—Our community was deeply shocked on Saturday, 6th inst, when the news reached us of the tragic death of Miss Rachel Ferguson, book-keeper in the J. D. Nasmith Co., Ltd., Toronto, whose life was ended by the blow of a cruel assassin the evening before. The deceased was well and favorable known here, being a frequent visitor at the home of her uncle, Mr. John Rutherford, who, with her sister, Mrs. M. E. Fair, hastened to Toronto on receipt of the sad intelligence and joined the friends there in arranging for the last sad rites. Many friends gathered for an early service on Tuesday at the residence of Miss Ferguson's cousin, Mr. Twigg, with whom she resided during her stay in Toronto. Her brother Robert, and other sorrowing relatives and friends then accompanied the remains to Millbrook, where many others were waiting to receive them and the procession moved to Centreville Presbyterian church. Here the pastor conducted a most impressive service, being assisted by Rev. J. P. Scott, of St. John's Presbyterian church, Toronto, in whose congregation the deceased had been a faithful and efficient worker for the past six years. Mr. Scott spoke in touching terms of the affection entertained for the deceased by all who knew her, of her active interest in the work of his church and of the unselfishness and purity of her life. The very costly floral tributes sent by her fellow employees and friends bore silent testimony to these facts. An opportunity was given the friends to view her features for the last time and she was then laid to rest beside her mother in the cemetery adjoining the church.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The Times stated that a local hotel man had been fined $10 for violating the law. It should have read $20, and $8.25 costs.

Mr. J. J McBain this week shipped a carload of peas in double sacks direct from Peterborough to Capetown, they being sent by way of New York. They were of superior quality and are intended for the use of the British army in South Africa.

A grand carnival is being given in the Keene Skating rink on Friday evening next. A leagur hockey match will take place the same evening between the Keene and Lakefield teams.

Several members of Mr. Crane's choir of St. Paul's church will assist in the selection of "An English Hunting Scene," which will be given at the band concert in the market hall on Friday evening next.

A number of Masons, including Bros. Shaw, R. E. Wood, H. C. Winch, Wm. Thompson, W. E. Conway, Geo. I. Rozel, and W. Stocker, attended the installation of officers of A. F. and A. M., at Havelock on Friday night.

Mr. Wm. Taylor entertained the members of the Sons of England band at his home on Friday night. The affair was in the form of an old-time English dinner and was heartily enjoyed by all. The remainder of the evening was spent in song and speech-making, and Mr Taylor was given a hearty vote of thanks.

The following is the vital statistics for Lakefield for the year 1899, supplied by Dr. Hell—Births 28, marriages 18, deaths 21. The death and marriage rate is the largest that the clerk has ever received.

Nominating will be held in the town hall, Lakefield, on Monday, Jan. 22, 1900, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of nominating two councillors for the said village for the year 1900.

In an account of the poultrymen's banquet at the National we omitted to mention the decorations, which were arranged by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, and which were referred to in flattering terms by many prominent persons present.

CHURCH NOTES.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was dispensed at St. Andrew's Church yesterday morning. In the evening the pastor spoke on the subject of "The New Cart."

In St. Paul's church the sacrament was observed yesterday morning.

Ven. Archdeacon Allen of Millbrook, officiated at all services in St. John's church yesterday. Rev. J. C. Davidson preaching anniversary sermons at Baillieboro.

Rev. R. P. Bowles, M.A., of the Metropolitan church, Toronto, has kindly consented to give the address at the annual meeting at the Peterbrough Branch of the Bible Society to be held on Wednesday, Jan. 31st, in St. Paul's church.

Miss Munn, of St. Thomas, sang in the Charlottee street church yesterday morning.

Rev. J. C. Davidson will be absent on Monday and Tuesday, at Uxbridge, having been invited to preach before the Rural Deanery of East York.

Rev. Mr. Shorey preached yesterday at the dedication of the new Methodist cuhrch at Madoc. Mr. Shorey began his ministry in that town.

PERSONALS.

Mr. Blezard, son of Mr. T. Blezard, the popular M. P. in East Peterborough, is taking course at the Peterborough Business College.

Mr. Parker Crossley is taking a course at Albert College, Belleville.

Mr. Will Shanahan, of the Board of Trade, Buffalo, who has been visiting his cousins, the Misses McCabe, Ashburnham, returned home on Saturday.

From Africa.

Mrs. F. W. Miller received on Saturday a handsome little card from her son, Corporal Tom Miller, of the 1st Battalion Scots Guards, now serving in South Africa. On the card is a picture of the flag or colors of the battalion and inscribed thereon are the names of the engagements the Scots Guards have been in for many years back. They include such names as Talavera, Peninsula, Alma, Sebastapool, Telelkbir, Lincelles, Barrossa, Waterloo, Inkerman, Egypt, and Egypt, 1882. On the card are also the words, "From Tom to Mother, * * *" The card was posted in South Africa on Dec. 2, 1899, but no letter came with it.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Curling.

About sixty rinks from the different Toronto clubs entered for the Walker cup competition for single rinks. The first draw was played off on Friday afternoon and night. We notice among the rinks that were knocked out the first round was one composed of Vernon McGill, W. Crooks, C. McGill and H. M. Allan, skip.

The Granites, owing to the desertions of a number of third players, have had to re-organize. The rinks have been arranged as follows—

H Cluxton	F C Napier
D Walker	E Clarry
W G Morrow	R C McHarrie
G E Whiten, skip.	W D Parker, sp
2	6
Rev W L Armitage	R Sheehy

Messrs. W. G. Ferguson and Dickson Davidson have been elected Tankard skips for the Thistles and for the annual matches between Lindsay and Peterborough Messrs. Knagman, Belleghem and Ferguson were chosen.

Hockey.

This week will be a great one for hockeyists in Kingston. There will be games in each of the three series on the first three nights of the week.

We hope the game to-night will be started sharp on time. People don't want to be kept waiting in a cold rink.

There should be a big crowd at the rink to-night to see the game between Peterborough seniors and Osgood. Hall. Puck will be faced at 8.30.

Keene beat Lakefield on the latter's own ice last night by a score of 8 to 5. This game was in the Trent Valley League D. Kennedy made a good referee.

Another game in the same league was also played last night at Campbellford, when the home team managed to beat Norwood out by a score of 8 to 6.

Osgoode seems to be practicing hard for their game with Peterborough. They have had a practice match with a city club every day or night during the past week. They say they have a crackerjack of a goal keeper in White, of Welland. We will see to-night.

We notice that Hubert McBain is playing with Upper Canada College.

The Ring.

Kid McKoy saved his bacon by the skin of his teeth on Friday night in New York. Choynski had him going in the second round, but his own time keeper pulled the gong 40 seconds before the time of the round was really up, and it gave the Kid time to rally for the next round, in which a lucky punch put his opponent out.

Down a Well

A rather unusual incident occurred on Saturday evening at the farm of Mr. Scully, next to Jackson's park. A colt which had through the carelessness of some boys, got out of the stable, fell into an unfinished well, which is about thirty-two feet deep. The colt was missed about four o'clock, and after half an hour's diligent search was discovered at the bottom of the well in about four feet of water. Two ladders were fastened together and let down, and Harry Scully descended and wound a chain around the colt just back of the shoulders a rope was also fastened to each forefoot and the chain attached to a windlass. By the united strength of three men at the windlass and several at the ropes they succeeded in drawing the half frozen animal to the top. Twice they managed to get it to the edge of the well, only to see it slide in again. The third time, however, they succeeded in getting it safely landed. The horse was unable to stand when taken out, but after a thorough rubbing and being warmly blanketed it recovered and proceeded to eat as well as ever. The only marks detected were a small cut on the lower hip and a patch of skin off the left eye. Considering that there only seven men and the usual accompaniment of youngsters, they did exceedingly well to get the unfortunate animal out by a quarter past eight.

Non-Coms. Meet.

The non-commissioned officers of the Battalion held their first meeting in the new rooms in the opera house block on Saturday evening, when the following officers were elected—

Honorary President—Sergt.-Major Brittan.

President—Col.-Sergt.-Sergt. J. W. Edwards.

Sec.-Treas—Col.-Sergt. R. E. Layfield.

Hon. Chaplain—Rev. J. C. Davidson.

Executive Committee—Staff. Sergt. S. Sharpe, Staff Sergt. W. F. Green, Sergt. Stelhem, Sergt. Cameron and Corporal Cottrill.

Raising Fowl

One of our esteemed local boiler-plate contemporaries publishes a long article on the subject of raising fowl The editor of this great family journal has a crude idea that to "raise chickens successfully two things are indispensible—a dark lantern and a moonless night. Of course a neighbor's hen coop is also a necessity. The paper referred to goes on to say that the fowl intended for market should be starved 24 years before being killed. It is quite evident that the editor of our contemporary has been keeping bad hours—the banquet on Friday night probably being too much for him. Or, what is still more probable, like the majority of editors, he knows so little about roast turkey and stewed chicken that he fell into the error quite innocently. No, my dear old boy, if you want prime chicken you must not starve it more than two weeks at most before killing it. Twenty-four years is too long to wait on an empty stomach.

LITTLE TUGELA CROSSED BY BRITISH TROOPS.

Boer Force Asserted to be Larger Than Combined Forces of Buller and White—Free State Has Now Called Out Every Available Man.

London, Jan. 15

The Duke of Marlborough, who volunteered for service in South Africa, will sail for Cape Town on Saturday next.

London, Jan. 15

Major General Sir Frederick Carrington, the well known South African officer, until now commander of the Belfast district, has been ordered to South Africa.

London, Jan. 16

A despatch to the Daily Mail, dated Saturday, Jan. 13, from Lorenzo Marquez, says—"President Kruger has issued a proclamation ordering all burghers to the front. The Volkstein, the Transvaal official organ, suggests that the ment the British cross the border the gold industry should be irretrievably destroyed.

President Kruger also issued a circular dated Jan. 8, to Boer commandants and burghers urging them to show more energy in the Transvaal cause. He quotes Psalm xxxiii, verse 7, as God has given instructions to the burghers, and says that the British have fixed their faith in Psalmlxxxiii. He also quotes Psalm lxxxix, verses 1 and 14, and asserts that he has searched the Bible without being able to find any other mode which can be followed by the Boers, who must fight in the name of the Lord.

Commandeering is proceeding busily in Pretoria, where the town guard is exchanging Mausers for Martinis, as the former are badly needed at the front. It is said that there are nearly 3,000 British prisoners in Pretoria.

London, Jan. 16

The War Office has published the following despatch from Lord Roberts, dated Cape Town, Jan. 15, 6.20 p. m.—"French reports that reconnaisance yesterday—Sunday—shelled the Colesburg road bridge. No casualties. Returned today. Methuen and Gatacre no change."

London, Jan. 16

The Standard gives prominence to the following despatch, dated Saturday, Jan 13, from Durban—"A man who has just arrived here from Springfield says that the British column proceeding to the relief of Ladysmith has crossed the Little Tugela. When he left it was facing the Boer position on the Big Tugela and a Howitzer was shelling the Boer trenches."

He also says that 270 wagons laden with commissariat stores for Ladysmith had left Frere and it was expected that the column would join hand with General White, Monday evening.

The traction engines have been doing excellent work in hauling heavy wagons out of holes and swamps. This they accomplish with the greatest ease.

"The British patrols have discovered parties in the direction of Ennerisdale, between Frere and Estcourt."

Cape Town, Jan. 13.

There is good reasons to believe that the statement that Sir Charles Warren with 10,000 men has gone toward Weenan is correct and we may expect important news shortly. Reports have been received here that dysentery is very rife in Ladysmith. Everything is phenomenally quiet at Sterkstroom.

London, Jan. 16

The correspondent of the Times at Lorenzo Marques, telegraphing last Saturday says: ;;The Free States has now called out every available man including the leading merchants who have expected to enjoy immunity."

London, Jan. 16, 4 a.m.

Gen. Buller's latest authentic word as to what he and his 30,000 men are doing was wired from Springfield after his first step forward.

Striving to think out the unknown, London is confused by surmise and rumor and disquieted by suspense. Mr. Spencer Wilkinson the lucid military expert on the Morning Post asserts that the Boer force in Northern Natal is larger than General Bullers and Sir George White's together, so that the Boers are able to leave a force around Ladysmith larger than that within the town and yet to oppose General Buller with a force superior to his own.

CANADIANS AGAIN AT WORK.

Modder River, Jan. 11.—Gen. Babington, with two regiments of Lancers, the Victorian Mounted Rifles and a battery of horse artillery, left here on the morning on January 7, and crossed the Free State border Tuesday morning.

Simultaneously other movements were made. A column under Col. Pilcher went from Belmont to the south of General Babington's route, while a portion of the garrison of Klokfontein and Honey Nest Kloof, under Major Bryne, advanced toward Jacobsdal.

Gen. Babington penetrated twelve miles, and his scouts twenty. They saw no signs of armed Boers. The farm houses were found empty, the occupants having had news of the advance and gone further into the interior. The British bivouacked at Ramden, They burned three farm houses, the property of Lubbe, one of the Boer leaders. Yesterday they swept around southward, returning here to-day. Nothing was accomplished except a reconnaissance.

Col. Pilcher came into touch with General Babington, and they returned to Belmont.

Major Bryne reconnoitered the hills for about four miles from Jacobsdal and saw seven hundred Boers.

PILCHER'S RECONNAISSANCE.

London, Jan. 15.—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper prints the following despatch dated Belmont, Cape Colony, Jan. 10:

"Col. Pilcher with 400 Canadians and Queenslanders and a battery of Royal Horse Artillery made a reconnaissance yesterday and advanced ten miles into the Free State.

"They sighted a patrol of the enemy at Karrieltagte. The Boers fled, abandoning their rifles and ammunition."

This afternoon the War Office issued the following from Lord Roberts, dated Cape Town, January 13, 3.30 p.m.:

"Methuen's cavalry reconnaissance returned on January 11. Went twenty five miles into the Free State. Country clear of enemy, except patrols."

IN THE ENEMY'S COUNTRY.

Orange River, Jan. 12.—General Wood for the first time in this campaign, has established a post in the enemy's country. With a force of all arms he took up a position Jan. 6th at Zoutpans Drift, on the north side of the Orange River in the Free State.

MAFEKING AGAIN BOMBARDED

London, Jan. 15.—A despatch from Pretoria says the Federal forces recommenced the bombardment of Mafeking during the morning of Friday, Jan. 12.

WHERE IS GENERAL WARREN!

London, Jan. 15.—A special despatch from Cape Town, dated Friday January 12, evening announces that General Warren has crossed the Tugela river.

THE REPORT DISCREDITED.

Cape Town, Jan. 15.—A despatch to the Argus, dated Friday last, January 12, says: "The authorities have received news that General Warren has crossed the Tugela and occupied a strong position north of the river."

This report has been current here since yesterday, but is discredited in official circles.

BOERS IN ZULULAND.

Durban, Jan. 13.—There is a Boer commando in Seambane country, Zululand, within a day's march of the sea, with wagons. It is believed to be waiting for supplies and ammunition secretly landed near St. Lucia Bay.

FRENCH'S MOVEMENT FAILED.

London, Jan. 15.—The War Office issued at midnight a despatch from Field Marshal Roberts, dated Cape Town, Sunday, Jan. 14, 8.50 p.m., saying —

"There is no change in the situation today."

Simultaneously the following from Lord Roberts, dated Sunday, was issued—

"All quiet at Modder River."

"French reconnoitered around the enemy's left flank on Jan. 10. Advanced from Slumger's farm on Jan. 11, with cavalry and horse artillery, to bombard Boer laager, east of Colesberg Junction, but was unable to outflank the enemy. Reconnaissance of cavalry and mounted infantry pushed north of Bastard's Nek and examined country north of ridge.

"Gatacre reports no change.

"All well on December 28 at Mafeking."

A THIRD CORPS IS ACCEPTED.

Lord Lansdowne Agrees to the Magnanimous Offer of Lord Strathcona.

London, Jan. 15.—The Associated Press learns that Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War, accepted on Saturday the offer of Lord Strathcona, Canadian High Commissioner in London, to provide, distinct from the Canadian contingents, a force of at least 400 mounted men from Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia, and to arm, equip and convey them to South Africa at his own expense. All will be expert marksmen, rough riders and scouts. It is estimated that the offer will involve an expenditure of £200,000. The War Office regards Lord Strathcona's proposal as an extraordinary proof of colonial patriotism.

AWAITING THE LETTER.

Ottawa, aJn. 15.—Hon. F. W. Borden said last night that the offer of Lord Strathcona to send four hundred men to South Africa at his own expense had not yet been accepted, but the strong probability is that it will be. Lord Strathcona's cabled offer arrived some days ago, coupled with the request that nothing he said regarding it until further information by letter should have been received.

THE WEST EAGER.

Victoria, Jna. 15.—It is probably correct to say that in no quarter of the British Empire to-day is to be found a British Empire to-day is to be found a community more imbued with feelings of the highest patriotism than Victoria. When the news was announced that British Columbia's offer had been accepted, as had also that of Lord Strathcona to raise a Canadian mounted contingent, it aroused the patriotic spirit among Victorians to an unprecedented degree.

It is quite certain that the next few days will witness a perfect deluge of offers pouring in upon Lieut.-Col. Gregory, the officer commanding the 5th Regiment, who is himself most anxious to go to the front, having been twice disappointed in his endeavor to take a hand in the fray in oSu tAhfrica. Major Hibben is another of those anxious to serve. Nearly all of the rank and file are stirred by similar feelings of patriotism.

THE CITY OF THE DEAD.

ANNUAL MEETING OF LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY CO.

President's Address—Reports Presented—Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company took place yesterday, when the annual reports were presented.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

To the Shareholders of the Little Lake Lake Cemetery Company—

The Directors of the Company beg to present their report for the past yaar as follows—

The improvements which have been made at the cemetery during the past year are fully set forth in the Superintendent's report, which will be presented at this meeting.

The Directors have been enabled to purchase two debentures of the Town of Peterborough for $1,000 each.

The total amount of debentures held by the Company is now $7,000, forming the nucleus of a fund which will be absolutely requisite for the maintenance and care of the cemetery when th lots havee all been disposed of.

The total receipts for the year from all sources (including the receipts for sale of lots), exceeded expenditure (other than the $2,000 invested in debentures) by the sum of $1,240.

A detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures of the year will appear in the auditors' report to this meeting.

Respectfully submitted.

HENRY DENNE,
President.

James A. Hall, John S. Hall, Auditors.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

To the President, Directors and Shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company—

Gentlemen,—I beg to submit the following report of the improvements made at the cemetery for th eyear ending Dec. 31st, 1899.

In the spring 60 trees and ornamental shrubs were planted through the grounds The caterpillars were so numerous that it was necessary to procure a spraying outfit, which was effectual in preventing the destruction of the trees and the foliage.

The old basin at the fountain, which the frost heaved and cracked every winter, being cement plastered on gravel, was removed and a fountain put in and concreted, which will prevent any trouble in future.

The avenue at the entrance to Maple avenue leading north on Maple avenue continuing to Oak avenue on the east side of the chapel, and Chapel avenue around to Entrance avenue; on these avenues the macadam was broken up and regraded and packed and a coat of very fine gravel applied, and is now, with the traffic and rolling, as smooth as a board. Also 4 catch basins have been made to keep the water from cutting gullies during a rain storm.

In section B and C 400 feet of deep drains have been made and laid with tile. In section B, where the paths were cut leaving a deep bank on each side, it was impossible to keep them in good repair, for the effects of water washing them out during a rain storm, have been refilled and sodded over, which makes an improvement in the landscape and will save expense in future. In sections B, C, D, E, K and Q the foot stones and lot markers which were standing out of the ground from two to ten inches, have been set down low enough to allow the mowing machines to pass over them and the letters cut on the top and painted black.

Also the grave mounds that were high have been lowered to an even height, an improvement which well repays for the expenditure.

With the consent of the lot owners 10 fences and railings have been removed during the year, leavin gin the cemetery now only 7 fences and railings.

I would recommend drains to be made the coming season in the four walks from Range 12 to Range 14 in section A, which will complete the drain in this section.

I append hereunto my financial statement for the year, ending Dec. 31st, '99.

W. H. FOORD,
Superintendent.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The following officers were elected—Messrs. H. Denne; J. J. Lundy; W. H. Moore; C. Stapleton; B. Shortly; Dr. Burnham; R. M. Dennistoun; James Stevenson and T. S. A. Hay.

Managing Committee—The President and Messrs. J. Stevenson; T. S. A. Hay; C. Stapleton and B. Shortly.

At a subsequent meeting of directors Mr. Denne was re-elected President, and Mr. E. A. Peck, Sec.-Treas. Mr. Foord was also re-appointed caretaker.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE BOERS IN SORE DISTRESS.

White Dealt Them a Severe Blow, They Lost Heavily and Were in Despair.

London, Jan. 15.—The Times has the following special to-day—

Lorenzo Marquez, Jan. 11.—A leading Transvaaler states that the Boers are determined to make another desperate effort to compel the capitulation of Ladysmith, and are sanguine of success.

The tone of the Transvaal papers indicate that the authorities at Pretoria are alarmed at the seriousness of the position on the western and southern borders of the Free State. Last week they despatched 5,000 men from Natal to help in resisting the attacks of Major-Generals Gatacre and French.

The British consul has issued a notice calling upon British subjects to refrain from enlisting in the military services of the republics and indulging in treasonable conduct, warning them against trading with either republic or any subjects thereof resident within those states. Consul Pott has protested against the terms of the notice on the plea that it constitutes an interference with the sovereign rights of Portugal.

BOERS IN DISTRESS.

The Times has the following special today—

Ladysmith, Thursday, Jan. 11.—(By heliograph to Weenen).—The enemy has been very quiet since Saturday. Native scouts report great distress in the enemy's laager over their casualties. The Boer seige guns are fired spasmodically, but there is no regular bombardment.

The spirit of the garrison is greatly improved by the successful result of Saturday's battle. The enemy left 100 dead on the slopes of our defences, and were removing their injured all the next day. Their losses must have been very heavy. An officer who was a prisoner with the enemy during the engagement states that at the end of the day they were absolutely demoralized.

Boers Lost Heavy.

The Boer losses in the Ladysmith battle are closely estimated at 1,400 killed and wounded. Commandant De Villiers and other Free State leaders are reported to have been killed.

The Boer version of the battle, which comes through Dalziel's Agency, pays a glowing tribute to the gallantry of both sides. The attack, it says, was most determined, and the defence equally tenacious. The British were most strongly entrenched, and walls of their redoubts were skillfully loopholed.

Hand to Hand.

The combat was so close that the rifles were frequently fired at arm-s length between the opposing forces. It was, in fact, a hand to hand encounter, and the men on both sides are reported to have fought like demons. The horror and bewilderment of the scene presented a picture without a parallel in the experience of those who took part in the encounter. The Boer losses were about one thousand killed and wounded, the Free Staters being the heaviest sufferers.

A COMBINED FORWARD MOVEMENT BY BRITISH

British Officials Inclined to Credit Report That Warren Has Crossed Tugela River.

GEN. WHITE MAY BE RELIEVED BY THIS TIME.

General French's Forces Succeed in Dragging a Fifteen-Pounder Up a Mountain 1,000 Feet in Height, and Fire Upon Boers Who Scatter.

London, Jan. 15.—Up to the present the reported crossing of the Tugela River by Gen. Warren's division remains but rumor. Nevertheless, the whole tenor of such news as has dribbled in from South Africa during the last forty-eight hours indicates that a combined forward movement of a comprehensive character is proceeding It is not necessary to believe the unconfirmed stories of the Boers being in full retreat from Colenso, because it has been learned that a column is proceeding via Weenen to Helpmakaar to cut off their retreat.

Boers Abandon Positions.

At the same time credible information from many different sources indisputably points to momentous changes in the disposition of the Republics' forces. Advices from Pietermaritzburg, dated Saturday, Jan. 13, say that since their defeat on Jan. 6, the Boers have been removing their guns from the position south of Ladysmith. The same despatch confirms the report that the 13th Hussars reached Grobler's Kloof without meeting the Boers. As the trenches at Grobler's Kloof were perhaps the strongest position held by the Burghers, their vacation has considerably astonished the British.

Ladysmith Expects Relief.

Merchants of Pietermaritzburg have received messages from Ladysmith saying: "Bring up jam," etc., indicating that their Ladysmith agents anticipated an immediate opening of communications, while Ladysmith also heliographed the belief prevalent there on Jan. 13, that the Boers were moving and concentrating their forces elsewhere.

Buller All Ready To-day.

As corroborative of the British activity in the direction of the relief of Ladysmith, the Associated Press is able to say a despatch has been received in London from Gen. Buller to the effect that he expected that all the dispositions for a synchronous movement of the various columns against the besiegers would be completed this morning.

Under these circumstances, it is considered quite probable that the advance on the beleagured towns has commenced, and that fighting is progressing. Optimists go so far as to say it is expected that Ladysmith will be relieved to-night, if all goes well. The military men are divided in opinion as to whether Gen. Buller is at Springfield or personally directing the flank movement from Weenen.

A Hopeful Feeling.

The officials are inclined to credit the report that the British have crossed the Tugela River in that direction, although there is no confirmation of the report, and, altogether, there is a more hopeful feeling in official circles.

There is little news of importance from elsewhere. General French's forces have succeeded in dragging a fifteen-pounder to the summit of the steep, rock Coleskop, a thousand feet above the surrounding plain, and on Jan. 12 they successfully routed a Boer camp on the plaint three miles away from Sterkstroom.

Boers Ganer a Crop.

An interesting item of news is that 300 Boers escorted a party of reapers, have successfully garnered all the crops within two miles of the colonial camp at Bird's River, the British force being too weak to interfere.

A despatch from Pretoria says the Federal forces recommenced the bombardment of Mafeking during the morning of Friday, Jan. 12.

Crusade on War Office.

A partial development of the movement referred to in these despatches on Jan. 12, though by no means the main objective hinted at, can be recorded to-day in the formation of a strong committee of South Africans and ex-officials, with Lord Loch, the former Governor of Cape Colony, and British High Commissioner, as president.

The object is the remedying of the defects of the War Office. When the War Office sanctioned the formation of a corps of South Africans, acquainted with the topography of the country and the Dutch and Kaffir languages, the committee insisted that they must choose their own officers. The War Office demurred, but finally yielded.

Rushing to Enlist.

Consequently, prominent South Africans, crack shots and aquainted with every stream and kopje, are flocking to join the contingent. As a prominent enlisted man said to a representative of the Associated Press; 'We are not going to fight for promotion or the Victoria Cross. We simply want to meet the Boers on their own ground, and according to our own methods. Our object is to defeat the enemy, and not run splendid but useless risks."

EXPERTS CONFOUNDED.

Several military experts and newspapers prophets who informed the world last Sunday morning that General White's situation at Ladysmith was desperate, and his army might be swallowed up at any time, were confounded with unusual irony at noon by the announcement that he had thumped the Boers.

The same blooming idiots six weeks ago were expecting White's surrender daily.

Any one who stops to think that 800 irregulars at Mafeking and a couple of thousand men in Kimberley have been standing off large Boer forces for months will realize how much likelihood there is of any generally successful attack upon White's force at Ladysmith of 3,000 first-class troops and sixty guns.

White may be hard pressed at some point occasionally. His position calls for defence of territory eight or nine miles long by six wide. But as to any single day's fighting being dangerous to his force—humbug.

It is not that all military experts and newspaper writers are idiots. Only a limited number among thousands make such breaks whenever somebody in the British army gets hurt. The reason we hear so much from the idiots is that their alarm makes interesting reading when there is little else going. Must not the public have "war news?" And if Gen. White or Gen. Buller or Gen. French or the censors will only send or permit ten or twenty lines about a battle, why we must put big type above it, and then proceed to fill up the hungry public with a few columns of the stuff by the military and newspaper experts which is telegraphed to us instead of the real thing.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

If the late Mr. Elias Burnham were to re-appear he would wonder where we are at, with a mortgage debt of $225,000 and a couple of dozen empty stores in town. We imagine the first thing he might do might be to take a few of last year's council away into some quiet corner and kill them.

•• • ••

Great Britain has the "open door" in South Africa, and it's a trap door at that.

•• • ••

What a Boer old Joubert is to persist in paying attention to Ladysmith when he knows full well that it is very annoying to her!

•• • ••

Toronto seems to be infested with burglars, footpads and murderers. Hardly a day passes without some dastardly outrage or attempted crime of violence being reported. No leniency should be shown persons convicted of such crimes; the law does not provide a penalty too severe.

•• • ••

Appropos of a row with one or more of the European powers it may be remarked that excepting about 5,000 from India's 220,000, the British empire has not weakened by so much as one regular soldier any colonial post or possession. All the troops that have gone to South Africa have been from the forces ordinarily stationed in Great Britain and Ireland, except in the case of a few from Gibraltar or Malta, who in turn are replaced by other regulars from home.

•• • ••

What a pity Hugh John hadn't accepted that commission in the first contingent? Judged by the way he routed the Greenway majority and captured the Manitoba laager, he would ere this have had old Cronje's scalp at his belt, relieved Kimberley, and be now hurrying up to Pretoria to pay his respects to President Kruger and take over the reins of government in the South African republic.

•• • ••

Ten million dollars a week is a figure given for the present British war expenditure. It will be costing Boerland a pretty figure too. Boerland's means are limited, and in war even of the cheapest side, money makes the mare go.

•• • ••

It is too late now, so far as the second Canadian contingent for service in Africa is concerned, to point out a mistake which has been made. But there may be a third call, and when it comes it is to be hoped that none but single men should have been enlisted in the first and second contingents; there were plenty of single men ready — even anxious to enlist; and the married men should have been refused. The absentmindedness of married men costs the country much money unnecessarily.

"THE SLASHERS"

Wolfe Fell at the Head of a Lost Battalion

Of the last battalion, captured by the Boers in the South African war, the first battalion of the Gloucestershire regiment has done much fighting in America. It was at the head of the regiment that Wolfe fell on the Plains of Abraham before Quebec. The regiment's association with Wolfe is commemorated by a black thread in the lace of the officers. In the revolutionary war the Gloucester won the nickname of "The Slashers" by driving in one of Washington's outposts at White Plains. Having exhausted their ammunition they drew their short swords which they carried, and charged, carrying the outpost. In 1801 the regiment fought under Abercrombie at the battle of Alexandria, and being attacked in front and rear, repulsed the enemy. It was there that they gained the privilege of wearing the regimental badge on the back as well as on the front of their hats. Illnatured people say that the Gloucesters are the original of Kipling's "Fore and After."

This regiment, long known as the Twenty-eight foot, dates from 1694, when Sir John Gibson was appointed colonel, and it was employed for some years in the West Indies and Newfoundland. The gallant old corps was present at Ramilies., and gained its first honors at that great battle, after which it went to Spain and was almost destroyed at the bloody battle of Almanza. After being stationed for several years in Ireland, the regiment went to Flanders and was present at Fontenoy, where it was commanded by Lord George Sackville. After its Canadian service in what is known in America as the French and Indian war the regiment took part in the conquest of Havana.

The regiment was present at the capture of Minorca, and at Cadiz in 1906.

"The Slashers" served under Sir John Moore in Portugal, and took part in the battle of Corunna. Later on they were at the passage of the Douro, and the battles of Talavera and Busaco, at the defence of Torres Vedras, at the siege of Badajos, and suffered heavy loss at the desperate fight at Albuera.

The Twenty-eight formed part of Wellington's army in Portugal in 1811, being present at Almaraz, the siege of Burgos, the battle of Vittoria, in the actions in the Pyrenees and on the Nivelle and Nive, and at the battle of Toulouse.

Among the honors of the first battalion Gloucester regiment are Waterloo, Alma, Inkerman, and Sebastopol.

It is curious to note that the Gloucestershires and the Royal Irish Fusiliers have been captured before. The former were in the hard-fought battle of Almaza, in 1707, when the British were beaten by the force under the Duke of Berwick, son of James II, and Arabella Churchill, sister of the Duke of Marlborough. The Gloucestershires were all but destroyed and the remnant captured. The Royal Irish Fusiliers consists of the old eighty-seventh and the old eighty-ninth. It was the eighty-seventh that was captured. The regiment had been raised barely two years when it was sent to form a part of the garrison with the Dutch at Bergen-op-Zoom. Apparently the regiment was no more popular with the Dutch then than it is now, for the Hollanders opened the gates of the town and the Fusiliers found themselves at the mercy of their former allies, reinforced by a strong French force. There was no choice but to capitulate.

BRITISH DAUM HORSE.

Knows Every Bugle Call as Well as Soldiers

The position filled by a drum major, swinging a mace and arrayed in bearskin cap and gorgeous uniform, marching at the head of an infantry band, is, in the British cavalry, occupied by what is known as the drum horse.

As in the case of his counterpart of the infantry, the drum horse is selected for his imposing appearance, and is generally either white or piebald in color.

This being satisfactorily passed upon by a critical board of officers, the instruction of the drum horse is most carefully taken in hand. He is first introduced, ocularly, to the kettle-drums, being permitted to observe and smell those musical instruments to his complete satisfaction. Then they are gently beaten at a little distance, being brought nearer and nearer as the horse evinces less signs of nervousness and are at last passed over his shoulders, where they are to remain in position when in uniform, being beaten with increasing vigor until he becomes accustomed to the sound.

This accomplished satisfactorily, he is taught to understand the bugle calls, so that, as in Mr. Kipling's tale of The Route of the White Hussars, he may come to know more about cavalry tactics than any officer or man in the regiment.

In this connection there is a story told of a certain drum horse belonging to a regiment of Bengal native cavalry upon active service, whose original drum horse having, by the "fortunes of war," met with a soldier's death, another horse was taken from the ranks of the chargers to occupy the distinguished place. For some time the new drum horse conducted himself with all the dignity demanded of his position, until the hour came for his regiment to go into action. Upon such occasions it is customary for the band to lead for a short distance, and then, previous to the actual charge, wheel to the right or left, as the situation may require, and join the staff.

Now, the new horse of the Bengal cavalry understood the bugle call to charge well enough, but either did not or would not comprehend the maneuver to permit the troops to pass, and persisted in going forward, while the drummer on his back, not relishing the idea of attacking the enemy with only sticks in his hands, was equally determined to bring the beast to a halt.

Thus the dispute between man and horse progressed, while the cheering trooters dashed past. As the last horse swept by, the drum horse, possibly disgusted with what he believed to be the cowardice of his rider, kiched up his heels in one might effort, and flinging the drummer out of his saddle, carried the silver kettledrums into the fight on his own account.

It is satisfactory to be told that he eventually came out of the scrimmage unharmed, having done useful service by bearing an officer, whose own horse had been shot, as a remount during the rest of the fight.

A Terrible Blizzard.

Gordo, N.M., Jan. 13.—Details of the blizzard which swept over Southwestern New Mexico Tuesday and Wednesday are coming in and they indicate that it was the severest storm ever experienced in the region. A stretch of territory 50 miles in width, with White Oaks and Nagales for the centre, seemed to suffer the most, although the severity of the storm was fully felt throughout the Sacramento Mountain region. The velocity of the wind was terrible, all roads and trails were obliterated, and the driving snow made it impossible for travellers to see their way in the storm. When the storm abated wagons which had been abandoned were found strewn all over the section. Several fatalities are reported, including the driver of the White Oaks and Lincoln stage. It is feared that many sheep herders lost their lives. Many thousands of heads of stock perished, and it is estimated that the loss will aggregate over half a million dollars.

Deceived the People.

Winnipeg, Jan. 13.—It is asserted that the finances of the province are in a much worse shape than represented by the Greenway Government. School grants amounting to some $35,000 have to be paid, and there are also election expenses and other current accounts chargeable to the year 1899, aggregating a deficit of some $200,000.

The provincial account at its bank is considerably overdrawn. One report places the overdraft at $65,000. Previous to leaving office the Greenway Government concluded several large railway contracts the particulars of which will be revealed in an investigation which is to be made.

Government Will Wait.

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—It is not the intention of the Government to legislate at the coming session of Parliament in regard to benevolent societies. The constitutional point has been raised that jurisdiction to legislate respecting associations of this class rests exclusively with the provinces. Until this point is settled the UFederal Government is not disposed to interfere.

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these, there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five unfilled calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

236 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

Chances to Cut Throats That Are Not Often Taken Advantage Of—Narrow Escapes From Serious Mishaps—A Father's Dream.

"Did it ever strike you," asked the little barber, "how easy it would be for the man that shaves you to kill you?"

The man in the chair sat up quickly and looked carefully at the barber, who was feeling the edge of the razor with one finger. The barber smiled to reassure his customer and said:

"It seems a queer question, I know, but it is a wonder to me that there are not a number of people killed in that way every year. It would be the easiest thing in the world for the barber as he wielded his razor to make one sweep with it and sever the jugular vein, and you would be dead almost on the instant. Suppose, for instance, that the barber should go insane. There would be nothing to prevent his doing such a thing, and you would have no warning nor any opportunity to save yourself.

"There is always a chance of a serious accident happening to the man in the chair. I have seen a number of such accidents and have a horror of even nicking the man I am shaving. In fact, such an occurrence makes me feel out of sorts for the rest of the day. It was only a few days ago that I almost had an accident that gave me a great fright and completely unnerved me. I was shaving a young man, and in passing from one side of the chair to the other a button of my waistcoat caught in his hair. It pulled a trifle, and he moved his head suddenly just as I went to put the blade to his face. I came within an ace of slashing him, and only a quick jump back saved him. The perspiration stood out on me, and I had to call one of the other men to finish shaving my customer.

"But the worst accident I ever saw in a barber shop occurred while I was working in a small town in the west. One of the patrons of the place was a business man whose 8-year-old daughter was lying at the point of death. Her father put in most of his time at her bedside. One afternoon while she was asleep he came in here to get shaved. He was so exhausted through lack of sleep that he fell asleep immediately after he had taken his seat in the chair next to the one behind which I was at work.

"He dreamed that some one had come into the place to tell him that his child had died. With a cry of alarm he started up just as the barber laid the razor against his neck. Into the flesh it sank. He was not yet thoroughly awake, and as he imagined that some one was holding him back from his child he threw out his hand to free himself, and his fingers closed over the blade of the razor. So dazed was he that he could not realize what had happened, but sat there in the chair, with the blood streaming from his throat and fingers.

"The man who had done the cutting was the first to act, although half crazed. He hurried for a doctor while we stanched the flow of blood the best we knew how. Even as the doctor was at work sewing up the wounds a messenger came to say that the little girl had died suddenly in the greatest agony, calling for her father just before she died. He was under the influence of ether at the time and did not know, but afterward, when he heard of the circumstances attending her death, he insisted that he had heard her call as he lay there asleep in the chair and that it was her cry that had caused him to make his sudden movement.

"For years after the accident he continued to shave in the same shop where it had occurred, and it was never mentioned. He carried a reminder of it for the remainder of his life. In addition to the scar on his throat, the fingers of his right hand were all drawn up and useless.

"Sudden movements while in the barber's chair are always apt to be attended with serious results, and I could recall dozens of instances where it has been only the merest chance that has prevented serious if not fatal mishaps. Nine times out of ten where the person getting shaved receives a nick and lays the blame on the barber he should thank the wielder of the razor that it was no worse. The probabilities are that it was quick action by the barber that prevented a bad cut. A slight nick often would have been a case for the doctor or coroner were it not for the watchfulness of the barber. Here yesterday I happened to draw blood from a young fellow's face near his ear, and he made a great fuss about it, until I showed him that it was only the sudden withdrawal of the razor which resulted in the slight nick that prevented him losing a good part of his ear. Then he was grateful and thanked me, besides promising to be more careful in the future.

"But there are other ways the barber has of getting even," continued the little barber after relathering one side of his customer's face. "There is no need of his slashing a man. He can inflict injuries that will make his victim decidedly uncomfortable, and at the same time the latter will not be aware of what is being done." What the barber meant by this last remark his victim did not ask.—New York Sun.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

Making Them Is a Very Dangerous Trade—Perils That Beset the Manufacture of Nitroglycerine.

Nitroglycerin and its peculiarities are little known, even in localities where it is made. People generally give it a wide berth, and even a less number know how it is manufactured. Probably in no place in the United States is there such a great amount of the explosive used as in the Indiana oilfields, says The Philadelphia Press. Indiana has four nitroglycerin factories, and they are seldom visited by curious people.

The explosive is made from a composition of acids and glycerin. It is generally pale yellow in color, and quite colorless when pure. It is odorless, and has a sweet, pungent, aromatic flavor. If touched by one's tongue, or even brought into contact with the skin, it will produce a severe headache. A large tank, called an agitator, is where the fluid is mixed, and the mixture is composed of equal parts of nitric and sulphuric acids. Inside the tank are several paddles, like those of a churn, and it is here that the real danger exists. The paddles are put in operation and a steady stream of sweet glycerin is turned into a vat until 250 pounds are thoroughly mixed with the 1,500 pounds of acid. The chemicals coming in contact produce an intense heat, and in order to obviate the danger cold water is run through pipes encircling and running through the vat. At 85 degrees F. a red vapor, almost like fire, arises. If cutting off the supply of glycerin in the agitator does not lower the temperature, it is time to say farewell. Before 90 degrees are reached nothing but atoms of the structure and its contents are left.

Colonel William A. Meyers, of Bolivar, N.Y., was the man who made and exploded the first round of nitroglycerin in an oil well. He built the first factory in the United States, near Titusville, Pa., in 1868. Up to that time powder had been used to torpedo oil wells. It was then that an explosive that could be discharged under water was found in nitroglycerin. Colonel Myers' father was a Philadelphia chemist and taught his son how to make it.

The first well torpedoed was on Colonel Mills' lease, near Titusville, and the dharge consisted of on,y two and the charge consisted of only two pounds. Oil was worth $9 a barrel then, and a torpedo that would double the production of a well was worth almost what the maker chose to ask for it. Colonel Myers built 12 different factories in different parts of the oil regions from 1868 to 1885, when he retired from the business. Only one of the original factories stands intact to-day. Myers made several fortunes and spent his money like a prince, but, fortunately for him, he still has a snug sum laid by.

DISAGREEABLE TRAITS.

Sometimes They Impair the Usefulness of Otherwise Good Men.

Squire Granby was dead. The village people had gathered in the church to hear his funeral sermon, says The Youth's Companion. The old doctor, with his nephew, John, who was down from the city, sat in a back pew.

The minister told what everyone there knew to be the traith of the dead man. A faithful believer in Christ, a man of high integrity, in whose justice and honesty the whole community trusted, liberal to the poor, walking blameless under every moral law.

"Was all that true?" said John, as he and the doctor walked home.

"Every word of it."

"And yet," said the young man, "I got the impression the other day at the funeral that neither his neighbors nor his family felt his death very deeply. Indeed, I fancied I saw a look of relief on their faces."

The doctor was silent for a moment. "You are too shrewd an observer, Jack," he said. "The squire loved to manage. He was a busy, energetic man, and he thought it his duty to lash every man and woman who was not as busy and energetic as himself. His tongue was like a goad. He was a man, too, who never praised or encouraged anybody. His wife and children probably never heard a word of commendation from him in their lives, strive as they might.

"Then he complained incessantly of the weather, of his food, of the state of the church and the country; of all that his family did or did not do. When he came into the room you felt that a chilly fog had closed in upon you.

"And yet, in spite of these faults, the squire was faithful in his heart to his friends and to God. He probably never was conscious of these disagreeable traits, but they were so noticeable that his neighbors, and even his children and his wife, could not help a certain feeling of relief when he was gone."

"I wonder," said Jack, "if he knew, when he wakened in that other life, how depressing and unpleasant a Christian he had been in this?"

"And I wonder," said the doctor, "if there is no way for you and me to find out our petty faults—our disagreeable personal traits—in time to mend them here in this life?"

Prussia Makes Terms.

Berlin, Jan. 12.—It is rumored here that the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York, is to be remitted toP russia on condition that it will deposit with the Government the full policy reserve on Prussian policies, this deposit to be made in Prussian securities. If this deposit is made the Gtovernment will waive the requirement which calls for the disposal of the company's stocks, amounting in the case of the Mutual Life to $30,000,000. The New York Life Insurance Company, which was recently admitted to Prussia, was not called upon to deposit the full reserve, because it has agreed to dispose of all its stocks. Its deposit with the Government is therefore but half the amount required of the Mutual Life.

THE BOER'S GREAT SKILL

Learned Their Strategy in Other Wars.

THEY LACK GOOD GUNNERS

This is the Chies Weakness of the Army of the Burghers.

"Is the Boer a first-class fighting man?" asks Douglas Story in the London Mail. He had been the editor of the Boer paper, the Standard and Diggers' News, and his observations are considered of value.

He has yielded a superior intelligence and, perhaps, a deeper determination at Glencoe and Elandslaagte; but in no engagement has he proved himself a contemptible foe in courage or in tactics. Nor would we British have it otherwise. It is no part of the British character to depreciate an enemy, and, for their very stubbornness in opposing us, we today acclaim the Zulus, the Afghans, the Afridis and Dervishes as first-class fighting men. Has the Boer likewise earned a right to a place among the foemen worthy of our highest skill and most exalted courage?

The strength of the Boers forces is an unknown quantity. Shortly before the outbreak of hostilities I received a cable giving the field cornets' return at 52,000 men capable of bearing arms. At this time this was received by the British press as an exaggerated estimate, and it was only after careful calculation, and after consultation with the men best able to form an opinion, that I accepted its approximate accuracy. Events have proved that it was within the mark.

Three years ago the Transvaal under secretary for foreign affairs assured me that the Boer strength was 34,000 men armed with rifles. Dr. Leyd's more recent estimate is 35,000 burghers. The number and strength of the commandos now in the field prove that the British ante-war calculations greatly undervalued the Boer force. Today there cannot be less than 60,000 men in arms—no mean army of sharpshooters.

Boers Expert With the Rifle.

I used the word sharpshooter with intention. The idea has gone abroad that the Boer can no longer shoot straight; but this applied to the bulk of the burghers is a fallacy.

Uitlander critics—and published comment has been almost wholly confined to these—have judged the Boer race from the weaklings who have drifted into Johannesburg and the mining camps along the Rand. But these are no more representative of the nation than the Hooligans of of Blackfriars and Lambeth are typical of the great mass of the people throughout the length and breadth of England.

It needs a Selons, who has hunted by day with them and lain by the camp fire alongside them at night, to speak with authority of the Boers who are now opposing Great Britain on the border of the Transvaal. The police is the last resort of the indignant Transvaaler, and the Johannesburg Zarp is—alike in courage and in morality—every way comparable to Wellington's Peninsular soldier. From them the Uitlanders have judged the race.

But the great mass of the nation is today, as in 1200, a people of simple habits—gazing wide-mouthed at a train and fearing the wrath of God in chastisement for a street lamp of a telephone. One sees them upon the veldt, tripping lankly on shaggy South African ponies, caring naught for anything beyond their sheep and acknowledging no authority save God's, the Veld Kornets and the Presidents.

Loses Men He Can Spare Best.

These are the men on whom the defence of the republic has developed, and the British forces have yet to measure strength with them in the field. General Joubert is not devoid of a Moltke-like indifference to human sacrifice where the existences of the case demand. But Slim Piet is careful to offer only such lives as he can best spare. These lay in Johannesburg contingent—the commando where clerky Hollanders bivouacked alongside weedy Boers from the Fordsburg slums—and they were sent to draw the British fire at Elandslaagte.

There was a fitness in this that is not at first apparent. The commando was that most easily spared by Joubert, re-for his ultimate support, and was that containing the largest number of townsmen acquainted, colloquially at least, with instruments of modern warfare. They alone have stood by their artillery in the campaign.

It is the rule of Zulu warfare for the young imps to go first into the battle, while the men of the Old Guard stand by and criticize their conduct in the fight. Much of the Boer method has been learned from the savages upon their border. The Johannesburg contingent possessed the qualifications of indifferent material and respected familiarity with the weapons engaged. Hence their place in the van of the Boer attack. Afterward, at Nicholson's Nek and in circumstances better suited for their method of fighting, appeared the men of the back country—the true Boers of the Transvaal.

Town Boers Have Degenerated.

The Boer degeneracy has been confined in great part to the men of the towns, the other are shepherds, hunters and transport-riders, as in the days of their wars against the Matabele, the Xosas and the Zulus. Game has grown pitiably less in quantity, but proportionately more difficult to take. I do not find that Boer prowess in the chase has markedly depreciated. The men of the Wakkerstroom district, for instance—those nearest to the present seat of war—take their herds for six months of every year into the highlands in search of forage and water. They live there the traditional open life of the Boer, dependent on their guns and woodcraft for their sustenance.

Some two years ago I was present at a wapenschouwing at Roodekoppen, in the Heidelberg district, and saw there an exhibition of shooting on the part of the local commando that impressed me with the present-day marksmanship of the Boer as much as anything I have read of his prowess in the past.

There was a force of 700 Boers mounted on the customary veld ponies, each man with a remount. A canvas target was raised a mile distant, and, at the word, the whole commando thundered down upon it, riding loose-reined, guiding with their knees. Some 300 yards from the mark the men throw themselves to the ground, and, in squads of twenty, fired a hasty volley, remounted, and rode back to re-form column. The manoeuvre was executed as smartly as anything I have seen done by specially trained troops at Bisley or Aldershot. As they galloped away, only a few tattered ribbons remained fluttering in the breeze. The target was no more.

Secret of Boer Success.

In that single evolution lies the whole secret of Boer tactics—rapid advances, accurate volleys at short range, speedy retreats. The retreat is as important as the advance, and therein lies one explanation of the employment of the Johannesburg contingent at Elandslaagte. They were the only troops who could be trusted to remain beside cannon in position on a hill.

In all the engagements since Elandslaagte the cannon have been withdrawn soon as the British advance became definitely apparent. The Boers freed from the anchorage of artillery, have pursued their old tactics of rapid retreats from the point of most virulent attack with compensating attacks on flank. In Carleton's case the strategy, aided by the old native trick of stampeding the enemy's horses, proved successful.

To the Boer a position has no importance save as a place to fight from. One kopje top is the same as another kopje top; and, if the enemy beset one overmuch, it is wise to remove to another. With canon this manoeuvre is impossible. Men must stand by their guns or lose them. The typical Boer will lose them; and I question if any of the old commandoes will consent to give battle hampered by stationary or cumbersome artillery.

The strength of the Boers, then, lies in the back-country commandoes who will engage, maybe in considerable numbers, but who will invariably avoid heavy assaults by rapid retreats, followed by re-formations on the flank of the opposing force. The weakness lies in the inability to co-operate with artillery—not that their commandos do not understand its value, but that the burghers resent its immobility.

Burghers Need Artillerymen.

The most serious weakness of the Boer army is the scarcity of its gunners. Already there has been a terrible death rate among the artillerists, and it must be remembered that each vacancy is a permanent vacancy. Joubert can bring up commando after commando to take the place of the killed among the mounted artillery, but he has no recruits wherewith to man his depleted guns. Their efficiency is dependent upon the lives of the men who have been trained to work them. It is for that reason that the naval contingent has become, of a moment, worth a whole division of reinforcements to General White. The average Boer would as soon stand before the muzzle of a loaded cannon as to take charge of it at the breech. It was with the greatest difficulty the native born members of the State's artillery were induced to practice with their guns at Pretoria. At no time have they been fond of their mighty and mysterious arms. In the artillery lies the chief weakness of the Boers.

The strength of the Boers on the other hand lie in the presence at their head of all the old leaders save Nicholas Smith died in 1896, and J. H. M. Kock, killed at Elandslaagte. The Boer brain is still intact.

A grand carnival is being given in the Keene skating rink on Friday evening next. A league hockey match will take place the same evening between the Keene and Lakefield teams.

DRANK CARBOLIC ACID.

An Aged Toronto Woman Took a Large Quantity, and Ends Her Life.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—Mrs. Walter Palmer, an aged woman living at 16 Grant street, drank a quantity of carbolic acid, diluted with water yesterday morning, evidently with suicidal intent, and at a late hour last night she was still unconscious. The woman's husband, who is a horse dealer, left his home at 5 o'clock yesterday morning on some business, and a couple fo hours later the only daughter went to work. When Palmer returned hoem at noon, he did not see his wife about, and upon trying the door of her room, he found it locked. Becoming alarmed, he broke it in, and discovered his wife lying on the bed, an empty bottle marked "Carbolic acid" beside her. Palmer at once rushed away for Dr. Cleland, Queen street east. The doctor quickly arrived and did all that was possible for the unconscious woman. Notwithstanding his efforts, the woman did not revive, and there is small hope of her recovery. Ill-health is the only reason advanced for her deed.

Mrs. Palmer is Dead.

Mrs. Palmer, who took a dose of carbolic acid last night with intent to committ suicide, died at noon to-day. Coroner Grieg has issued a warrant for an inquest to be held Monday evening.

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

The Center of Population.

"Census experts estimate," says the Chicago Post, "that the center of population will be found next year to be in Indiana, close to the Illinois line, at a point not far removed from the town of Vincennes. The last census showed the population center to be between Columbus, Ind., and Cincinnati. The increase in the population of Georgia, Texas, the Indian Territory, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona during the last ten years has been sufficient, it is thought, to offset any increase in the northwest and to possibly pull the center somewhat to the south of the 1890 parallel. The wealth center is thought to be in the neighborhood of Sandusky, O."

Animal Criminals.

A writer in Forest and Stream says that the criminal tendency is manifested to a greater or less extent by all the lower animals, and he has compiled a list of 18 crimes which are commonly committed by birds, beasts or reptiles. The indictment includes murder, parricide, fratricide, suicide, theft, kidnaping, highway robbery, polygamy and drunkenness.

Age is not to be feared. The older a good and healthy person grows the greater becomes his capacity to enjoy the deeper, sweeter and more noble kinds of happiness which the world affords.

Our sentiments, our thoughts, our words lose rectitude on entering certain minds, as sticks plunged into the water look bent.

LATEST MINING NEWS.

Republic Mines.

Republic, Washington, is proving to be the most phenomenal camp in the world. In two years has produced the Great Republic and Mountain Lion Mines considered the equals of the celebrated Le Roi at Rossland, B.C.

The Green Cheese claim is situated in the centre of the Republican camp. Engineer's report shows that there are three ledges running through the claim. Assays have been obtained as high as $63.80.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Memasne Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim ajoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Boswell reports on this cropping $16 60 in gold, immediately upon the results becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Texas Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorized me to place a small amount of this stock at 3½cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 600 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.00 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3½ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

LYDDITE SHELLS.

Joubert Protested Against Missiles Less Barbarous Than Shrapnel.

From the London Leader.

Boers don't like liddite!"—and no r. Some say it is of French par- (M. Turpin); others, that the mind . Sprengel gave it birth. Let no owever, imagine that we stand al- our adoption of this terrible weap- yddite, under any other name, works urselessly. Under the disguise of nite" in France and "ecrasite" in ia, it bursts as correctly and kills ectively as in its English name on idt in Natal.

at is this deadly lyddite? Noth- ut molten picric acid run into the and allowed to set. Once, before the ry scientists came on the scene, pic- cid (which consists of carbolic acid d with nitric acid) was used merely harmless dye; it could dye things ffron color. Before it is melted it llow in color; after, it has a brown- ue. Then the inventor comes along iscovered that if fired by a deton- it acts as a violent explosive, and so new explosive was pressed into the e of England, France, Austria and dite has many admirable advantag- Remember that it is an explosive for the purpose of bursting shells. what are the main points to be de- in such an object? First, it must e so sensitive to shock as to make it ble for the shell to burst before it s the gun—that is, to burst in the itself. In the second place, it must erfectly controllable with a time and lastly, it must burst the shell the greatest possible number of frag- s.

om all these points of view lyddite is ection itself. It never explodes the in the gun. In conjunction, again, the extraordinary ingenuity with h time fuses have been devised, the ent when it bursts the shell can be lated to the second, and, thirdly, a ectile from a twelve-pounder charged lyddite will burst the shell into some fragments, every one warranted to nd. No wonder the Boers "fell in s," and the dervishes were moved n at Omdurman! Those, too, in the hborhood who are not hit by one of "500" are knocked down and stunned ly by its tremendous percussion of wind.

BOMBARDMENTS.

ges Memorable in the History of Europe.

While Ladysmith, Mafeking and Kim- erley are undergoing siege, Lieut.-Col. eedham in the London Daily Mail re- alls some famous bombardments of the ast.—

During the first six months in the Fran- o-German war, between August, 1870, and he end of January, 1871, twenty-six French fortresses were captured by the German, and of these no fewer than sixteen surrendered to a bombardment only; among the more notable of them being Toul, Thionville, Verdun, Mezieres, Neuf-Brisach, Longwy, and Peronne.

A bombardment was also employed to hasten the surrender of Paris, although it may be noted that it was only with great reluctance that the German leaders had recourse to it on that occasion. For it must be remembered that a bombard- ment, strictly speaking, is an operation of war directed as much against the civ- ilian population of a town as against its military defenders. In the text books on fortifications it is described as an attempt to overwhelm a place by throwing into it a great quantity of shells, rockets, etc., with the object of burning and destroying the town (not the fortifications), and so bringing about the surrender of the place by the adverse moral effect produced. With this view fire is directed upon the building occupied by the inhabitants and troops so as to wear out their endurance.

It was the recognition of the fact that the civilian population and civilian build- ings must, during a bombardment, suffer as much or more than the military de- fenders and defences, which, in 1870, caused the Germans to hesitate so long before employing it against Paris. Paris was invested by the Germans in Septem- ber, but it was not until Dec. 26 that its bombardment was begun. By Jan. 3 shells were falling freely in the quarters of the town lying on the left bank of the Seine, and on Jan. 8 a general exodus of the inhabitants from the left to the right bank began.

On Jan 13 a request that the subjects of foreign states then in Paris might be allowed to remove their persons and property was made to the German authorities by the members of the diplomatic corps still remaining in the beleagured city, but in reply, Bismarck, while admitting that a bombarded town was not a fit dwelling place for the subjects of neutral powers, declined to permit any exodus on a large scale, though he added that, out of courtesy, the representatives of the neutral states might even at that stage be allowed to leave.

The distance of the batteries in the first days of the bombardment of Paris from the furthest point reached by their shells was about five miles, rather more than less. The weather was at times foggy, and this, coupled with the fact the domes of the buildings, together with that of the Pantheon, were conspicuous objects at which to aim, was probably the cause why several shells fell and burst in close proximity to the large hospital, Val de Grace, although the Red Cross flag was flying over it.

So frequently did this become the case that on Jan. 14, General Trochu sent a formal protest to the German headquarters. In reply Count Moltke denied most solemnly that the act was intended by the German artillerists, and with a certain grim humor concluded by expressing a hope that shortly the occurrences complained of would be altogether avoided as the German batteries would consequently become possible to place their shells more accurately.

LOVE ON THE FARM.

A potato went on a mash
And sought an onion bed.
"That's pie for me," observed the squash,
And all the beets turned red.
"Go away," the onion, weeping, cried;
"Your love I cannot be;
The pumpkin be your lawful bride,
You cantaloupe with me."

But onward still the tuber came
And laid down at her feet;
"You cauliflower by any name,
And it will smell as wheat;
And I, too, am an early rose,
And you I've come to see,
So don't turn up your lovely nose,
But spinachat with me!"

"I do not carrot all to wed,
So go, sir, if you please."
The modest onion meekly said,
"And lettuce, pray, have peas!
Go think that you have never seen
Myself or smelled my sigh,
Too long a maiden I have been
For favors in your eye!"

"Ah, spare a cent!" the tuber prayed,
"My cherryshed bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
That's currant now with me!"
And as the wily tuber spoke
He caught her by surprise
And, giving her an artichoke,
Devoured her with his eyes.

HE WASHED DISHES.

The Hard Job One Boy Had All the Way to Europe.

The girls who have complained in various keys because they had dishes to wash may be glad to hear of a young man who can look at the matter through their eyes, perhaps more so. He had shipped as "boy" on a cattle steamer for Europe because he wanted to save as much as possible on his transportation, and—but the rest of the story sounds better in his own words:

"About 4:30 in the morning I was awakened and told to go to work. I hastily dressed, for the first and last time on board, for during the rest of the voyage I took care not to undress. It seemed scarcely worth while. I arrived on deck and found the steward waiting for me. He showed me into the pantry, introduced me to 'Pants,' as the pantryman was called, and told me that my chief duty during the voyage would be to wash dishes.

"There was already a large pile of dirty dishes waiting to be washed, and I rolled up my sleeves, fixed the hot water and began to work. I had these almost done when another and larger lot was brought in from the dining room. This proved to be the daily programme. I no sooner had one pile washed than others were brought in, and I was never done. I don't think I ever saw so many dishes before in my life, and I hope I never shall again. There were 60 passengers aboard besides the cattlemen, and six meals were served each day. From the dishes that came out to be washed, I think that each passenger must have used at least six plates at a meal."—Detroit Free Press.

Destroying the Point.

Every one knows the man who is notorious for so telling a story as to destroy its point. An English nobleman, Lord P., was noted for his success in thus ruining the prosperity of a story. The author of "Collections and Recollections" exhibits a specimen of his lordship's peculiar art.

Thirty years ago two large houses were built at Albert Gate, London, the size and cost of which seemed likely to prohibit tenants from hiring them. A wag christened them "Malta and Gibraltar because they can never be taken."

Lord P. thought this an excellent joke and ran round the town, saying to every friend he met:

"I say, do you know what they call those houses at Albert Gate? They call them Malta and Gibraltar because they can never let them. Isn't it awfully good?"

Some one told Lord P. the old riddle, "Why was the elephant the last animal to get into the ark?" to which the answer is, "Because he had to pack his trunk."

Lord P. asked the riddle of the next friend he met and gave as the answer, "Because he had to pack his portmanteau."

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

MARRIED.

SWANTON—BRAULT.—J. D. Swanton, of Lindsay, G. T. R. engineer, to Miss Helen Brault, of Peterborough, at church Notre Dame, Chicago, Ill., by the Rev. A. L. Bergeron, Jan. 9th, 1900.

DIED.

HARVEY.—At Peterborough, Jan. 15, 1900, Maria Ann Black, relict of the late W. H. Harvey, aged 73 years.

The funeral will leave the residence of her son-in-law, A. B. H. Carl, 568 Park street, corner London street, to-day, at 2.30 p. m., and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery.

A Coming Event.

On Tuesday evening next there will be presented at the Opera House, two plays, in amateur theatricals, entitled, "Are Belle" and "My Lord in Livery." Admission 25 and 50 cents. Plan at Bradburn's Office.

A Good suggestion.

A suggestion comes from Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, which is timely and sensible. We publish the letter elsewhere. The Times is heartily in favor of sustaining the Central Exhibition, and this can only be done by our business men taking a hand in the work. The annual meeting on Wednesday should therefore be well attended.

What Does it Mean.

Cobourg Post:—Surveyors are busy in this neighborhood running lines northwest from a point near Duck bor towards Millbrook, Orono and other towns in Durham County. It is not known yet just what the railway company means to do, but it is hinted that before long we may see a movement to build a large harbor between Cobourg and Port Hope.

Amateur Theatricals.

The amateur theatricals to be given on Tuesday next, promises to be very interesting. The caste is as appended—

A Spacious Golf House.

The local golf players are arranging to erect a fine club house in the spring and have leased the ground known as the Auburn Links for a term of years. The building will be erected between the links and the canal, on the hill, and will contain seperate apartments for ladies and gentlemen as well as a general reading room. The structure is to be surrounded by a piazza.

PETERBOROUGH VS OSGOODE.

Victory for Local Hockey Team by a Score of 17 to 0.

The game last night was well attended and at times very exciting. Both Osgoode and Peterborough were on their mettle. The teams lined up before Referee Nettfaufer, of Berlin, as follows—

Osgoode—Goal, Whyte; point, Styles; cover point, Schieveley; McGee, Myers, Jackson and Wilson.

Peterborough—Goal, Wasson; point, Glover; cover point, Hollingshead; forwards, Davidson, King, Graham and Watt.

Timekeepers—Woodsworth and English.

Goal Umpires—D. Davidson and Monteith.

The first half was started at 9.10, after a long wait for the Toronto players. The puck travelled immediately to the Toronto goal and the first game was scored at 9.14. One minute later a second one was made. The third one was scored at 9.34 the fourth at 9.37, the fifth in another 50 seconds. At half time, 9.46, no more goals were scored and the teams took a much needed rest. In this half the shooting of Watt and King was something that would keep a crowd of Boers guessing.

At 9.56 the referee called the teams to work and then came a Waterloo for Osgoode. Time after time the Peterbor forwards came swinging down the ice as one man and almost as often a goal was scored. King and Watt fed Graham, who was playing close in goal, and Chris did the trick. Davidson was put on the fence a couple of times for tripping, and just at the close Watt and Wilson decorated the boards for a few minutes for hugging each other too fondly. At intervals of one or two minutes, and in one case of thirty seconds, Peterboro scored a goal; and as if they were not getting enough themselves, Myers, of Osgoode, put through one for Peterborough. The second half totalled 12 goals for Peterborough to nothing for Osgoode, the score at the finish being 17 to 0. "On to Wellington" must be the cry, and then for the semi-finals with Waterloo, the Queens and Capitals.

The boys should impress on the visitors that the games should begin promptly as advertized, not a half an hour or more later.

Wertlaufer made a good referee, keeping a close check on off-sides.

THE NATURAL GAS FIND.

The Flow of Gas Still Continues at the Trent Canal.

The announcement made yesterday by the Times that natural gas had been struck at the lift lock at Ashburnham created considerable excitement about town, and larger numbers of people visited the spot.

The seam of gas was opened about eleven o'clock on Saturday morning, and burned in a dozen or more places until the rising water extinguished it on Sunday morning.

As soon as the water was cleared away yesterday, the gas was again lighted, and burned until after a heavy blast was set off, when the seams appeared to close up.

The fact of gas having been found at at the depth of only 50 or 60 ffeet, goes to show that hugh quantities of it is not far off.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

The colts are to have a practice tonight to get into shape for the match with Cobourg to-morrow night.

Harold Armstrong was re-elected captain of the colts team for this season.

It is now nearing the time to pick winners for this seasons games in the different series of the O.H.A. In the east the Capitals are looked upon as winners, but it is anybody's game yet; in east centre division Queen's has a cinch; in the central it will be a close thing between Peterborough and Wellingtons, and in the west Waterloo will again hold the honors.

The Port Hope Guide says that Lindsay has protested Dug McCallum of the Cobourg Juniors for being over age. What the Guide known about Dug's age doesn't amount to a hill of beans—besides the Guide man had better wait till he hears of the protest officially and stop talking through his hat.

Curling.

The Granites did not choose their tankard skips on Saturday night, but the following were choosen for the Lindsay—Peterborough cup series:—D. W. Dumble, Geo. Whiten and E. B. Edwards.

ABOVE ALL OTHERS.

Paine's Celery Compound

Is the World's Greatest Medicine To-day.

Canada's Best People Say It Is a Marvellous Health-Giving Prescription.

It Keeps People Strong and Well in Winter Time.

Paine's Celery Compound is truly nature's remedy; it cures when all other medicines fail.

Paine's Celery Compound is prescribed every day by our ablest Canadian physicians.

Our best druggists recommend Paine's Celery Compound to their patrons without the slightest hesitation; they know it possesses life-saving virtues; they have noted remarkable cures from its use, and its immense sales prove its popularity.

Canadian clergymen of all denominations speak of Paine's Celery Compound with enthusiasm and gladness, and recommend it to their parishioners.

Paine's Celery Coompound purifies and enriches the blood, regulates the nervous system, promotes perfect digestion, gives sound and refreshing sleep, healthy appetite, and that regular life which guarantees contentment and happiness.

The use of one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound will convince any sufferer that it is a banisher of disease that has no equal.

Four Doctors Failed.

Think of a woman being sick and suffering six years when she might have been well all that time! Think of her taking the treatment of four doctors and getting no better. Think of the pain she endured—of the uselessness of her life in those six long, dreary, miserable years.

Think of the distress of a refined, modest woman during the useless examinations and treatment of four different doctors who each and all failed to give her any comfort.

Think of all this and then think that she was finally cured—completely, wholly, permanently cured right in the privacy of her home without the abhorrent "examinations" and local treatment so uniformly insisted upon by home physicians—cured just as she might have been six years before.

These are simply the facts in the case of Mrs. M. B. Wallace, of Muenster, Cook Co., Texas, who writes:

"I had been a great sufferer from female weakness. I tried four doctors and none did me any good. I suffered six years, but at last I found relief. I followed your advice, and took four bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and eight of the 'Favorite Prescription.' I now feel like a new woman. I have gained eighteen pounds."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a medicine made for just one purpose—to cure disorders or diseases of the feminine organism. It is the only preparation of its kind introduced by a regularly graduated physican—a skilled specialist in the diseases of women, whose thirty years of successful practice are a guarantee of health to all sufferers who consult him.

Every woman may write fully and confidentially to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and may be sure that her case will receive careful, conscientious, confidential consideration, and that the best medical advice in the world will be given to her, absolutely free.

In addition to this free advice Dr. Pierce will send a paper-bound copy of his great 1,000 page book "The Common Sense Medical Adviser," to any one who will send 21 one-cent stamps to pay cost of customs and mailing. French cloth-binding, 50 stamps.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

A company with their headquarters at Ottaw is negotiating with the Town Council of Bowmanville for a bonus to a beet root sugar refinery, which they propose to establish in that town.

"What is a lake?" asked Mr. James Smith, of the Central school, to a class in geography. A bright little Irish boy raised his hand. "Well, Mickey, what is it?" "Sure, it's a hole in the tay kettle, sur." The class was dismissed.

The fire brigade was called out yesterday morning to the residence of Dr. Caldwell. It proved to be only a chimney blaze and the services of the firemen were not needed.

An employees of the McAllister Co's. mill, named Young, had a narrow escape n Saturday. His coat was caught in the machinery and torn off his back. His only injury was a slightly bruised hand.

WHO IS YOUR DRUGGIST?

Who is your druggist? This is an important question for every family.

When people speak of a well-qualified druggist, it is at once suggestive of accuracy and satisfaction in everything that you buy from him.

We desire your trade in the dispensing of medicines, as our drugs are always the purest, strongest and best.

We can interest you in a hundred little ways when you need

To Business Men

Editor Morning Times.

Dear sir,—On Wednesday next at one o'clock there is to be a meeting of the directors and members of the Peterborough Central Exhibition to be held in the Council Chambers, and we think that some of our business men should attend this meeting, and do all in their power to make the exhibition a success, and the best exhibition outside of Toronto. It can be done if some of our merchants will turn out and co-operate with our farmer friends. If we wish to have a good exhibition, we must put our shoulder to the wheel. Peterborough is noted far and near as being the best town in Canada. Why not let it be noted for having the best exhoibition in Canada?

Hoping that our business men will attend the meeting, and thanking you for your kindness in inserting this ltteer, we remain

Yours truly,
J. J. TURNER & SONS.

NERVES PARALYZED.

Nervous Prostration so Severe, Lost Power of Hands, Side and Limbs, But South American Nervine Beat off Disease and Saved Her.

Minnie Stevens, daughter of T. A. Stevens, of the Stevens Manufacturing Co., of London, was stricken down with a very severe attack of nervous prostration, which resulted in her losing the power of her limb. She could not lift or hold anything in her hands and other complications showed themselves. Her parents had lost hope of her recovery. She began taking South American Nervine, and after taking twelve bottles she was perfectly restored, and enjoys good health to-day. Sold by Ormond & Walsh.

If He Were a Pope.

New York, Jan. 15.—In his Sunday sermon Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, in speaking of the lack of interest displayed by young people in religion, said—"If Protestantism were administered as Catholicism is, and I were the Protestant Pope, I would have every child learn that catechism from beginning to end, question and answer, although I would arrange with any cardinals to reconstruct certain portions of it to accord with the spirit of the Gospel."

WAUCHOPE'S LAST LETTER.

Liverpool, Jan. 16.—A profound sensation is caused here by the publication in the Post of what is declared to be a letter written by Gen. Wauchope, remonstrating against the plan of battle which compelled him to lead the Highland Brigade into the battle at Magersfontein, the battle of which Wauchope disapproved, and over the plans for which he and Methuen disagreed.

The letter closes as follows: "This is the last letter I shall ever write. I have been ordered to perform an impossible task. I have vainly remonstrated, but must obey or surrender my sword."

The Post asserts that the War Office is in possession of this letter, and that as a consequent of it, General Methuen will soon be superseeded in command at Modder River.

AT MODDER RIVER.

Modder River, Jan. 14.—For three days the Boers have not fired a shot from their cannon. A few Boers from the bushes shot at the British pickets between 5 and 7 o'clock yesterday morning. The British artillery shelled them and the troops sent several volleys in that direction, and the Boers disappeared.

Gen. Methuen has received this message from Col. Stapleton Cotton, secretary of the Staffordshire branch of the Soldiers' and Sailors Wives' and Families' Association:

"I am sending to your army corps a roll of all Staffordshire people. We are looking after every case in this country. It will not be our fault if the men with you do not find their homes and families just as they left them. I have money enough to keep every family for six months, even if all reservists are called out, and double that time if necessary."

The Staffordshire men were very grateful on receiving this information.

BULLER KEEPS SILENT.

London, Jan. 16.—The complete absence of news from Natal up to this hour proves that the censorship will allow nothing to pass until General Buller's plans shall have been executed or have failed. Even General Roberts in his report of yesterday evening refrained from mentioning a word about Natal or General Buller.

From the other columns there is little news of moment. Modder River advices of yesterday's date only report daily long-range shelling from which the Boers are supposed to have suffered severely.

A despatch from Sterkstroom, dated January 15, reports that Gen. Gatacre's troops made a demonstration beyond Molteno in the direction of Stormberg in the belief that the Boers intended to seize Molteno. The burghers were not sighted and the British remained at Molteno.

Arrivals from Stormberg estimate that there were 4,500 Boers at that place, mostly revolted colonists and Free Staters. President Steyn's brother is the Landrost.

BOERS BIG LOSS.

Ladysmith, Monday, Jan. 8 — By messenger to Weenen, Jan. 16.—A representative of the Associated Press visited Saturday's battle field this morning and saw large numbers of Boers dead. The British guns seem to have worked great havoc. One Boer was completely disembowled, another had his head shot off, and a couple of others were killed by the same shell evideently while eating their luncheon as half eaten hard boiled eggs lay beside them.

Some Natal Dutchmen were recognized among the dead. A number of Boer bodies and carcasses of horses have been washed down in the Spruit which became a raging torrent during a heavy thunderstorm.

The British, while diging graves were fired on by Boer artillery and several of them were hit. Soft-nosed bullets and dum-dum cartridges have been found on wounded prisoners. Volunteers carried the Boer dead off the hill and handed the bodies over to their comrades at the bottom. Over ninety were thus carried off Wagon Hill alone.

GREAT EVENT IS IMMINENT.

London, Jan. 16.—The Times says: The dearth of news from Natal is perhaps the surest indication that a great event is imminent. The meagre items of intelligence which reach us pouint to the same conclusion. It is clear that within a few hours the fate of northern Natal and the fate of the gallant defenders of Ladysmith must be decided as the result of the operations which may now be in progress on the Tugela. If, as we trust and pray, the plans of our generals, and the bravery of our soldiers are crowned with success and Ladysmith is relieved the task before General Roberts is simplified. If, on the other hand, our hopes are disappointed and General Buller fails to penetrate the Boer lines the resolution of the country to prosecute the war will in no wise be lessened. In that event, however, we may have to make up our minds to the cruel necessity of leaving Ladysmith to fall without further efforts to save the men who have so long and faithfully upheld the honor of the flag and country. We would feel such a calamoity most deeply, but would face it with unflinching courage.

REPULSED WITH THE BAYONET.

Rensburg, Cape Colony, Jan. 15.—The Boers this morning attempted to rush a hill held by a company of the Yorkshires and the New Zealanders, but were repulsed at the point of the bayonet. The Boers had 21 men killed and about fifty wounded.

BOER FAIRY TALES.

Pretoria, Saturday, Jan. 15.—As a result of the bombardment of Mafeking yesterday the British fort eastward was demolished, and the British retired. One Boer was wounded.

Advices from the Head Laager at Ladysmith report that the atack on that place on Jan. 6, was disastrous to the British, and that Ladysmith appears to be in sore straits.

ANOTHER SUCCESS FOR WHITE.

Boer Headquarters, Outside Ladysmith, Jan. 9.—The Boers occupying the southern edge of Bester's Kop were darived out by the British Saturday. Commandant Nel, on the west of the town, and the Pretoria commando, on the north, have taken the kopjes commanding Caesar's camp, from which they maintained a vigorious sniping of the British. The Pretoria commando lost six men killed and six men wounded in attempting to storm the fort. Bester's Kop is several miles northwest of Ladysmith camp.

BOERS ANTICIPETE A STRUGGLE

London, Jan. 16.—The Standard's correspondent at Ladysmith heliographed on January 11 that the Boers had been singularly restless since the assault on January 6, They failed to continue to fortiy the hills to the northwest, and moved some of their big guns to positions commanding the approaches to the town from the south. They have taken their field guns in the direction of Colenso. It is evident that they are making the most strenuous efforts to prepare for the great struggle that is impending.

BOERS TRECK NORTHWARD.

London, Jan. 16.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Pietermaritzburg, telegraphing Thursday, Jan. 11, says:

"The gallantry of the Ladysmith garrison last Saturday appears to have depressed, if not actually demoralized, the Boers generally. Many Boers are believed to be trekking northward. The magistrate at Nqutu, Zululand, telegraphs that scouts report having seen many Boer families with wagons proceeding north via Zululand. The traction engines have been doing excellent work in hauling heavy wagons out of holes and swamps in Natal. This they accomplished with the greatest ease."

CROSSED THE FIRE ZONE.

Estcourt, Natal, Jan. 16.—A remarkable incident is reported in connection with the charge of the Devons up Wagon hill in the fighting around Ladysmith on Jan. 6. Lieut. Masterston was ordered to cross the fire-swept zone and delivr a message. He was hit by three bullets, but struggled on, and delivered his message, which was very important. The lieutenant is doing well, although there are eleven wounds in his body.

GOODS FOR SOUTH AFRICA.

New York, Jan. 16.—Gun and ammunition houses in New York city are being kept busy supplying stock for shipment to South Africa and the goods are destined for the Boers, says the Times to-day. The latter fact is concealed by the merchants, who mysteriously say when asked about the sudden increase in their business that "the spring trap shooting promises to be unusually good."

These houses do not ask where the goods they make are going when they deliver an order and the mere fact that they are packed in cases marked "groceries" or "canned goods," or that they are ordered shipped in barrels as "flour" or in hogsheads as "molasses," does not suggest to them that they are intendde for the use of the Boers. Just the same that is the ultimate destination of these mysterious packages that are quietly shipped mainly from New Haven, Bridgeport and New London, on tramp steamers or fast sailing vessels.

TITLED AMERICAN WOMEN APPEAL.

Duchess of Marlborough and Countess of Essex Ask Americans to Aid Them in Fitting Out a Hospital Ship.

London, Jan. 16.—The Duchess of Marlborough, the Countess of Essex, Lady Georgiana Curzon, Mme. Von Andree and the leading members of the Imperial Yeomanary hospital fund appeal to the people of the United States and Canada in behalf of their efforts to equip and maintain a hospital with a base at Cape Town. The Duchess of Marlborough said this evening—"The Duke of Marlborough is certainly going to South Africa at the earliest opportunity, though his appointment is not yet announced, and his exact capacity is not decided. We are all, naturally, much interested in the war, and, especially, in the success of the Imperial Yeomanry.

"The hospital scheme has the sanction of Lord Lansdowne and Lord Wantage. We have already secured £16,000 and need £30,000 to provide 150 beds for the duration of the war. It has occurred to the ladies of the committee that we may properly count on the assistance of the American and Canadian people in our efforts to establish a hospital at Cape Town, and as the matter has not yet been presented to their notice we believe they only need to know our wants to grant us generous aid."

Lady Essex (formerly Miss Adele Beach Grant, of New York), said—"It only needs £50 to equip and maintain a bed in the Imperial Hospital. Each individual, city or corporation contributing such an amount will have a bed named in its honor. This forms a definite, tangible object for contributions, and we assure the people of America that every dollar contributed will reach the object the donor desires. Certainly, then, scores of Americans and Canadian cities will be glad to have a hospital bed named for them by contributing such a sum.

"We trust this appeal will meet with the hearty approbation of the American people."

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Hockey.

The executive committee of the O. H. A. met on Yonday night and considered the two protests filed. Barrie's protest against Collingwood for professionalism was allowed and the latter club drop out for this year. In the case of the Guelph Nationals they were suspended until Carmichael is proved to be a bona fide resident.

While Osgoode were meeting their Waterloo here on Monday night, the fellow students from 'Varsity met their Waterloo to the tune of 7 to 5.

It looks as if Waterloo had a cinch on the western series of the senior league. Military College beat Frontenacs on Monday night. It will be different when R. M. C. runs up against Queen's.

To-night the Colts play their first league game with Cobourg. The Cobourgs are a fast lot and have two wins already to their credit.

Golf.

Latham, the English professional golf champion, beat Pettitt, the U. S. champion, in a three set match in Boston. Latham conceded half of fifteen and won out 6—3, 4—6 and 6—4.

The Kennel.

The Westminster Kennel Club has just issued its prize list for its twenty-fourth show in Madison Square Gardens, New York, on Feb. 20, 21, 22 and 23. They offer $3,000 in cash, while the specialty clubs give three times as much in cups and cash. Every recognized breed seems to be included in the list, and the club offers first, second and third prizes of $15, $1 0and $5, respectively. Entries close 333Feb. 6.

The Ring.

Now George Siler, the well-known referee, is out with a statement that all the prize fights that are being pulled off in New York are "fakes" and are "fixed" before hand. The minor fights may be fixed, but Choynski is disguisted with the work of the referees. He has had the "throw-down" twice, when he had virtually beaten his man. We see that he and Corbett are to train together at Lakewood, New Jersey. They have been enemies ever since their first fight of many years ago in 'Frisco. They ought to be of mutual service to each other, as Corbett is scientific and knows McCoy like a book, while the big fellow is shifty and should help Corbett in training for his go at Jeffries in March.

Baseball.

Tom Lynch, perhaps the best of Nick Young's staff of umpires, has written a letter, in reply to a request of the editor of the New York World, to give a short sketch of an umpire's career. In it he says that he does not feel able to make the sketch, as like most baseball umpires he is glad that he is alive, and he does not want to run any more chances than are absolutely necessary.

BLACK DAYS RECALLED

The Asiatic Cholera in Peterborough in 1823.

FORTY DEATHS RESULTED

The Sorrows of The First Emigrants Vividly Described.

The Dead were Placed in a Great Hole and Covered Up—The Dread Disease Brought From Europe.

It is about 76 years ago since that dread scourge—Asiatic Cholera—visited this country. In the year 1823, a party of emigrants arrived, and camped on what was then known as Scott's plains, on the spot where the bridge works now stands. Soon after their arrival cholera broke out, and resulted in a large number of deaths.

On the arrival of the party in a huge punt, they landed, and started life under canvas. The dread disease at once broke out, and the deaths amongst them was appaling.

THE FIRST CASE.

The first case was reported on the way up the Otonabee river, when one of the emigrants died before reaching the "plains." At that time there was only five log shanties in Peterborough, and a "blazed" roadway was all that guided the brave pioneer to points in and around the "plains."

NO MEDICAL SUPPLIES.

There was no medical supplies in those early days, and the unfortunate victims were left to suffer and die without help. These miserable people, after a long and weary battle were landed at Cobourg, where they portaged over to Rice lake, a distance of 12 miles, with no means of transporting their effects except on their backs. At Harwood, boats were either hired or roughly constructed, and the navigation of the Otonabee began.

These people came mostly from Ireland, and followed the emigration of the Hon. Peter Robinson, which took place in 1821.

A HUGE GRAVE.

A huge hole was dug on the bank of the river, only a few rods from the camp, where upwards of forty bodies were interred.

GRUESOME RELICS.

When the late Robert Romaine dug out the foundation for what is now the Bridge works, in 1875, the bones of the unfortunate victims of the cholera were found. About forty skulls, it is said were unearthed, many of them in a good state of preservation.

The above information was given to the Times by the son of one of the early pioneers, who says he often heard his father tell of the terrible visitation.

REMONSTRANCE TO THE BOERS.

Instructions Sent to the American Consul at Pretoria.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Despite the second refusal of the Transvaal Government to accord recognition to the United States Consul at Pretoria as to the representative of British interests in the Transvaal, the State Department has not abandoned its efforts in the matter. W. Stanley Hollis, the Consul ad interim at Pretoria, has been directed to continue to look after the comfort of British prisoners of war within the limitations of his functions prescribed by the Boers who, as told in the New York Sun, have declined to view Mr. Hollis in any save a personal capacity so far as his representation of Great Britain is concerned. He receives, of course, full official recognition in his capacity as the agent of the United States.

The instructions sent to ex-Consul Macrum concerning the ruling of the Boers that he could not be permitted to continue his efforts to ameliorate the condition of the British prisoners because their control was with the military commanders in the field and outside consular jurisdiction have been repeated to Mr. Hollis. These instructions in effect direct him to represent to the Boer Government that the practice of mutual representation of a belligerent in an enemy's territory had been established among civilized nations and was regarded as right and proper for humane and other reasons.

The main issue involved in the negotiations is whether the Boers wish to have it understood that they are suspicious of the neutrality of the United States and have adopted their present policy as a snub to this Government. The matter has become very embarrassing to the administration which has been placed before the world in the attitude of a great nation discredited by a small one.

Would Strike England.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 16.—The Ancient Order of Hiberians of Albany county, in convention here today, adopted resolutions offering their heartiest congratulations to the Boers for the gallant fight which they are making "for the protection of their lives and liberty" and promising aid in case their national officers should see fit to order a call to strike a blow at England.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 16.—A pro-Boer movement was started here by the Ancient Order of Hiberians. This organization held a special meeting today and made arrangements for a mass meeting to be held in Old City hall within a week. The meeting is to be nonsectarian and all friends of the Boers are invited to be present.

Germany is Impatient Now.

Berlin, Jan. 16.—The Berlin correspondent of the Cologne Gazette sends an inspired communication to his paper, in which Great Britain is energetically called on to end the interminable delays in regard to the affair of the steamship Bundesrath. He declares the feeling over the matter is increasing in Germany, and that Great Britain should make prompt amends and guarantee that such highhanded proceedings will not occur again, if she is desirous of preserving present friendly relations between the two countries.

THE U. S. AND KRUGER.

How Uncle Sam Regards Boer Methods.

BETTER FEELING AROUSED

Against the Boers on account of Their Recent Conduct.

In Refusing to Allow the United States Counsel at Pretoria to Act for Britain—Other Washington Notes.

(Special To The Times.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.—Winter gaieties follow each other thick and fast in this city. The event of the week has been the reception at the White House to the diplomatic corps. Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador, was the first to be received. He wore his gorgeous court uniform of black broadcloth and gold lace, and was accompanied by the ladies of his household and the gentlemen of his suite. Lady Pauncefote wore blue mirroe velvet flounced with silver-spangled tulle, and white tips in her hair. The Misses Pauncefote followed, all exquisitely attired. On Tuesday, Lord Pauncefote gave a dinner to Col. Charles H. Denby. Those who dined with the Ambassador besides Col. and Mrs. Denby, were the Chinese Minister and Mme. Wu, General Corbin, General and Mrs. J. B. Henderson, Baron Speck von Sternberg, and the Brazilian Minister and wife.

THE TROUBLE WITH KRUGER.

The action of the Transvaal government in refusing to permit U. S. Consul Stanley Hollis to act as British representative at Pretoria during the war, is taken as a proof either of the invincible ignorance of the Boers in the matter of diplomatic procedure, or as a species of snub to this country for the open sympathy of the administration with Great Britain. It seems, however, that the Boers do not go further than to refuse to permit him to do everything that he would be entitled to under that claim. In other words, if the matter is rightly understood in this city, they grant the thing and merely deny the name. Remembering the storm of indignation towards France and Germany that swept over this country on account of their open sympathy with Spain during our late war, very few Americans blame the Transvaal for feeling more or less bitterly towards us. How the Americans regard the struggle is shown pretty accurately by an interview recently given out by Major J. M. Burke, of "Wild West" fame. "It is characteristic he said, "of our people to take the part of the under dog, and hence the feeling manifested in many sections in meeting called to express sympathy with the Afrikanders. Getting away from this, it must be admitted that our interests are bound up in the maintenance of the prestige of the British empire. English success, for instance, means the completion of the Cape to Cairo railway, as well as the building of thousands of miles of railway elsewhere, all of which will call for the purchase of iron and steel and rolling stock from the United States. England is the advance agent of civilization, and wherever she goes her policy is that of progress and development.

PULP.

The movement to abolish duties on paper, wood pulp, and so forth, in which Canada is so much interested, continues to gather force. The price of ordinary newspaper has been so increased by the trust that it has become a serious matter with country as well as city journals. contracts recently made by New York papers are said to have been at 3 1-2 cents for large contracts, and 3 1-4 cents for small ones. Certain Canadian mills have offered, it is said, to sell in small lots at 2.6 cents plus the tariff duty.

CANADIAN COMMERCE.

Canadian commerce is occupying a good deal of space in American papers nowadays. A recent issue of "Engineering News" says that the Dominion has spent $70,000,000 on its canal system, of which $60,000,000 has gone to the St. Lawrence system, including the Welland Canal, which gives access from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario. Since 1886 the traffic has varied between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 tons a year. If the freight rates were proportioned to a fair rate of interest on the cost of the canals, they would be prothe policy. This decision was reversed. peals held that as the cargo was not a total loss there could be no recovery of the new Soulanges Canal," says the News, "a depth of 14 feet of water is secured better results. "With the completion of hibitory. But there is now a prospect of from the upper lakes to Montreal, and a determined effort will be made to draw export traffic in this direction in competition with the lake and railway routes to United States ports. It appears pretty clear that the 9-foot Erie Canal cannot be expected to compete with the 14-foot Canadian route, especially as the latter has the further advantage that for a large part of the distance the navigation is in a deep and broad river, where full speed is permissible."

AN IMPORTANT CASE.

The Supreme Court of the United States has recently rendered a decision in the case of the Canada Sugar Refining Company against the Insurance Company of North America, involving the insurance on the profits of a cargo of sugar shipped from the Philippines and partially lost by shipwreck. The Circuit Court of Ap-

A Jameson Raider Married

London, Jan. 16.—Captain the Hon. C. J. Coventry, second son of the Earl of Coventry, and formerly one of Dr. Jameson's raiders, was married this afternoon at St. Peter's church, Eaton square, to Miss Lily Whitehouse, of Newport, R. I. There was a fashionable attendance. There was a long list of presents, which included furs, a brougham and a pair of horses, from the bride's father; a diamond tira and brooch, from her mother; a painted Empire fan, from the Prince and Princess Castacuzene, and a chest of silver plate and a coal scuttle, from the Prince and Princess Duleep Singh.

Glimpses of ...South Africa...

IN PEACE AND IN WAR

By WYMBLE FLEMMING

a Native Afrikander, born in Cape Colony—Lived in Africa 28 years—Travelled extensively in all parts of Africa—Familiar with every inch of ground where fighting is going on—Large experience as a newspaper correspondent for Cape, English and American papers—Author of many sketches on South African life—For many years connected with the American Consular Service at Port Elizabeth, now temporarily residing in America while preparing the literary portion of this volume.

The developments of the war in South Africa, its serious conflicts, the deeds of heroism of its participants, the great massing of Boer Armies and the unprecedented forward movement of British troops to the Cape, coupled with a universal desire for information concerning a country of which very little is known, have intensified public interest in the subject to an extent hitherto unequalled. With characteristic enterprise, this paper will supply the demand for South African literature that present conditions have created. To this end we now offer our readers the first number of a magnidicent art series to be issued in weekly parts under the title of "GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA in Peace and in War." Illustrating and describing the current military events of the day and the sights and the scenes throughout all South Africa by aid of camera, pencil and pen, presenting a pictoral history of the

EASY LIFE IN NICARAGUA.

When the Family Is Broke, the Wife Digs a Little Gold.

"When I was in the Olancho district, in Nicaragua," said a visitor who is largely interested in mining in Central America, "I had an opportunity of seeing how the lazy natives tap nature's till when they need some small change.

"Near our camp by the river was a hut occupied by a typical Honduranian family, consisting of husband and wife, grandfather and grandmother and a dozen or so of assorted children. The only one of the crowd who did anything except rest and smoke was the wife. At intervals of perhaps a week she would sally out with the family tinpan, erstwhile used for cooking, and proceed to an old placer digging on the river bank. There she would squat, throw a few gourdfuls of dirt into the pan, fill it with water and begin the usual circular motion of gold washing.

"She was very skillful and would keep a little sheet of dirty water spraying over the edge like a miniature cataract. When the water was exhausted, a few spoonfuls of sand would be left in the bottom of the pan, and, spreading it out thin with a bit of stick, she would go over it grain by grain, looking for 'color.' Whenever she saw a speck of gold she moistened the stick on her tongue and picked up the particle by adhesion. Each bit of the precious metal was stored away in a quill, plugged with clay at the ends, and I have known her to take out as much as a quarter of an ounce in the course of one day.

"Usually her limit was about $2, and when she got that she stopped. Then the head of the house would arise languidly and start for the nearest store, 12 miles away. Sometimes he would trade the whole amount for whisky; but, as a rule, he brought back tobacco, salt, meal or calico.

"There are hundreds of native families who live in exactly that manner in Olancho. Sometimes the woman will be lucky enough to strike a rich pocket that will yield a dollar or more a pan, but they never dream of washing it out at once and getting a stake. It simply means that they can secure their usual amount with less work."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NO "PROPERTY" ESCAPES.

Some Queer Things to Be Seen In a Chinese Theater.

Over the audience rests a settled, immovable stillness, unbroken even by a sigh. No expression referable to sorrow, sympathy, joy or tears lightens the blank, dead wall of the faces. The Chinaman is impregnable. Only once do his eyes change, and that is while the property man is on the stage, and he is never off it.

The Chinese property man sees his duty to the management and puts it into practical effect. No "property" shall escape him. He gathers all things by the way. When the Chinese Romeo slays Tybalt, the property man steps on to the stage, gathers up Tybalt's sword, cap and cloak and things and walks off with them. He would enter Macbeth's banquet hall while that weak kneed monarch was exercising Banquo's ghost, gather up the goblets and plates in one arm and Macbeth's chair with the other and carry them away. He would pluck the roses from Elaine's breast; he would take the dagger from Juliet's dead hand; he would interrupt Hamlet's soliloquy in the churchyard with a request for Yorick's skull, and he would interpose in the murder of Desdemona to remove the pillows from her bed.—Saqui Smith in Leslie's Weekly.

London's Great Clock.

Whatever complaints may be made against the tone of Big Ben, the famous London clock—and musicians say it is a terribly bad "E," at any rate—every one will acknowledge that the clock in the house of commons tower is a wonderful timekeeper, not varying a second in time all the year through. The mechanism for setting in motion the massive hammer which brings out the tone of Big Ben's 16 ton bell is very interesting. The striking machinery is driven by weights of about a ton and a half, which hang on a shaft 174 feet deep, and it is so arranged that after the chimes are over the hammer falls on the big bell within one second of Greenwich mean time.

SOME QUEER DREAMS.

VISIONS THAT RESULTED IN THE CAPTURE OF CRIMINALS.

Marvelous Manifestations That Baffle the Ingenuity of Man to Explain and Which Prove Anew That Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction.

A very remarkable instance of the tracing of a criminal by means of a dream occurred in St. Louis. A woman named Mary Thornton was detained in custody for a month, charged with the murder of her husband. A week or so after her arrest she requested to see one of the prison officials and told him she had dreamed that an individual named George Ray had murdered her spouse, giving the official at the same time full details of the tragedy as witnessed in her vision. The man Ray was not suspected at the time, but the prison authorities were so much impressed by the woman's obvious earnestness that a search was at once made for him.

After some delay he was traced and charged with the crime, the details of the same as seen in the dream being rehearsed to him. Overcome with astonishment, he then and there confessed that he had committed the crime. Curiously enough, the woman had only met the murderer once and believed him to be on the very best of terms with her husband.

Almost as remarkable was the case of a woman named Drew, who dreamed one night that her husband, a retired sailor, had been murdered by a peddler at a Gravesend tavern, where the said husband was in the habit of putting up when visiting the town in question. The first news that awaited her on rising in the morning was that her spouse had been assassinated at the very tavern she had seen in her extraordinary vision, whereupon she burst into hysterical tears and cried out that her dream had come true.

She calmed down somewhat after a few hours and then handed the police officials an exact description of the peddler of the vision, giving a minute account of his dress, which included a blue coat of a very peculiar pattern. Marvelous as the fact may appear, a man wearing such a coat and following the occupation of a peddler was discovered two days later at an inn some six miles from Gravesend, and, on being taxed with the crime, he at once admitted that he was guilty and that robbery had been the motive of the outrage. He was hanged soon afterward, his doom having been brought about by the flimsy evidence of a woman's dream.

Women as dreamers seem more successful than men, but a rather peculiar instance of a crime being traced by a vision and in which the dreamer was a member of the male sex comes from Rennes, in France. A worthy merchant, having quitted his office one Saturday evening, proceeded home to dinner and after enjoying a substantial meal lay down on the couch and fell into a light doze. A very vivid dream then came to him wherein he saw two men of the burglar type engaged in rifling the safe in his office, and so much impressed was he by the vision that he resolved, upon awakening, to at once go to the office and see that everything was under lock and key.

His amazement may be imagined when, on arriving there, he discovered the door forced and a burglary in progress. To summon a couple of gendarmes was the work of an instant, and five minutes later the thieves, who proved to be notorious housebreakers, were on their way to the police depot, where the prosecutor told his extraordinary story. In view of the fact that the safe contained valuables to the extent of some thousands of pounds, the dream in question proved a very fortunate one for the dreamer.

How to explain these marvelous manifestations, which prove once more that truth is stranger than fiction, is a task beyond the ingenuity of man to compass. Perchance the theory of telepathy may have something to do with the mysterious business, but even that theory would appear rather inadequate in such cases as the aforementioned.

A skillful forger who moved in the highest circles of society was once detected by the agency of a dream. The affair occurred in Boston and caused the greatest excitement of the time.

The forger, a young man of eight or nine and twenty, had become acquainted with a rich publisher, at whose house he became a constant guest. One day the publisher's bankers discovered that some one was forging their client's signature to various large checks, and two detectives were at once instructed to look out for the culprit.

Their efforts proved useless, but one evening the publisher's youngest daughter, a little girl of 11, dreamed that she saw a man whom she described as "like Mr. Blank," the visitor to whom reference has been made, sitting in a room in Maine street copying her father's signature. The child's dream was communicated to the police, who, though inclined to ridicule the same at the outset, eventually promised to have the gentleman in question watched, with the result that his lodgings were raided and a complete plant for the making of bank notes found there. It then transpired that he was a man who was wanted for manifold forgeries throughout the Union, and he was sent to prison for a very long term.

The child's dream was all the more extraordinary in view of the fact that she was too young to understand the leading incidents of the business and attributed the copying of her father's signature in the dream to the "gentleman wanting to write nicely, like papa." Strange, very strange, but none the less true, and proving once more that, as Hamlet remarked, "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamed of in your philosophy."—Philadelphia Times.

THE Canada Business College.

CHATHAM, ONT.

CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these, there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; and there is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST? You must decide.

[illegible] of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

THE BOERS IN SORE DISTRESS.

White Dealt Them a Severe Blow, They Lost Heavily and Were in Despair.

London, Jan. 15.—The Times has the following special to-day—

Lorenzo Marquez, Jan. 11.—A leading Transvaaler states that the Boers are determined to make another desperate effort to compel the capitulation of Ladysmith, and are sanguine of success.

The tone of the Transvaal papers indicate that the authorities at Pretoria are alarmed at the seriousness of the position on the western and southern borders of the Free State. Last week they despatched 5,000 men from Natal to help in resisting the attacks of Major-Generals Gatacre and French.

The British consul has issued a notice calling upon British subjects to refrain from enlisting in the military services of the republics and indulging in treasonable conduct, warning them against trading with either republic or any subjects thereof resident within those states. Consul Pott has protested against the terms of the notice on the plea that it constitutes an interference with the sovereign rights of Portugal.

BOERS IN DISTRESS.

The Times has the following special to-day—

Ladysmith, Thursday, Jan. 11.—(By heliograph to Weenen).—The enemy has been very quiet since Saturday. Native scouts report great distress in the enemy's laager over their casualties. The Boer seige guns are fired spasmodically, but there is no regular bombardment. The spirit of the garrison is greatly improved by the successful result of Saturday's battle. The enemy left 100 daed on the slopes of our defences, and were removing their injured all the next day. Their losses must have been very heavy. An officer who was a prisoner with the enemy during the engagement states that at the end of the day they were absolutely demoralized.

Boers Lost Heavy.

The Boer losses in the Ladysmith battle are closely estimated at 1,400 killed and wounded. Commandant De Villiers and other Free State leaders are reported to have been killed.

The Boer version of the battle, which comes through Dalziel's Agency, pays a glowing tribute to the gallantry of both sides. The attack, it saus, was most determined, and the defence equally tenacious. The British were most strongly entrenched, and walls of their redoubts were skillfully loopholed.

Hand to Hand.

The combat was so close that the rifles were frequently fired at arm-s length between the opposing forces. It was, in fact, a hand to hand encounter, and the men on both sides are reported to have fought like demons. The horror and bewilderment of the scene presented a picture without a parallel in the experience of those who took part in the encounter. The Boer losses were about one thousand killed and wounded, the Free Staters being the heaviest sufferers.

A THIRD CORPS ACCEPTED.

London, Jan. 15.—The Associated Press learns that Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War, accepted on Saturday the offer of Lord Strathcona, Canadian High Commissioner in London, to provide, distinct from the Canadian contingents, a force of at least 400 mounted men from Manitoba, the Northwest Territories and British Columbia, and to arm, equip and convey them to South Africa at his own expense. All will be expert marksmen, rough riders and scouts. It is estimated that the offer will involve an expenditure of £200,000. The War Office regards Lord Strathcona's proposal as an extraordinary proof of colonial patriotism.

AWAITING THE LETTER.

Ottawa, aJn. 15.—Hon. F. W. Borden said last night that the offer of Lord Strathcona to send four hundred men to South Africa at his own expense had not yet been accepted, but the strong probability is that it will be. Lord Strathcona's cabled offer arrived some days ago, coupled with the request that nothing be said regarding it until further information by letter should have been received.

THE WEST EAGER.

Victoria, Jan. 15.—It is probably correct to say that in no quarter of the British Empire to-day is to be found a British Empire to-day is to be found a community more imbued with feelings of the highest patriotism than Victoria. When the news was announced that British Columbia's offer had been accepted, as had also that of Lord Strathcona to raise a Canadian mounted contingent, it aroused the patriotic spirit among Victorians to an unprecedented degree.

tI is quite certain that the next few days will witness a perfect deluge of offers pouring in upon Lieut.-Col. Gregory, the officer commanding the 5th Regiment, who is himself most anxious to go to the front, having been twice disappointed in his endeavor to take a hand in the fray in oSu tAhfrica. Major Hibben is another of those anxious to serve. Nearly all of the rank and file are stirred by similar feelings of patriotism.

India Rubber Industry.

The bulletin of the Royal gardens, Kew, states that the falling off in the production of India rubber at Lagos is due to the reckless way in which the trees are being exhausted. There is a want of control over the collectors, who tap young trees and destroy whole rubber forests by overworking, so that this industry, which is an important source of wealth to the colony, is in danger of extinction. A similar disaster occurred in Madagascar, and now active steps are being taken to preserve the industry by the establishment of plantations of rubber producing plants.

South African Social Affairs.

The ladies of Kimberley are no doubt giving bombardment porch parties and bombardment teas.

BILLS OVER A CENTURY OLD

They Show Tea to Have Been a Cambridge Student's Favorite Drink.

There is a bill for groceries, etc., furnished for an undergraduate at Cambridge in the year 1788. The bill contains one or two items of furniture. Apparently the undergraduate took over rooms already furnished at a valuation, and certain articles had to be bought new, such as a hearth brush, a pail, a mop and a "Holland gotch." One knows not what this means, but it cost 2 shillings 9 pence (43 cents).

The undergraduate would seem at first sight to have consumed tea in a most reckless manner. On Oct. 24 he is charged 2 shillings for Hyson and 1 shilling 6 pence for Congo. On Nov. 1 he is charged 2 shillings for tea and on the same day, which looks odd, 6 shillings 6 pence for tea. On the 9th of the mouth he buys a new teapot, the old one, one supposes, worn out with hard service. However, this tea lasts him till the end of the term, so that his tea costs him for the two months no more than 11 shillings, or $2.75, and as the price of tea at this time varied from 8 shillings to about 25 shillings we may conclude that he got through no more than a pound during the term.

In other words, this young man took for breakfast a slight repast of weak tea and bread and butter. Dinner was then served at 12, so that breakfast was only what the Indians call a "chota hazri." On sugar he spent 4 shillings, which means six pounds at 8 pence a pound. On candles he spent 24 shillings 8½ pence, or about 3 shillings a week. He burned wax candles, mold candles and "wax twist." Salt was a shilling a packet. On two occasions he bought sand. Was, then, the floor of his room sanded? It would seem so.

SOME COVETED SCRAWLS.

Rare Autographs For Which Immense Prices Have Been Paid.

The most prized autographs in the world are those of Shakespeare. Only seven are claimed to exist, three signatures to his will (each with a different spelling), two to conveyances of property, one in the folio edition of his plays (doubtful) and one in a Tudor translation of Montaigne. This last is in the British museum and cost over 3,000 guineas.

One thousand guineas was the price given by the late Mr. Alfred Morrison of Carlton House terrace for an autograph letter written by Marie Stuart to the archbishop of Guise. This and two other letters (one to the pope and the other to the king of France) were written by the unfortunate queen of Scots on the morning of her execution. The letter to the French king was destroyed during the days of the terror, while that to the pope is still preserved at the Vatican.

The well known bookseller Bernard Quaritch gave £1,000 for an autograph of Columbus, which was exhibited at the World's fair at Chicago. A Chicago autograph dealer is said to have offered to give $100,000, or over £20,000, for a genuine autograph of Shakespeare if brought to him within a year of making his offer. It was a safe bluff, for since the tragic fate of Chatterton no forger has cared to tackle the quaint scrawl of the Bard of Avon.—Collier's Weekly.

If He Were a Pope.

New York, Jan. 15.—In his Sunday sermon Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, in speaking of the lack of interest displayed by young people in religion, said—"If Protestantism were administered as Catholicism is, and I were the Protestant Pope, I would have every child learn that catechism from beginning to end, question and answer, although I would arrange with my cardinals to reconstruct certain portions of it to accord with the spirit of the Gospel."

A QUEER EXPLOSION.

HOW A MOUNTAIN LOCOMOTIVE CAME TO AN UNTIMELY END.

There Was Neither Fire in Her Furnace Nor Water in Her Boiler, and Yet She Managed to Blow Up in the Most Approved Style.

Mr. Henry Alquist, a prominent railroad man, relates the story of a curious wreck, the facts in which he will vouch for.

"It is such a remarkable thing," said Mr. Alquist to a reporter, "that I fear many will be inclined to brand it as 'pipe.' I have been railroading now for over 20 years, and never in all my varied experience have I seen such a unique and complete wreck as the one I speak of—that of engine 1,129 of the Rio Grande Western. Railroad men will tell you that locomotives seldom explode nowadays, but 1,129 did and in a very peculiar way.

"At the time this wreck occurred I was holding down the job of train dispatcher at Soldier Summit, Utah, and a tough old job it was. Never been there, I suppose? Well, Soldier Summit is a station on the top of one of the Wasatch divides, a bleak and lonely place, where the Rio Grande Western has a roundhouse and coal chute located. At the summit are long snowsheds covering the tracks. These sheds protect the line from the winter. And it is only due to this method that a train ever gets over the mountain.

"On both sides of the mountain the line winds down in a succession of winding curves to lessen the grade. Running off from the railway are switches, which, diverging from the grade, run up into the hills and gradually come to a dead level. These switchbacks, as they are called, are so constructed that they can be thrown from any point on the grade. And if a train breaks in two while ascending the steep grade the runaway cars can be switched on to one of these spurs, where the breakaway finally stops after it has run up the spur as far as the momentum attained in its descent will take it.

"All heavy trains have an extra locomotive before the grade is tackled. These are called helper engines and are kept in roundhouses at each side of the mountain with steam up.

"One night I got word from Clear Creek, a town in the western valley, that the 9:20 freight would be 30 minutes late on account of having to pull out a crippled engine, 1,129. She had burned out her flues and had to be hauled to Grand Junction for repairs.

"That night about 10 o'clock, after I had passed down the Salt Lake express, I heard the freight coughing up the long grade from Clear Creek. There was a snowstorm raging, and the wind howled around the station like the mischief. When the overdue 9:20 pulled into the shelter of the big snowsheds on the wind swept summit, the first thing I asked was, 'Where's the dead engine?'

"'Behind the doghouse!' shouted the 'con.' But as I held my lamp above my head I failed to see it. I was just about to call his attention to it when, during a lull in the storm, we plainly heard the familiar rattle of the rails as the runaway engine flew at lightning speed down the mountain. No. 1,129 had broken loose and was tearing down the grade to destruction.

"I jumped and pulled the lever which opened the spur switches. This I knew would prevent a smashup, as the engine would run up on the switchback and come to a stop. But I was too late. Almost at the same instant I threw the lever a terrific explosion was heard from far down the mountain. The runaway had exploded."

"I thought you said a moment ago, Mr. Alquist," interrupted The Scimitar man, "that the locomotive was a 'dead one?' If she had no fire under her boiler, how could she explode?"

"That was the only thing I couldn't understand myself," the railroad man replied. "I could easily see how the dead engine could break loose on that grade, and I could understand not hearing its descent during such a howling blizzard, but the explosion floored me. The only theory which in any way solved the mystery was that the old kettle was blown up by compressed air.

"You see, when the engine broke loose from the freight and started down the mountain the pistons in the cylinders began to act as air compressors. During the rough trip up her throttle probably jarred open, and as the speed increased with every revolution of her drivers her boiler soon filled with compressed air. It was not long before those flying pistons had worked up a pressure of nearly 500 pounds to the square inch, which came in faster than it could escape by the safety valve, and before the old machine reached Clear Creek her boiler let go."

Wanted to See the President.

The Washington Star says that a big, gawky country lad went to the White House the other day just as the president had gone out for a morning stroll.

"I wants ter see the president," he announced to the first man he met.

"Well, there goes the president now," said the man addressed, pointing to the president's retreating form.

"Dern my time!" the young man ejaculated. "He walks just like any other man," and the fellow struck out so that he could get close enough to see the president well.

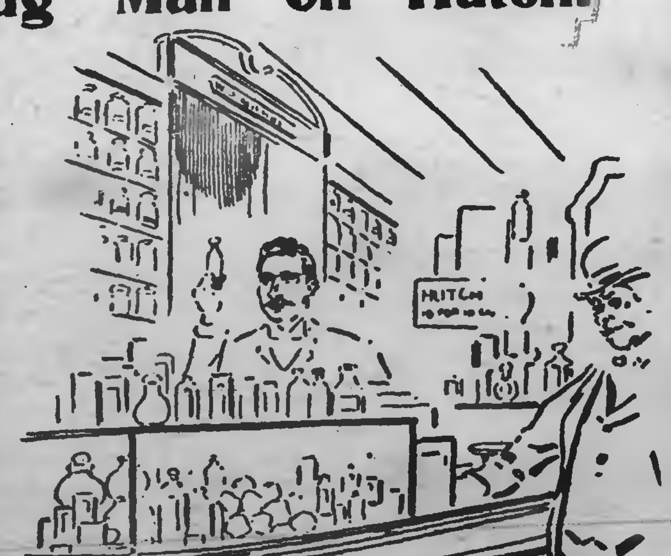
Expert Drug Man on Hutch.



W. J. Nichol, Phm. B., 170 King Street East, Toronto, is one of the foremost druggists in the city, and his establishment is replete with the most up-to-date and elegant appointments. Mr. Nichol has a very large trade and is an authority on drug matters. Speaking of Hutch, Mr. Nichol said that a number of people stated that it was doing them a great deal of good. He was selling more Hutch than any other dyspeptic treatment, and for that matter any other proprietary preparation. From the manner of its selling, Hutch was evidently making cures, and from that Mr. Nichol had no hesitation in recommending it. Hutch induces the secretion of the gastric juices, properly assimilates food, and by being slightly cathartic expels all excrement from the intestines.

A COMBINED FORWARD MOVEMENT BY BRITISH

British Officials Inclined to Credit Report That Warren Has Crossed Tugela River.

GEN. WHITE MAY BE RELIEVED BY THIS TIME.

General French's Forces Succeed in Dragging a Fifteen-Pounder Up a Mountain 1,000 Feet in Height, and Fire Upon Boers Who Scatter.

London, Jan. 15.—Up to the present the reported crossing of the Tugela River by Gen. Warren's division remains but rumor. Nevertheless, the whole tenor of such news as has dribbled in from South Africa during the last forty-eight hours indicates that a combined forward movement of a comprehensive character is proceeding It is not necessary to believe the unconfirmed stories of the Boers being in full retreat from Colenso, because it has been learned that a column is proceeding via Weenen to Helpmakaar to cut off their retreat,

Boers Abandon Positions.

At the same time credible information from many different sources indisputably points to momentous changes in the disposition of the Republics' forces. Advices from Pietermaritzburg, dated Saturday, Jan. 13, say that since their defeat on Jan. 6, the Boers have been removing their guns from the position south of Ladysmith. The same despatch confirms the report that the 13th Hussars reached Grobler's Kloof without meeting the Boers. As the trenches at Grobler's Kloof were perhaps the strongest position held by the Burghers, their vacation has considerably astonished the British.

Ladysmith Expects Relief.

Merchants of Pietermaritzburg have received messages from Ladysmith saying: "Bring up jam," etc., indicating that their Ladysmith agents anticipated an immediate opening of communications, while Ladysmith also heliographed the belief prevalent there on Jan. 13, that the Boers were moving and concentrating their forces elsewhere.

Buller All Ready To-day.

As corroborative of the British activity in the direction of the relief of Ladysmith, the Associated Press is able to say a despatch has been received in London from Gen. Buller to the effect that he expected that all the dispositions for a synchronous movement of the various columns against the besiegers would be completed this morning.

Under these circumstances, it is considered quite probable that the advance on the beleagured towns has commenced, and that fighting is progressing. Optimists go so far as to say it is expected that Ladysmith will be relieved to-night, if all goes well. The military men are divided in opinion as to whether Gen. Buller is at Springfield or personally directing the flank movenemt from Weenen.

A Hopeful Feeling.

The officials are inclined to credit the report that the British have crossed the Tugela River in that direction, although there is no confirmation of the report, and, altogether, there is a more hopeful feeling in official circles.

There is little news of importance from elsewhere. General French's forces have succeeded in dragging a fifteen-pounder to the summit of the steep, rock Coleskop, a thousand feet above the surrounding plain, and on Jan. 12 they successfully routed a Boer camp on the plaint three miles away from Sterkstroom.

Boers Ganer a Crop.

An interesting item of news is that 300 Boers escorted a party of reapers, have successfully garnered all the crops within two miles of the colonial camp at Bird's River, the British force being too weak to interfere.

A despatch from Pretoria says the Federal forces recommenced the bombardment of Mafeking during the morning of Friday, Jan. 12.

Crusade on War Office.

A partial development of the movement referred to in these despatches on Jan. 12, though by no means the main objective hinted at, can be recorded to-day in the formation of a strong committee of South Africans and ex-officials, with Lord Loch, the former Governor of Cape Colony, and British High Commissioner, as president.

The object is the remedying of the defects of the War Office. When the War Office sanctioned the formation of a corps of South Africans, acquainted with the topography of the country and the Dutch and Kaffir languages, the committee insisted that they must choose their own officers. The War Office demurred, but finally yielded.

Rushing to Enlist.

Consequently, prominent South Africans, crack shots and aquainted with every stream and kopje, are flocking to join the contingent. As a prominent enlisted man said to a representative of the Associated Press; 'We are not going to fight for promotion or the Victoria Cross. We simply want to meet the Boers on their own ground, and according to our own methods. Our object is to defeat the enemy, and not run splendid but useless risks."

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see" how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked in and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heerd you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.

Family Peacemakers.

More family troubles are adjusted by the magistrates in this city than the average person would willingly believe. There is hardly a day passes that every member of the minor judiciary is not called upon by a determined husband or wife, usually the latter, to issue a warrant. Nine cases out of ten the applicant is considerably excited and is eager to invoke the aid of the law in settling some trifling controversy. By calm argument and assurances the visitor can usually be persuaded to give the offender of her or his peace and happiness another chance, and a home is perhaps saved from being broken up.—Philadelphia Call.

His Opportunity.

"An operation for appendicitis," the surgeon assured the sufferer, "is rather a serious thing, of course, but it is not necessarily an alarming one, and it will demonstrate, moreover, just how much fortitude you have."

"Yes," replied the patient; "I suppose it will show just what's in me. Go ahead."—Chicago Tribune.

Picking Out the Waiters.

The safest plan to pursue at a reception where the waiters and male guests are clad in swallowtails is to jam your hands 'nto your trousers pockets and jingle a few coins when you meet a stranger. If his eyes begin to bulge and his hand commences to travel toward you, he's a waiter. This is a straight tip.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

RAN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Narrow Margin by Which a Man on a Railway Bridge Won.

A high trestle bridge more than a quarter of a mile long, supporting the single track of the Nickel Plate railroad, spans the valley of Grand river, east of Painesville, O. The bridge is little wider than the distance between the rails, and the ties are placed eight or ten inches apart, the space between being open to the river below.

A young man who crossed recently had a thrilling experience on the bridge. He had just passed the center when a fast train rounded the curve behind him. As the engine whistled he quickened his pace. With every step the train was rushing nearer, and there was not a moment to lose.

Once the young man stumbled and seemed about to fall, but quickly regained his balance and hurried on. As he reached the place for which he had started the train was close behind, and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease from dripping axle boxes, and his foot slipped wide as he left the track. His right hand, stretched blindly out before him, touched a round iron bar, bracing two parts of the bridge, and, with a grip like that of a drowning man, his fingers clasped around it. For a moment he swung in empty air. In another his left hand had found a place beside his right, and his feet touched the welcome edge of a brace below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that vibrated widely from side to side, moments seemed hours.

At last the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above. Unnerved by the trying experience, he lay for a moment stretched across the rails and, then rising to his feet, with blanched face and unsteady limbs, made his way to firm ground.—Cleveland Leader.

THE MILL RUNS ITSELF.

Economical Way of Doing Business on a Connecticut Farm.

Joe McCormick of the International Pulp company tells a delicious story of paper making in Connecticut, which shows that operating a mill is not such a serious matter as these big proprietors would have us believe. Strolling along the countryside in haymaking time, Mr. McCormick happened on a little paper mill which buzzed merrily in a shady dell, with everything clean and sweet around it. A look in the office showed no one there, and the visitor then wandered over the mill, hoping to find some one to whom he could talk business. The machine was humming along, and it seemed impossible that there should be no one in attendance. But even shouting failed to bring forth signs of life, and Mr. McCormick was about to leave when he spied some men in a hayfield some distance away.

"I say," he called out to the nearest one when he got within hearing, "who runs this mill?"

"I do," was the reply.

"Well, who's the owner?"

"Why, I am, to be sure."

"Do you mean to say that the mill runs itself?"

"Cert. We start her up at 6 in the morning, and she runs till 6 in the evening. This mill's been weaned, stranger; she don't need a nurse. While I'm getting in hay she puts half a ton of paper on the roll. Gee up, Bess!"—Paper Trade Journal.

Table Talk.

Rather curiously Roxane in "Cyrano de Bergerac" belongs to the modern type which dates from the days of the Hotel de Rambouillet and has always had its votaries in France. To those precieuses mere conversation was une betise. They liked declamations; discussion, not on the right of woman to the ballot, but whether she should be held a little higher than the angels or consent to be beloved. This phase of preciosity led up to the French salon, where that hothouse fashion of preparing an intellectual bill of fare for guests found its most acceptable phase.

Mme. Campan, whose advice may be said to have formed a whole generation of charming women, used to prescribe the subject of talk for dinner tables, just as certain coteries of women prescribe it today. This was her system: "With 12 at table, talk voyages and literature; with eight, the fine arts, science, invention; with six, politics or philosophy; with four, sentiment, romantic adventure; with two, talk of yourself; egoism belongs to the tete-a-tete."—Ellen Olney Kirk in Lippincott's.

A Race With the Sun.

The London Daily Mail says if an aerial machine were capable of traveling at any rate up to 1,000 miles an hour a traveler in it, starting westward from London at a speed of 660 miles an hour, would arrest the progress of time. If he started at 10 a. m., it would always be to him 10 a. m. Should he find his unending day monotonous, he could reverse his direction and get a quick succession of short days and nights of some six hours' duration, but he could regulate the length by the speed of his machine. Suppose he traveled from London one night at 10 o'clock westward at a speed of 1,000 miles per hour. He would soon experience the sensation of seeing the sun rising in the west where it had set a short time before.

"The young man who gets cheated," said the corn fed philosopher, "thinks the other fellow wonderfully smart, but the elderly person who goes up against it admits himself to be a fool."—Indianapolis Journal.

HUMAN BRAIN CELLS.

THEY REFUSE TO WORK UNDER TOO HIGH A PRESSURE.

Put on Too Much Steam and These Minute Organisms Go on Strike. Why Men Go Crazy or Become Absentminded.

Keeping pace with scientific thought and progress certain problems which in the past have been shelved for want of light being thrown upon them have been taken up again one by one to undergo further examination by the aid of improved science.

The newest revelation in this direction tends to the science of the mind and includes the following problems:

Why does a man act queerly when he is intoxicated?

Why is a man absentminded on occasions?

Why does a man sometimes become violently insane, often a dangerous, raving lunatic?

Such questions as these have puzzled our immediate fathers, who have hardly ever satisfactorily explained them away or indeed thrown much reliable light upon them. The human brain is composed of cells, and each cell is a simple bit of nerve substance, from one end of which, like an octopus, spring a number of tentacles, while from another part arises an arm different from them and of great length. The long arm is intended for transmitting impressions from one portion of the brain system to another, it being made to touch the tentacles or short arms of the next one to it, the latter in its turn effecting contact with a third cell, and so on.

Thus a message is conveyed and the mind gets its news. The entire brain is made up of these cells, whose number is legion and whose full strength is grouped in systems, these systems in turn being arranged in communities, the communities in clusters and finally the clusters in constellations, by which divisions they are known to physiologists.

So long as the mind is in a healthy condition each little cell, or brain octopus, attends to its business faithfully and gives no trouble, but as man generally is an animal who usually refuses to live the life spanned out by nature and adopts instead the life laid down by the modern artificial process of living, instituted forsooth by civilization, mental disturbances frequently arise through the brain becoming abused in various ways, from overwork and alcohol principally.

Your octopuslike brain cell is a living little thing, and it can endure a great deal of abuse from you, but if you should go a little too far it rebels and refuses to work any longer by breaking contact with its companion cells, which it can do by withdrawing its long arm and getting itself out of circuit. But this rebellion is conducted by whole groups of cells acting together in full harmony.

Now, the object of this "strike" is simply to avoid overwork, for each tiny cell has stored within its minute space only a certain amount of energy, but if you put on the high pressure this is easily consumed by the operation of the brain, and the organism breaks down from exhaustion. Now, take the first of the problems just stated. When a person takes too much to drink, the cells in those patches of the brain that are responsible for the conduct of muscular movement become affected and the man staggers.

When the dose is very large, the cells, which, although stupefied, have tried to keep their master on his legs, now cease working, and the man sleeps like one dead. Finally, if more than enough of alcoholic drink be taken, the effect on the cells is to paralyze them, and the unfortunate man dies.

There is some relation between extraordinary activity of the mind and insanity. Geniuses are apt to exhibit symptoms of mental alienation, and, singular to relate, their children are usually inferior to those of average men.

For instance, not to go out of England for example, Cromwell was a hypochondriac and had visions. Dean Swift inherited insanity and was himself not a little mad. Shelley was called by his friends "Mad Shelley." Charles Lamb went crazy. Johnson was another hypochondriac, Coleridge was a morbid maniac, Milton was of a morbid turn of mind, nearly approaching insanity (modern ideas of hades are largely formed on the description evolved by his diseased imagination), and Byron said he was visited by ghosts.

This mental alienation occurring in the foregoing cases shows that certain specific groups of brain cells have come under the baneful influence of the guiding spirit called talent or genius, which has used up all the energy stored in each cell and each group of cells, to the detriment of the whole, with the result that their ceasing work has brought about various types of insanity as depicted or, to phrase it more softly, induced disturbance of the mental equilibrium.

The remaining problem is absentmindedness. This is produced by a temporary disjunction of certain groups of cells. A man becomes so absorbed in his study of some particular subject and lends his whole mind to thought that the hard thinking disorganizes the groups of cells employed in the process of reflection, their tentacles being turned all one way, to the detriment of mental action generally, and so the man with the tentacles of his brain cells turned in the one direction passes along the streets lost to all observation or mental inception and does all manner of queer things because he is not conscious of what he is doing.—Pearson's Magazine.

Dr. Pierce's FAVORITE Prescription

J. S. Carlisle, Esq., of Manchester, Tenn., writes: "I have been prescribing your medicines for the last eighteen years in the Coffee County Poorhouse and Asylum. Your 'Golden Medical Discovery', 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets' are the best medicines for the diseases for which they are recommended, that I ever used. They saved my wife's life at the time of 'change of life'. I also cured the worst case of lunacy that we ever had with your 'Favorite Prescription'. The case had been under the doctor's care for three years. I gave your medicine and the patient became well. This was nine years ago, and she is still in good health. I have been recommending your medicines to many. I have told our druggist that if the people came back and said Dr. Pierce's medicines did not give satisfaction, to give them back their money and charge it to me. I have not once been called upon to refund. I think I have guaranteed seventy-five or one hundred cases."

A PICKPOCKET'S RUSE.

The Trick by Which He Once Got a Woman's Purse.

Jack Piggott, the noted pickpocket, used to tell a funny story about the difficulty he had in picking the pocket of a fashionably dressed woman who was looking in at the window of Shreve's jewelry store. It illustrates the hardships that the light fingered gentry are forced to endure in the pursuit of their profession and when first related was considered amusing not only by Piggott, but by the many to whom he confided his experience.

It was a cold winter evening, and the lady on whose purse Piggott had designs stood looking at the holiday finery so temptingly displayed. Piggott said that he tried all the arts known to his craft for the extraction of the wallet, but all in vain, until, as a last resort, he fished a toothpick from his pocket and, reaching around, tickled the lady's ear. Instinctively she raised her hand to brush away the invading insect or whatever it might be and in so doing let go of her pocketbook that she was carrying in the pocket of her coat.

It was only an instant, but it was long enough for the expert pickpocket to get in his work, and when she put her hand back her money was gone, and in the crowd around her she could not identify the pale faced, fashionably dressed young man at her side as the person who had robbed her, and if she had accused him there would have been no proof against him, as the swag was at once passed to a pal who stood ready to receive it and run. Piggott was not even arrested for that crime, and the lady's ludicrous outcries furnished material for mirth long after.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Aggravating the Offense.

"You are charged, young man," the magistrate said, not unkindly, "with scaring the complaining witness nearly out of his senses by putting him through some mock ceremony of initiation. I can make allowance for exuberance of spirits among college students, but sometimes this exuberance is carried too far."

"It was this way, your honor," exclaimed the youth who appeared to be the spokesman—"we were out for a little lark, and we caught a jay."

"The fine will be $2 and costs each," said his honor, his face hardening.—Chicago Tribune.

Some Ready Made Law.

Bourke Cockran studied law under Judge Theodore L. Dwight. One day the professor asked a question which seemed easy, but was really difficult. With his magnificent voice Cockran answered the best he could, adding as a saving clause, "Such, I take it, is the common law."

The good old doctor gleamed benignantly through his spectacles. "That would be all right, sir, if you had made it uncommon law."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

A Presentation.

Mr. Harry Beal, the popular chief accountant of the Peterborough Light & Power Co., was the recipient of an address, accompanied by an elegant gold-headed cane, by the members of Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, on Monday night, on the occasion of his marriage. Mr. Beal, who was taken completely by surprise, responded in fitting terms.

New Readers

We have just received a neat little book of new readings in Scotch and English for social gatherings. The elections are from the works of Mr John Imrie, Toronto and are up to date. For sale at Times Bookstore.

Charlotte-St. League.

The Epworth League of the Charlotte street Methodist church held the first meeting of the year on Monday, with the new President, S. Chas. Parks, in the chair. Encouraging reports were read from the different departments of the society of the work of the past year. A complete surprise was sprung on all who attended the meeting, in the form of an oyster supper, which was much enjoyed by all present. The League meets every Monday evening. All will be welcomed.

County Maps.

Only a few copies of the splendid new map of Peterborough County left. Mounted on canvas with wooden rollers, $2; paper 50c. Times Bookstore.

Arrested.

The chief received a telegram from Chief McGowan, of Smith's Falls, asking the local police to arrest Maud Gyle, a young woman of 20 years of age, on a charge of theft. The girl arrived in Peterborough from Smith's Falls only a day or two ago, but the police here soon located her. She was arrested by P. C. Adams yesterday and locked up until the morning, when Chief McGowan arrived and took her back to Smith's Falls.

The Foresters' Carnival

Court Peterborough, No. 22, Canadian Order of Foresters, have completed arrangements for a grand carnival to be held in the Charlotte street rink. A strong committee has the matter in hand, and judging by their past record, the carnival will be a great success.

They Meet To-Day.

The annual meeting of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society will be held in the Council Chamber to-day at one o'clock. As the course to be taken in regard to the annual exhibition, which is a matter of great importance to Peterborough, and in regard to the affairs in general of the society will be decided at this meeting it is a matter of public concern that the matter should be well attended. Merchants and others of the town should interest themselves in this. Representatives of the Board of Trade and of the Town and County Councils should be present.

JANUARY WEDDINGS.

A Brace of Marriages at St Peter's Cathedral Yesterday.

At seven o'clock yesterday morning the wedding of Miss Jennie Reilley, daughter of Mr. M. Reilley, to Mr. Joseph Kelly, of town, was happily celebrated at St. Peter's. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Joseph O'Sullivan. Quite a number of the friends of the young people were present.

The bride wore a handsome travelling costume of fawn with trimming of red, and hat to match. She carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Minnie Hickey, was prettily dressed in a gown of blue and also carried carnations. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Patrick Kelly, of Kingston.

After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the residence of the bride's father, 296 Stewart street, where a sumptuous wedding de juener was served and a pleasant time spent. A large number of very handsome presents were received. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly left on the noon G.T.R. train for a honeymoon trip east, after which they will return to Peterborough. They enter upon married life with the best wishes of many friends. The Times extends hearty congratulations.

BURKE—CADIGAN.

At the cathedral also at 8 o'clock yesterday the marriage took place of Mr. Dan Burke, Water street, to Miss Catherine Cadigan, daughter of Mr. John Cadigan, Ashburnham. The ceremony was performed by Ven. Archdeacon Casey. Miss Mary Cadigan was bridesmaid and Mr. Patrick Burke attended the groom. Both bride and bridesmaid were very prettily attired.

WOLVES IN THE NORTH.

Thrilling Experience of Mrs. Westlake in Cavendish.

Mr. John Westlake, brother of Mr. C. Westlake, the local liveryman, was in town the other day and brought the particulars of a thrilling encounter which his wife had with a pack of wolves. Mr. Westlake lives in Cavandash township, close to Ketchecum Lake, about forty miles drive from Peterborough.

It appears on Saturday Mrs. Westlake noticed that one of the sheep had been worried, as she supposed, by dogs, and she, accompanied by a dog, started off to look for the rest of the flock. She had not gone far from the house until she saw a huge wolf on the road in front of her, and in the act of devouring one of the sheep. She courageously advanced, with the dog as a protector, but the ferocious brute simply gazed at her a second or two and proceeded with the feast. It caught and killed another sheep before her eyes, and she, being unarmed, was helpless to prevent it. After the wolf had eaten its fill it retired.

There is a pack of seven wolves at least in the neighborhood, and their bold attacks on settlers' stock is becoming quite common.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The Lindsay Post says that the Chemical Works, at Fenelon Falls, consumes almost ten car loads of wood per day the year round. No wonder wood is getting scarce in the back country.

When crack meet crack then comes an argument.

It's a wise man who shapes his plans to meet the inevitable. The Times has employed a circulation manager to see to the circulation and delivery of this g.f.J. throughout the town and Ashburnham.

Dr. Burrows, of Lindsay, expects to go to South Africa with the second contingent.

The Royal Black Knights met last night.

Mr. T. Cavanagh shipped a very fine carload of horses to Jacobs of Montreal yesterday.

Fifty men from Ottawa have been secured by Mr. T. Cavanaugh for Messrs. Eddy & Jordan. They will work in the Blind River District.

Michael Dunn received his regular three months sentence at the police court yesterday.

The first carnival of the season will be given in the Lakefield skating rink on the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 23rd. A good list of prizes is offered and the Citizens' Band of the village will be in attendance.

The relatives of Miss Ferguson, who met her death by murder in Toronto, a few days ago, have retained Mr. E. B. Edwards, Q.C., in the prosecution of their case. Miss Ferguson's relatives reside in South Monaghan.

Twelve tenders have been received by the Public Works Department, at Ottawa, for the work on the new section of the Trent Valley Canal. The new section, extending from Trenton to Frankford will cost about $1,000,000.

Trumpet-Major Goldie of the Dragoons received a letter from Corporal Percy Price, one of the Peterborough boys about to leave for South Africa. It was written at Quebec. Corp. Price is an acting corporal there and has been engaged in breaking and training horses. The quarters at the citadel are not as comfortable as those at Montreal.

The congregational meeting in connection with the Charlotte street Methodist church took place last night, when reports were presented and business tansacted.

Yesterday an even dozen of new subscribers were added to the Times' lists.

At the regular meeting of Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, last evening a resolution was passed voting $25 to the National patriotic fund for the widows and orphans of soldiers.

PERSONALS.

Mr. Wilson, mayor of Hastings, was in town yesterday, and favored the Times with a call.

Miss McMillian, of Nelson, B.C., is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Stranger, 280 Hunter street.

Mr. Jimmy Spellman, of Hastings, was in town yesterday, on his way home for a week's trip through western Ontario.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS.

A Large and Fashionable Audience Greets Golf Club's Entertainment.

Last night the opera house was well filled with a fashionable audience, gathered to see the members of the golf club in amateur theatricals.

The first thing on the programme was the farce, "The Area Belle." Miss Helen Roger took the part of the belle of the kitchen. Her acting was very natural and sprightly, and she made a very pretty and taking housemaid. No one could blame the policeman, soldier and milkman for falling in love with her. Miss Archer was a good type of the vivacious widow, sprightly, talkative and fault-finding. Mr. Skill made a good "bobby," hardly loud enough for such a good specimen, but with a capital make-up. Mr. Napier was an ideal Grenadier and looked the part. Mr. Ritchie could not have improved the make-up of the non-talkative milkman.

The intermission was filled in with two songs by the ladies' vocal club, composed of Mrs. Seward, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Fessenden, Miss Stephens, Miss Hurley, Miss Miss A. Hall, Miss Kendry and Miss Davis, with Miss Grant as accompaniste. They gave two songs, "Greeting," Mendelssohn, and "Wanderers' Night Song," Rubenstein. They were beautifully rendered and deserved an encore.

The second part of the programme was "My Lord in Livery," with the following cast—

Lord Thirlmere, H. M. S. Phlegethon..... F. C. Napier
Spiggot, an old family butler......R. M. Hamilton
Hopkins, a footman..... ....H. Ritchie
Robert, a small page..... ...Allan Campbell
Sybil Amberley, daughter of Sir George Amberley...... .... Miss Archer
Laura and Rose, her friends........Miss Boucher, Miss Helen Rogers..................

God Save the Queen.

This play was really well done and every part was perfect, the ladies and Mrs. R. M. Hamilton being particularly in good fettle. Mr. Hamilton's footman could hardly be improved upon, and would not disgrace a professional company. But all characters were good, and it would be invidious for us to make any distinction.

We hope that the citizens of our town will see more of the amateurs in the future.

Ashburnham Council.

The council of Ashburnham met last night and awarded contracts for snow ploughing. The north end was given to W. Frith, and the south to George Tighe, at $40 each.

Election of Officers.

The Royal Black Preceptory, No. 261, Royal Black Knights of Ireland, met last night and elected officers for the ensuing year. The newly-elected officers were afterwards installed by Sir Knight Robert Weir, Past Grand Master of the Grand Black Chapter of British America. drowned. Heavy weather is reported Removed to Toronto.

Mr. M. M. Boyd, and family, of Bobcaygeon, have removed to Toronto for the balance of the winter. A carload of furniture and luggage was loaded at Fenelon Falls last Friday. Mr. Boyd will leave in a few days for British Columbia to look after his extensive lumbering interests on Vancouver Island and elsewhere, and will be absent a couple of months.

Women in Factories

Chicago, Jan. 16.—The first step in the war to be waged by the organizations of the Building Material Trades Council against the employment of women in factories has been taken by the Metal Polishers and Buffers' Union, the only one in the Council whose members have to compete with women laborers. They demanded yesterday that no more women be employed. One reason for the war against women labor is the protection of the health of the women. Manufacturers say the work does not injure women's health.

A Coffee Fact ! !

Many Highly Organized People Are Definitely and Distinctively

DISEASED BY COFFEE.

Try a Personal Test on Yourself.

Not with all people, but with many, particularly those that are highly organized—brain workers and their kind—the subtle alkaloids, contained in ordinary coffee, have a direct action upon the delicate nerves of the stomach, and by a pathological law the nervous system is gradually and surely affected.

The result will show in a variety of ways, such as headaches in some people; in others, bowel complications; in others, kidney trouble; in others, smothering sensations about the heart; in others, dyspepsia, and in many the power of the brain is impaired.

One thing is absolutely sure and incontrovertible,—when such people use coffee, even in moderate quantities, for an extended time, the slight hurt to the system, added to day by day, will finally pile up an account that must be settled, physically, and the injury will generally locate and centre in some one of the organs of the body.

Different people will be affected differently, but common sense should teach that if you have any sort of disease, or symptoms of disease, you should endeavor to locate the source and cause of that disease. It is not good reasoning to apply drugs in an effort to heal disease, and at the same time continue the use of some deleterious article that not only caused the disease in the beginning, but maintains it from day to day and adds the fixity of it.

The true, and only safe, plan is to search for the cause and destroy it, the Nature itself endeavors to set curative forces at work, and if the disease has not gone too long, only may expect a return of health. If the reader has any sort of physical ailment, and has been a user of coffee, let him experiment on himself by leaving off the coffee for a period, say of two weeks or a month, and at the same time shift over to the use of Postum Cereal Food Coffee, and take careful notice of the result.

Leaving off the coffee takes away the cause of disease that is established through the nervous system (when such disease has been caused by the use of coffee)—the food elements contained in Postum Food Coffee go instantly to work to replenish and rebuild the delicate gray substance found in the nerve centers throughout the body.

It is well to remember that perfect health cannot be maintained when even a slight portion of this delicate substance is destroyed or lacking in the body. There is a true and scientific reason for this statement which can be easily proven by personal test. Many people have been convinced of the fact that coffee is a [illegible] to leave it off. Such persons will find that they can make the change from ordinary coffee to Postum Food Coffee instantly, and the new coffee will supply the demand for the morning beverage, and the work of regeneration will begin in short order.

One thing must be carefully looked after, and that is to have the Postum Food Coffee boiled long enough to bring out the flavor and food elements. When prepared like ordinary coffee, that is, by boiling a few moments, or no boiling at all, it will not furnish the palatable beverage that it does when about four heaping teaspoons to the pint of water are used, and after being on the stove long enough to come up to a boiling bubble, it be allowed to remain boiling, slowly but steadily, full fifteen minutes after the first bubble is noticed. In no other way can good Postum Coffee be made, and it may be depended upon when made in this manner. Many use a high pot to prevent its boiling over, and stir it down from time to time, in order to get the good from all the material.

If the reader can use health as a means for gaining wealth or fame, and for bringing about the state of physical and mental peace and happiness that comes from a perfect poised condition of health, he can well afford to make this test, and make it at once. Postum is sold by all first-class grocers everywhere. It is in packages protected by the famous seal and trade mark.

enemy to-day made a determin- effort to capture two positions esars Camp and Wagon Hill. Cae rs camp was held by the first ttalion of the Manchester regi- ent.

the early hours of the morning, der cover of darkness, the Heidle brag commando succeeded in evad g our pickets making their way through the thorn bush and reaching the foot of the slope at half-past two. The alarm was raised by our sentries, but before the full extent of the danger could be realised the outlying sangars had been rushed and their defenders slain. On hearing the firing two companies of the Gordon Highlanders went to the assistance of the Manchesters. At first it was thought that he Boers were concentrating on the southern slope, where they had already secured a footing on the pleateau. Here however, their advance was checked by the steady volleys of our infantry and the deadly fire of an automatic gun. Lieut. Grubbe went out to see if any aid were needed by the troops stationed on the ridge near the town. He was not aware that the enemy had already captured the breastworks and called out to the sergeant. He received the reply "Here I am" and then suddenly disappeared from sight. Capt. Carnegie suspecting a ruse ordered the Gordons to fire a volley and to charge The enemy thereupon, fell back precipitately, leaving behind them the officer whom they had captured with so much presence of mind. The Lieut. was quite unhurt.

"By daybreak reinforcements of Gordons and of the rifle brigade had been hurried forward to the fighting line. Lieut.-Col. Dick Cunyingham, who was leading the Gordons out of camp, fell mortally wounded, being hit by a stray bullet while still close to the town. The 53rd battery of field artillery under Major Abdy, crossed the Klop river and shelled the ridge and reverse slope of the front position where the enemy were lying among the thorn bushes.

The enemy fought throughout with the most stubborn courage, being evidently determined to take the camp or die in the attempt.

"A terrific storm of rain and hail accompanied by peals of thunder, had burst over the camp during the fighting. This served to swell the streams into raging torrents. In their efforts to escape numbers of the enemy flung them selves into the current and were swept away. The struggle in this part of the field was now ended, and the finale was a terrific fusilade all along the line, the crash of which almost drowned the incessant thunder above.

"Meanwhile a more exciting contest was in progress in the direction of Wagon Hill. At 3 o'clock a storming party, furnished by the Harriswith commando crept slowly and cautiously along a donga in the valley which divides our posts from their camp. A well-timed rifle shots killed our pickets. The Boers then gradually reached the crest of the heights. Here a body of Light Horse was posted, but they were forced to retire before the advance of the Free Staters. With little to impede their progress the enemy soon came to an emplacement, where they surprised working parties of the Gordon Highlanders and the Sixtieth Rifles. Lt. Digby Jones of the Royal Engineers, collecting a handful of men made a gallant effort to hold the position, but the numbers were against him, and after a stubborn resistance, he was driven back, and the enemy got possession of the summit. Here it was that Lieut. McNaughton and 30 of the Gordons were captured, althoug not until every man among them was wounded.

"At five o'clock Col. Edwards with two squadrins of light horse arrived upon the scene and the 21st Battery of Field Artillery, under Major Blewett, came into action, preventing the storming party being reinforced from the Boer camp.

"At the same time the 18th Hussars and the 5th Lancers checked the movement from the spruit on our right flank. Nevertheless our position at this point had become critical. Major Bowen rallied a few rifles, but fell while leading them to the charge. His example was at once followed by Lieut. Todds, but the latter met the same fate.

"The enemy were making good the footing they had already secured in the emplacements, when Major Miller Walnutt, calling the scattered Gordons together charged in and drove them back. Having thus cleared the ground, he joined Lieut. Digby Jones in a newly prepared emplacement on the western shoulder.

"A pause ensued for a time, but the Boers were not yet finally beaten. Taking advantage of the storm now raging, they assayed to capture the position by another rush. Three of their leaders reached the parapet, but were shot down by Lieut. Digby Jones and Lieut. Walnutt, the latter of whom also fell.

"The renewed check effectually discouraged the assailants and the deadly duel was now practically to an end. Nevertheless, small parties of the braver spirits kept up a murderous fire on our men from behind the rock."

Modder River, Cape Colony, Jan. 17

There was a demonstration in force yesterday under Gen. Methuen, a division being engaged with the object of ascertaining the strength and disposition of the Boer force, and also in order to try and withdraw the Boers from Kimberley, where they have been active lately. The British discovered the Boers in great force, and being reinforced from the direction of Jacobsdall.

At 4.30 the artillery opened fire, the shells dropping in the Boer entrenchments with great precision. The attack was directed against the Boer left. The firing continued until sunset, mostly with artillery, although the Guards on the right fired some long range volleys. The The Boers reserved their fire until the British were returning to camp in the darkness, when six shells followed them. There were no casualties among the British troops.

FREE STATERS ARE TIRED.

London, Jan. 17.—The Durban correspondent of the Standard deals to-day with the numerous reports that the Free Staters have tired of the war and will abandon the struggle as soon as the British have crossed the border He mentions an extraordinary story with reference to a journey to President Kruger's son-in-law, Eloff, to Delagoa Bay in a German warship. According to this, Eloff has been making arrangements for President Kruger's escape through German Demaraland in the event of the capture of Pretoria.

BLUNDERS AT COLENSO.

London, Jan. 17.—The Telegraph publishes a long letter which was despatched by Bennett Burleigh on Dec. 28th. The famous war correspondent again refers to the battle of Colenso. He says that it begins to leak out that General Buller's orders were in more than one instance not only blunderingly executed but actually disregarded. Major-General Hart's error, as all now know, was terrible in its results. He marched the brigade in quarter column to within cannon and rifle fire of the Boers with disastrous consequences. The men were met by a deadly hurricane of Mauser bullets, and doubled to get into open order, but Major-General Hart reproved them and commanded the evolution to be done in quick and not double time.

LATEST NEWS FROM BULLER.

London, Jan. 17.—The War Office this afternoon posted this notice: "The following telegram is the only news whioch has been received in regard to General Buller's operations near Springfield."

The telegram then proceeds to report the death of a private from dysentery at Springfield bridge camp on Jan. 13 and the wounding of another private in a reconnaissance toward the Tugela River, Jan. 15.

ANXIETY IS UNAPPEASED.

London, Jan. 17.—Public anxiety regarding the advance on Ladysmith remains unappeased. The vague rumors that a general engagement is progressing are based solely on the belief that General Buller's arrangements to advance would be completed Monday or Tuesday at the latest.

THE SOUND OF GUNS.

Pietermaritzburg, Jan. 17. — Very heavy artillery firing was heard on Monday from the direction of Springfield, Frere and Chieveley. A correspondent at Delagoa Bay says that the Swazi Queen mother has, since King Bunn's death, killed all the chiefs who have been to England or Cape Town, and is now plotting with the Boers. He considers the situation grave and suggests the sending of regiments of Ghurkhas to Swaziland immediately. The same correspondent says that six Creusot guns and 50 tons of shells were landed from the French Messageries steamer Gironde, in December, under the nose of two British cruisers and despatched to Pretoria.

METHUEN TO BE RECALLED.

London, Jan. 17.—When the London clubs have been filled for weeks with gossip about General Methuen's relations with his officers and soldiers, and his responsibility for the slaughter of the Highland Brigade, it has required self-restraint for the editors to keep the controversy but of print. A report published in Liverpool that Major-General Wauchope, on the eve of the battle of Magersfontein, wrote a letter stating that he had been ordered to perform an impossible task, against which he had vainly remonstrated, and that he had either to obey or surrender his sword, has been followed at once by statements in print that Gen. Methuen would be superseded.

The War Office has not been in ignorance of the reports with which every London club is now filled, and decided to recall General Methuen fully a week ago, as announced in these despatches. This step was necessary in order to maintain the morale of the British army at Modder River, whose confidence in him has been fatally impaired, as is proved by private letters from officers and men, constantly appearing in print.

It is one of the most painful affairs in military annals. General Methuen is one of the pet soldiers of the Guards and a great favorite in London society. His wonderful skill as a tactician was displayed in the organization of the Jubilee procession in 1897, which was planned and worked out by him in detail. His irritability and nervousness were observed by members of his staff on the way to the Cape, ad the evidence is clear that he was unequal to the continuous strain and excitement caused by the protracted battle of Modder River, while the precision and self-will with which he enforced his dangerous tactics at Magersfontein are held to be proofs of unsound judgment.

AN UPRISING OF THE MATABELES.

Natives to the Number of Five hundred Said to Have Revolted Against Brittsh, Encouraged by the French.

Paris, Jan. 17.—Advices from Mauritius (British) tell of an outbreak of 500 Matabele troops in the island. The natives sacked the village of Vacoas, killing three persons. Women were the chief victims of the raid. It is stated that French officers commanding the Matabeles, encouraged the outbreak.

A Cape Brigade.

Cape Town, Jan. 17.—Col. Bailey and Capt. Brabant, bot of whom are members of the Cape Parliament, are expected to arrive here to-day, to attend an enquiry in regard to the proposed changes in the organization of the South African Irregulars. These troops say they understand Boer tactics thoroughly, and want their own officers, instead of Imperial officers. It is rumored that Gen. Sir Frederick Carrington will command this brigade.

Did Not Disagree.

London, aJn. 17.—Capt. Erle, of the Grenadiers' Guards, arrived here from South Africa to-day. He denies the story of disagreement between Gens. Methuen and Wauchope before the battle of Magersfontein. Neverthell a Scotch member will bring the question of the losses of the Highland Brigade in that battle before Parliament.

Gatacre Protests.

Cape Town, aJn. 17.—Gen. Gatacre has sent a protest to the Boer commandant at Stormberg against the wives and daughters of burghers being allowed to live near the camp.

General Gatacre also denies the allegation made by the Boers that the British concealed ammunition in ambulances.

OUTLINE OF GEN. BULLER'S PLAN.

A Concentric Attack on Transvaal Forces, the Most Effective Sort, Believed to Have Been Carefully Arranged.

London, aJn. 17.—The Morning Post's military critic says—Assuming that Buller has gone to the left with two divisions, leaving one before Chieveley, he probably moved with the first to Frere and Springfield and thence to Potgieter's Drift. For the second he would choose another passage, as twenty thousand men would take the best part of one day to a passage at one point.

The division from Estcourt, moving off when Buller moved from Frere, would be screened from the enemy's observation. The movement, continued, would take it to a point west of Potgieter's Drift. If not a passage to the westward, according to maps, is that on the road to Bethany. It is possible that General Warren's division followed that road. In that case, after crossing the river, it would have a very long march. It is about thirty miles, or two days, to Dewdrop, from Estcourt. By way of Bethany to Dewdrop it is not less than 30 miles, or about a week's march, so that if Warren left Estcourt on Tuesday or Wednesday last, he may to-day be within a day's march of Dewdrop.

Dewdrop is about ten miles from Potgier's Drift, and the Boer position, which fronts Buller, is about half way between the Drift and Dewdrop.

If, therefore, while Buller was attacking the Boers Warren came up along the road from Bethany, he would strike from a point beyond the Boers' flank behind the centre of their position. Thus the two forces would be delivering on the battle field a concentric attack, the most effective form of attack, and the direction of Warren's advance would, if he were successful, carry his troops right into Ladysmith.

BOERS AT COLESBERG HARASSED BY BRITISH.

General French Continues to Administer Daily Checks on the Enemy.

MORE MILITIA BATTALIONS TO BE MOBILIZED.

Mafeking Still Holds Out, and There Was no Likilhood of Capitulation Six Days Ago—Troops Now Orders Are Considered to be Sufficient.

London, Jan. 17.—General French still continues to administer daily checks to the Boers who are fighting the fight of desperate men to prevent their being surrounded and cut off from their line of retreat. Yesterday a battle was aged around Coleskop, a steep and rock eminence near Colesberg which dominates the left flank of the enemy, and is evidently of vast importance judging by the efforts the Boers made to capture it and the British to retain it. General French has performed a feat performed frequently in British annals, and has planted artillery on the top of an almost impossible eminence, from which the kopjes occupied by the Boers ran be searched and kept clear. The Boers yesterday used a fifteen-pounder captured from General Gatacre, but this was silenced by the British gunners, who played upon the Boer positions all day. French has now two guns on the summit of Coleskop and is apparently in a strong position, though be would do well to remember Majuba and provide against a repetition of that disaster which was caused by occupation of a hilltop which Colley thought impregnable. Now that two shiploads of reinforcements have been sent to General French it is likely that we may shortly hear of an advance on his part which will result in the crushing defeat of the Boers.

FRENCH MAKES HEADWAY.

Rensburg, Cape Colony, Jan. 16.—The Boers opened an artillery duel this morning, using a captured British fifteen pounder, which the British gunners ultimately silenced. The British kept up a searching fire all day long on the Boer Kopjes and also dragged up another gun to the summit of Colekop.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR FRENCH.

London, Jan. 17.—General French's success though consoling to the British is recognized as being only a side issue. The country is grateful to learn that the British losses in this engagement were only six men killed and five wounded.

NO FURTHER REINFORCEMENTS.

London, Jan. 17.—The War Office has wired to countermand the departure from Egypt of a number of officers who were previously ordered to South Africa. The Daily Chronicle, commenting upon this and upon other news related to it says: "There are some curious reports in circulation, apparently with some authenticity behind them, which point to the stoppage of the despatch of further reinforcements when the troops now mobilized shall have embarked. The new cavalry brigade is not to leave England at present."

FIVE NEW BATTERIES.

London, Jan. 17.—The War Office has issued orders for the formation of five new batteries.

Seventeen more militia battalions will be embodied in the course of a fortnight. These are fourteen infantry battalions and eleven cavalry regiments in the country. The War Office has placed an order for 32,000,000 cartridges in cases. The Yeomanry Committee announces that it has accepted 3,000 out of the 10,000 which it wishes to raise and still has 20,000 applicants to be examined.

MAFEKING STILL HOLDS OUT.

Lorenzo, Marquez, Jan. 17.—Six days ago Mafeking was still holding its own with no likelihood of capitulation. The garrison has a sufficiency of cattle and tinned meats. The former, however, are not in good codition. The scare leading to the surrender of Vryburg was carefully engineered by local members of the Bond, who plotted for the Boers to occupy the town, with the result that the waverers were induced to join the enemy. As to the importation of field guns via Delagoa Bay, it is openly stated at Johannesburg that twenty were smugled through. A Boer agent was severely bitten recently. He bought a quantity of goods which arrived at Lorenzo Marquez, and now finds that there is no chance of getting the goods or a refund of the substantial sum he paid for them.

ADMIRAL TAKES A COURSE.

London, Jan. 17.—Rear-Admiral Lord Charles Bersford is attending the Naval Signalling School in H.M.S. Victory at Portsmouth, for a course of instruction preparatory to taking up his post as second in command of the Mediterrean Squadron.

A Fireman's Tragic Death.

Montreal Jan. 17.—Capt. Philip H. Gibson, acting sub-chief, and one of the most popular members of the Montreal fire brigade lost his life yesterday under terribly shocking circumstances. Capt. Gibson returned from a call by a false alarm about half past eight, and was proceeding to his private apartments over No. 2 station on St. Gabriel street. When he reached the top of the stairway on the second story he stopped to take off his heavy boots. He leaned against the balustrade, overbalanced himself and fell down the well of the staircase, some twenty-five feet to the ground. The Notre Dame hospital ambulance was at once sent for, and the injured man was conveyed to that institution in a few minutes, but he died while still in the ambulance. Deceased had sustained a fracture of the base of the skull and a large scalp wound.

Anarchy in Venezuela.

Paris, Jan. 17.—A despatch from Carcoas is published here saying anarchy prevails in Venezuela. Owing to their refusal to advance the Government the money the directors of the banks of Caracas and Venesula, including a Frenchman, M. Montauban, and other foreign notabilities have been arrested and thrown into the fortress. The representations of the French charge d'affairs, it is added, have been disregarded, and the French colony at Caracas energetically demands that the French Atlantic squadron be despatched to the coast of Venezuela.

Nothing in the Statement.

Paris, Jan. 17.—The statement in the London Morning Post, that the Washington Administration has receivletters from France, Germany, Great Britain and Russia demanding knowledge of the intentions of the United States as to the "open door" in China, and the future of the Philippines, was news to the Foreign Office officials here. They said it was the first time they had heard of any such action.

The Patriotic Fund.

Ottawa, Jan. 17.—Mr. J. M. Courtney Deputy Minister of Finance and treasurer of the patriotic fund, has received a subscription of $2,000 from the Molsons Bank and $15 from Mr. Chas. H. Cunningham, bringing the total received up to date $29,733.66. To this must be added $15,000 donated by the C.P.R. and $5,000 by the Bank of Nova Scotia, notice of which has been received by the treasurer. This makes the total contributions to the Canadian contingent Patriotic Fund to date $49,733.66 This is higly satisfactory, as the association was only organized by his Excellency a few days ago.

Will Accept Four Million Dollars.

New York, Jan. 17.—Captain W. V. Christmas Dirckinck-Holmfeld, one of the accredited agents of the Danish Government in the pending negotiation looking to the sale to the United States of the Danish West Indies, believes that the negotiations will soon reach a satisfactory termination. The price first demanded was $12,000,000, then it was reduced to $7,500,000, but now the Danish Government is willing to accept $4,000,000, which sum will about enable the authorities of Denmark to pay the colonial indebtness.

Will Release the Bundesrath.

Berlin, Jan. 17.—An official telegram from London says the British Government has declared that now the inquiry nito the seizure of the Bundesrath is concluded, her release may be expected immediately and a satisfactory settlement of the pending difficulties may be regarded as certain. Measures it is added, will also be taken to prevent a recurrence of similar incidents.

The Foreign Office officials informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that Great Britain admits no contraband of war was found on the Bundesrath, and promises that the steamer will be released to-day or to-morrow.

Rosebery has Resigned.

New York, Jan. 17.—A special to the World from London, says Lord Roseberry has resigned the presidency of the Eighty Club, in which he succeeded Gladstone. This club was founded in 1880 to utilize the energies of young Liberals at the universities and in the professions, and to train them for parliament. Lord Roseberry's resignation is regarded in political circles as an indication that he desires to place himself in a position where he can accept office in a reconstructed Unionist Ministry.

The Synod Enthusiastic

Montreal, Jan. 17.—There was an impressive outburst of loyalty at the opening ofthe Diocesan Synod of the Church of England, which convened in Synod hall this afternoon. His Lordship Bishop Bond, in closing his opening charge to the delegates, referred to the South African war. He said that Great Britain was fighting not for conquest or gold, but freedom, justice, law, and civilization, and the cause must triumph. They must grieve for their aged Queen, whose beneficient reign was closing in bloodshed, and that they would all pray that peace would soon be restored and England's arms victorious. Bishop Bond's remarks evoked the greatest enthusiasm, and when he closed all the delegates rose to their feet and sang the National Anthem amidst the greatest enthusiasm.

Glimpses of ...South Africa...

IN PEACE AND IN WAR

By WYMBLE FLEMMING

a Native Afrikander, born in Cape Colony—Lived in Africa 28 years—Travelled extensively in all parts of Africa—Familiar with every inch of ground where fighting is going on—Large experience as a newspaper correspondent for Cape, English and American papers—Author of many sketches on South African life—For many years connected with the American Consular Service at Port Elizabeth, now temporarily residing in America while preparing the literary portion of this volume.

The developments of the war in South Africa, its serious conflicts, the deeds of heroism of its participants, the great massing of Boer Armies and the unprecedented forward movement of British troops to the Cape, coupled with a universal desire for information concerning a country of which very little is known, have intensified public interest in the subject to an extent hitherto unequalled. With characteristic enterprise, this paper will supply the demand for South African literature that present conditions have created. To this end we now offer our readers the first number of a magnificent art series to be issued in weekly parts under the title of "GLIMPSES OF SOUTH AFRICA In Peace and in War." Illustrating and describing the current military events of the day and the sights and the scenes throughout all South Africa by aid of camera, pencil and pen, presenting a pictoral history of the

WHAT COULD AN ANTI-BRITISH COALITION DO?

Notwithstanding the outcry in Germany against the seizure of the Bundesrath and the Herzog and the searching of another German vessel at Aden, we find it hard to believe that Kaiser Wilhelm II. will depart from the position of neutrality which he has deliberately adopted. Suppose, however, for the sake of argument, that he were driven by popular clamor into an alliance with France and Russia, what would such a combination accomplish against Great Britain?

On paper, the three great Continental powers possess a larger number of battleships than does Great Britain, but they are not ready for action, as most of England's are, and M. Lockroy, the ex-Minister of Marine, has lately admitted that the French vessels at all events could not be made ready in time for effective cooperation. We may, probably, take for granted, therefore, that England's fleet would prove invincible, so far as naval operation on a large scale are concerned. It seems equally certain that England's carrying trade would be seriously obstructed by hostile commerce destroyers, and that, for her food supplies, she would have to rely mainly upon neutral vessels, and, especially, on those flying the United States flag. The anti-British coalition would, of course, desire to treat food as contraband of war, and would contend that England has herself furnished the precedent for such treatment by seizing American flour in a neutral Dutch vessel bound for a neutral Portuguese port. It would be argued that, a fortiori, flour should be seizable in transit under a neutral flag to an enemy's port.

The United States, however, would not be bound by an unfortunate British precedent. If the United States now takes promptly and firmly, a sound position in relation to these questions should be qualified to demand that her neutrality should be respected by an anti-British coalition, and respected they undoubtedly would be, least that country should be driven to uphold them by cooperation with England. Under such circumstances, the practical effect of a prolonged contest between England and a Continental alliance would be, so far as ocean commerce is concerned, to reverse the consequences of the American Civil War, and place the greater part of England's carrying trade under the Stars and Stripes.

On the other hand, it is probable that Germany would lose not only the whole of her ocean commerce, but also all of her transmarine acquisitions. The same fate would befall the French export and import trade, and all of the French insular possessions, with the possible exception of Madagascar. France, however, would be in a better defensive position than Germany, because a large part of her colonial empire is continental, and shielded from invasion, and England has no land force available for the conquest of Algeria, Tunis, West Africa, Siam and Tonquin. The loss, however, of the French West Indies and of the islands in other parts of the globe, upon which France has relied for coaling stations, would be a sufficiently grave disaster, while the virtual annihilation of the French and German merchant navies, which have been fostered by subsidies, would be an economic catastrophe.

How could the allies strike back at England? We do not believe that they would attempt to deal a blow at her commercial interests in China by a further and sweeping mutilation of the Middle Kingdom, for, by such an act, they would be likely to arouse the enmity of the United States, a thing which they must wish to avoid. There are two points, however, in which England is vulnerable, and at which she might be assailed without affording any pretext for American intervention. We refer, of course, to Egypt and India, both of which countries may be reached by land. An anti-British coalition could undoubtedly count upon the subservience of Turkey, and a Franco-German force could be despatched through Asia Minor and Syria to the Nile Valley. That a Russian invasion of India would severely strain the resources of the Calcutta Government to military expert would dispute, especially at this time, when a large portion of the white troops has been withdrawn from the Anglo-Indian army for service in South Africa and cannot be replaced. As regards the success of such an invasion, much, of course, would depend upon the attitude of the Ameer of Afghanistan, of the Indian vassal Rajahs and of the subject populations. For the moment, there are no signs of disaffection in those quarters, and should this propitious state of things continue, the Anglo-Indian army, having the advantage of position, might be able to beat back the Russians. The Anglo-Indian forces, however, have not been pitted against white soldiers for upward of a century, and should they encounter one serious defeat, the whole fabric of British rule in India, which is built upon prestige, might topple. That the small British force in the Nile Valley could make head against a Franco-German army is certainly improbable; at all events, communication with India by way of the Suez Canal would be, for a considerable time, suspended.

In the worst event for England, it seems evident that Russia and France would be the only gainers. The two powers last named might console themselves for the ruin of their commerce, the one with Egypt, the other with India. For Germany, there could be no compensation commensurate with the loss of her highly prized colonial possessions and her hard-won ocean trade. That is why we cannot believe that Kaiser Wilhelm II. will yield to the clamor of his subjects and enter an anti-British coalition.

COL. HUGHES.

The Bobcaygeon Independent thus raps Gen. Hutton—"A cablegram announces that Col. Sam Hughes has not been able to procure appointment at Cape Town, owing to a report by Gen. Hutton to the War Office. Col. Sam's conduct to his superior officer may not have been quite as Chesterfieldian as it might have been, but there is good reason to believe that the General was not without blame in the original cause of their ill-feeling. When Hutton deprived Col. Sam of his command of the 1st Contingent, that was enough. The Minister of Militia permitted Col. Sam to go with the Contingent to Cape Town, and when there he might have been allowed to go to the front. He would certainly have been a useful man, and men of some use are needed in the front, Heaven knows. Hutton is a characteristic example of the military pig-headed know-it-allness that has made such a sorry exhibition of the Empire before a pack of untrained Dutch farmers."

A THIRD CONTINGENT.

The offer of Lord Strathcona to equip and maintain a force of 400 mounted men for service in South Africa during the war has been accepted by the government, and steps will be taken at once to recruit the force in Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia. It will be composed exclusively of expert horsemen and good rifle shots, a class of men to be found in large numbers in the western portions of the Dominion. The force will, it is understood, be augmented by 100 men proferred for service in the Transvaal by the British Columbia legislature. So that Canada will send a third contribution of the very best class of soldiers, scouts, to accomplish the work needed to be done in subduing the Boers. Lord Strathcona has challenged the admiration and earned the gratitude of every Canadian patriot for his splendid offer, and the men who may be privileged to serve in the Strathcona Horse will, we are confident, appreciate the distinction and reflect honor upon Canada.

LOYAL ONTARIO.

In view of the fact that Ontario is the premier province of the Dominion, it should have been the first to tender a contingent to the mother country. British Columbia has this distinction, having offered to supplement Lord Strathcona's Contingent of 400 mounted cowboys to the extent of 100. Let Ontario at once offer 300 more. This will make 800 in all—a force which is sorely needed in this war.

Poisonous Spiders.

London, Jan. 16.—Government officials in England have just learned that British soldiers in the Transvaal are exposed in a measure to another danger besides the bullets of the Boers. This information has come to them from Mr. Distant, a well-known naturalist, who recently returned to England after spending several months in the Transvaal, whither he went for the purpose of collecting strange insects. His mission was successful, and among the insects which he brought home were specimens of a murderous spider.

The scientific name of the spider is harpactira gigas, and according to Mr. Distant it is a most dangerous insect, both to man and beast, for the reason that it can inject poison into any animal that it touches. A frog bitten by one of these spiders dies at once, and larger animals suffer excruciating pain for a great while, and are even in danger of death. Even a dead spider is dangerous. Mr. Distant saw a kitten eat a spider which had just been killed, and at once the animal manifested signs of great agony. Her whole body became cramped; her breath came and went in gasps, and at one time she seemed to be at the point of death. For several hours she endured this horrible pain, and then the effects of the venom ceased and she gradually recovered.

It is supposed that this poison consists of a pungent fluid, and that it is exuded from the hairs with which the spider's body is covered. Similar poisonous hairs are to be found on the bird spider of South America, and, according to travellers, they never fail to produce a great irritation on the human skin whenever they come in contact with them.

Zulus Become Restless.

Pietermaritzburg, Jan. 16.—The restlessness of the Zulus is increasing. Many of them are on the verge of starvation, and there have been several instances of looting stores. It is feared the Magistrates will not be able to restrain the warriors much longer. It is asserted they are anxious to attack the Boers.

THE Canada Business College
CHATHAM, ONT.
CANADA'S GREATEST SCHOOL OF SHORTHAND AND BUSINESS

PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHERS SHOULD NOTICE

This institute has prepared over seventy teachers for other Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States, more than twice as many as all other Business Colleges in Canada, combined, have so placed.

The proprietors of five of the leading business colleges in Western Ontario, who are to-day among our strongest opponents in the field of Shorthand and Business training, received THEIR training under the Principal of this institution. Besides these there are five others holding leading positions as teachers in Business Colleges in Ontario.

Since Sept 1st, seven of our pupils have accepted positions as teachers in Business Colleges and Commercial Schools in Canada and the United States; another is now negotiating for a similar opening in a Business College in a leading American city, and there are five more calls of this kind on hand still.

DOES IT NOT PAY TO ATTEND THE BEST! You must decide.
128 of our pupils secured good positions in seventeen months, and the good work of placing our students still continues.

BLACK DAYS RECALLED

The Asiatic Cholera in Peterborough in 1823.

FORTY DEATHS RESULTED

The Sorrows of The First Emigrants Vividly Described.

The Dead were Placed in a Great Hole and Covered Up—The Dread Disease Brought From Europe.

It is about 76 years ago since that dread scourge—Asiatic Cholera—visited this country. In the year 1823, a party of emigrants arrived, and camped on what was then known as Scott's plains, on the spot where the bridge works now stands. Soon after their arrival cholera broke out, and resulted in a large number of deaths.

On the arrival of the party in a huge punt, they landed, and started life under canvas. The dread disease at once broke out, and the deaths amongst them was appaling.

THE FIRST CASE.

The first case was reported on the way up the Otonabee river, when one of the emigrants died before reaching the "plains." At that time there was only five log shanties in Peterborough, and a "blazed" roadway was all that guided the brave pioneer to points in and around the "plains."

NO MEDICAL SUPPLIES.

There was no medical supplies in those early days, and the unfortunate victims were left to suffer and die without help. These miserable people, after a long and weary battle were landedat Cobourg, where they portaged over to Rice lake, a distance of 12 miles, with no means of transporting their effects except on their backs. At Harwood, boats were either hired or roughly constructed, and the navigation of the Otonabee began.

These people came mostly from Ireland, and followed the emigration of the Hon. Peter Robinson, which took place in 1821.

A HUGE GRAVE.

A huge hole was dug on the bank of the river, only a few rods from the camp, where upwards of forty bodies were interred.

GRUESOME RELICS.

When the late Robert Romaine dug out the foundation for what is now the Bridge works, in 1875, the bones of the unfortunate victims of the cholera were found. About forty skulls, it is said were unearthed, many of them in a good state of preservation.

The above information was given to the Times by the son of one of the early pioneers, who says he often heard his father tell of the terrible visitation.

Queer Cards of Shrewd Lawyers.

Not all men of the legal profession are content with the severe inscription on their cards to which etiquette and custom usually confine them. An Ohio lawyer who makes a specialty of collections calls attention to this fact by a novel device printed on his cards and letter heads. On a great red splotch intended to represent a drop of blood are the words, "Claims collected in cold blood," the capital "C" for the three first letters of those words being of sufficient size to encircle the other words.

In Maryville, Mo., a lawyer presents his portrait on his card, with the suggestive motto: "He that is not with you is against you. See me early."

A Scotch Scheme.

The following appears in a Glasgow paper. It would be interesting to know whether it has led to business. If so, the supply of grand pianos in Scotland must be considerably in excess of the demand.

"Lady having large drawin room would gladly store grand pian in return for use; references given."—London Truth.

Germany is Impatient Now.

Berlin, Jan. 16.—The Berlin correspondent of the Cologne Gazette sends an inspired communication to his paper, in which Great Britain is energetically called on to end the interminable delays in regard to the affair of the steamship Bundesrath. He declares the feeling over the matter is increasing in Germany, and that Great Britain should make prompt amends and guarantee that such high-handed proceedings will not occur again, if she is desirous of preserving present friendly relations between the two countries.

REMONSTRANCE TO THE BOERS.

Instructions Sent to the American Consul at Pretoria.

Washington, Jan. 16.—Despite the second refusal of the Transvaal Government to accord recognition to the United States Consul at Pretoria as to the representative of British interests in the Transvaal, the State Department has not abandoned its efforts in the matter. W. Stanley Hollis, the Consul ad interim at Pretoria, has been directed to continue to look after the comfort of British prisoners of war within the limitations of his functions prescribed by the Boers who, as told in the New York Sun, have declined to view Mr. Hollis in any save a personal capacity so far as his representation of Great Britain is concerned. He receives, of course, full official recognition in his capacity as the agent of the United States.

The instructions sent to ex-Consul Macrum concerning the ruling of the Boers that he could not be permitted to continue his efforts to ameliorate the condition of the British prisoners because their control was with the military commanders in the field and outside consular jurisdiction have been repeated to Mr. Hollis. These instructions in effect direct him to represent to the Boer Government that the practice of mutual representation of a belligerent in an enemy's territory had been established among civilized nations and was regarded as right and proper for humane and other reasons.

The main issue involved in the negotiations is whether the Boers wish to have it understood that they are suspicious of the neutrality of the United States and have adopted their present policy as a snub to this Government. The matter has become very embarrassing to the administration which has been placed before the world in the attitude of a great nation discredited by a small one.

Jimmy and the Baby.

Jimmy's mother kept cows and sold milk. Jimmy himself had nothing to do with the cows, though sometimes he used to carry the milk pail to his mother's customers. The customers all liked Jimmy, with his round, freckled face and bashful grin, and they used to ask him how business was, for, although Jimmy was only 13 years old, he had a business. He made coffins—baby coffins—and sold them to the undertaker. They were nice pine coffins, with all the edges carefully joined. Jimmy received 50 cents for each one.

One day Jimmy stopped at the house of one of his mother's customers to leave some milk. A little boy met him at the door.

"We've got a new baby!" said the little boy. "Would you like to see it?"

Jimmy nodded. The little boy's aunt laughingly led Jimmy to the cradle where the new baby was. Jimmy gazed at the infant for some time, speechless with admiration or some such emotion.

"What do you think of it, Jimmy?" asked the aunt.

Jimmy grinned.

"I guess I'll have to make a nice little coffin when I go home," he said.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Boers Great Pioneers.

The Boer is the ideal pioneer. From the days of the great trek, in 1837, and even before that he opened up countries hitherto unexplored by a white man. A great deal of fuss has been made of mighty travelers, English and foreign, who have traversed Africa, to the vast pecuniary benefit of their publishers and with no small meed of fame to themselves, but there was scarcely one of the old voortrekkers and hunters of the forties and fifties who did not accomplish feats of endurance, pluck and lengthy travel which were ten times as trying.—London Mail.

Successive Waves.

The following waif is going the rounds of the state press: We are told of a young lady in a neighboring town who waved her hand at a stranger, and in three days they were married. Two days later the young lady waved a flatiron at her husband, and the next evening he came home waving a divorce.—Nashville Banner.

CLEVER, BUT SOULLESS.

One Woman's New Way in Which to Pay Social Debts.

"I don't know much of the ways of fashionable people," said a young physician not long ago, "for I am not in society, but if many society women are like one I know here in town I think I'm safer to be out of it. It was not this season, but it wasn't so long ago but that plenty of people can remember the circumstances. I had among my patients an elderly woman who lived with the daughter's family. The daughter lived, if not beyond her means, at least up to the very edge, went out a great deal and was entertained a great deal.

"The mother fell sick with a complaint which I knew would prove fatal. I did not inform the family till one day the daughter asked me to tell her frankly what her mother's condition was and just how long she could live. I told her that the old lady could not possibly last more than a fortnight. She begged me not to let anybody know how serious the case was. She didn't want her young daughters distressed, she said.

"Of course I told nobody, and just a week after that I read in the papers that Mrs. Dash, the daughter of my dying patient, had sent out invitations for a large dancing party, to be given on an evening a fortnight away. My patient did not live as long as I had expected. The day after she died I read in the papers that 'owing to the sudden death of her mother Mrs. Dash had been compelled to recall her invitations.'

"She had never intended to give a ball. She could not have afforded it, and she 'bluffed.' I have cold shivers every time I see her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AN EXCITING LIFE.

Why the Chicago Girl's Brown Hair Turned Golden Hued.

"Gosh, Marier, but that wus a close shave!" exclaimed Uncle Eben as he dragged his worthy spouse out of the way of a street car that was yet 20 feet away. "This yer Chicago life is 'nough to make a man's h'ar turn gray."

"Turn gray!" snarled his wife. "'Twouldn't be so bad ef thet wus all it done. It's decent and respectable to have gray ha'r, but when it comes to makin a poor young gal's ha'r turn yaller jist on account of the excitement uv all these cars an railroads on stilts an howlin people there's when I say it's a sin to hev sich big cities. I'm a-goin right out to 'Liza Jane's house, ef I kin ever find it, an stay right in it till we leave Chicago."

"How do you know it makes people's ha'r turn yaller?" asked Uncle Eben. "I ain't never hearn tell of ennything of that kind."

"Well, I see it with my own eyes—leastwise I see it turn brown agin after the poor dears wuz rested all summer in the country. You know them four gals what staid all summer over at Cousin Ellen's? When they fust come, they'd big brown eyes an fa'r complexions an right yaller ha'r. Purty soon every one of 'em's ha'r begin to get streaked in spots, an before the summer wuz gone they all had rich brown ha'r. Then I ast one of 'em what made their ha'r turn brown, an she said it wus alla's brown, but that the excitin life she'd been livin in Chicago, whar she had to act in a theater every night, made it turn yaller. Poor thing! She looked so much better at the end of the summer that I hate to think of her comin back to this great, wicked city."—Chicago Journal.

BETTER FEELING AROUSED

Against the Boers on account of Their Recent Conduct.

In Refusing to Allow the United States Counsel at Pretoria to Act for Britain —Other Washington Notes.

(Special To The Times.)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16.—Winter gaieties follow each other thick and fast in this city. The event of the week has been the reception at the White House to the diplomatic corps. Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador, was the first to be received. He wore his gorgeous court uniform of black broadcloth and gold lace, and was accompanied by the ladies of his household and the gentlemen of his suite. Lady Paunceforte wore blue mirroe velvet flounced with silver-spangled tulle, and white tips in her hair. The Misses Pauncefote followed, all exquisitely attired. On Tuesday, Lord Pauncefote gave a dinner to Col. Charles S. Denby. Those who dined with the Ambassador besides Col. and Mrs. Denby, were the Chinese Minister and Mme. Wu, General Corbin, General and Mrs. J. B. Henderson, Baron Speck von Sternberg, and the Brazilian Minister and wife.

THE TROUBLE WITH KRUGER.

The action of the Transvaal government in refusing to permit U. S. Consul Stanley Hollis to act as British representative at Pretoria during the war, is taken as a proof either of the invincible ignorance of the Boers in the matter of diplomatic procedure, or as a species of snub to this country for the open sympathy of the administration with Great Britain. It seems, however, that the Boers do not go further than to refuse to permit him to do everything that he would be entitled to under that claim. In other words, if the matter is rightly understood in this city, they grant the thing and merely deny the name. Remembering the storm of indignation towards France and Germany that swept over this country on account of their open sympathy with Spain during our late war, very few Americans blame the Transvaal for feeling more or less bitterly towards us. How the Americans regard the struggle is shown pretty accurately by an interview recently given out by Major J. M. Burke, of "Wild West" fame. "It is characteristic he said, "of our people to take the part of the under dog, and hence the feeling manifested in many sections in meeting called to express sympathy with the Afrikanders. Getting away from this, it must be admitted that our interests are bound up in the maintenance of the prestige of the British empire. English success, for instance, means the completion of the Cape to Cairo railway, as well as the building of thousands of miles of railway elsewhere, all of which will call for the purchase of iron and steel and rolling stock from the United States. England is the advance agent of civilization, and wherever she goes her policy is that of progress and development.

PULP.

The movement to abolish duties on paper, wood pulp, and so forth, in which Canada is so much interested, continues to gather force. The price of ordinary newspaper has been so increased by the trust that it has become a serious matter with country as well as city journals. contracts recently made by New York papers are said to have been at 2 1-2 cents for large contracts. and 2 1-4 cents for small ones. Certain Canadian mills have offered, it is said, to sell in small lots at 2.6 cents plus the tariff duty.

CANADIAN COMMERCE.

Canadian commerce is occupying a good deal of space in American papers nowadays. A recent issue of "Engineering News" says that the Dominion has spent $70,000,000 on its canal system, of which $50,000,000 has gone to the St. Lawrence system, including the Welland Canal, which gives access from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario. Since 1885 the traffic has varied between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 tons a year. If the freight rates were proportioned to a fair rate of interest on the cost of the canals, they would be pro- the policy. This decision was reversed. peals held that as the cargo was not a total loss there could be no recovery of the new Soulanges Canal," says the News, "a depth of 14 feet of water is secured better results. "With the completion of hibitory. But there is now a prospect of from the upper lakes to Montreal, and a determined effort will be made to draw export traffic in this direction in competition with the lake and railway routes to United States ports. It appears pretty clear that the 9-foot Erie Canal cannot be expected to compete with the 14-foot Canadian route, especially as the latter has the further advantage that for a large part of the distance the navigation is in a deep and broad river, where full speed is permissible."

AN IMPORTANT CASE.

The Supreme Court of the United States has recently rendered a decision in the case of the Canada Sugar Refining Company against the Insurance Company of North America, involving the insurance on the profits of a cargo of sugar shipped from the Philippines and partially lost by shipwreck. CHURCH AND CHURCHMEN.

The old "Second church" in Boston celebrated its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary recently.

The Universalist church reports 1,008 parishes and 47,471 families, an increase of about 1,200 families over last year.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale will not occupy the pulpit of his church in Boston again until spring. Dr. Lyman Abbott will be the supply for the month of January.

Rabbi Emanuel Schreiber of Youngstown, O., who has been chosen rabbi of the Emanuel synagogue of Chicago, is 45 years old and a native of Austria. He is a doctor of the Royal college of Vienna and has written a number of religious works.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Glassware should be washed in warm water with a dash of soap powder, rinsed off in clear, warm water and polished with soft linen towels.

Hot or cold water cans or jugs should be turned upside down when not in use, so that they can drain and dry thoroughly. If left damp, they will rust inside and be spoiled, because rust eats holes in the metal.

For dishwashing kerosene oil has been found to form an emulsion with the grease, so that a few drops of kerosene dropped into cold or tepid water will keep knife handles from being injured, as in the case where soap and hot water are used.

Steel Combs.

A man who saw in a sidewalk showcase some steel combs and who wondered what steel combs could be used for found upon inquiry that they were used by furriers in combing furs. There was one of these combs that looked much like a comb of the ordinary kind, coarse toothed for half its length and finer toothed the other half. And then there was one comb that had teeth for half its length, the solid end serving as a handle.

There are other steel combs that are used for a similar purpose, as steel combs made to comb dogs with. The dog comb looks somewhat like the fine toothed comb in its general shape, but it is larger, toothed on one side only and coarser toothed than the so called fine comb. The untoothed side combs of this sort are used on various kinds of dogs, including, for instance, long haired dogs like the French poodle.—New York Sun.

Too Small.

Uncle 'Zek'el Watson was accustomed to seeing good sized squares of cup cake, 'lection cake or gingerbread on the supper table, and when he had his first plate of ice cream in a city restaurant he looked with some disfavor upon the macaroons and small sponge drops which accompanied it.

"How do you like it?" asked his niece, who was doing the honors of the city for her uncle.

"The ice cream is first rate," said Uncle 'Zek'el. "I call it extry good. But when you come to these things," he added, lifting one of the sponge "lady fingers" and surveying it doubtfully, "I presume to say they're all right enough, what there is of 'em, but there isn't enough of 'em; just nothing but gape and swallow!"—Youth's Companion.

Books.

When I consider what some books have done for the world and what they are doing, how they keep up our hope, awaken new courage and faith, soothe pain, give an ideal life to those whose homes are hard and cold, bind together distant ages and foreign lands, create new worlds of beauty, bring down truths from heaven, I give eternal blessings for this gift.—James Freeman Clarke.

RETRIBUTION

He saved a little day by day,
  Withheld from something that he craved.
"The dollars grow," he used to say,
  "From extra pennies that are saved."

His pile of savings grew and grew.
  Each day he hoarded more and more;
Each night he ran his fingers through
  And gloated o'er his golden store.

And as his wealth increased his heart
  Shrank, hardened, shriveled and decayed.
He cheated, gouged and played the part
  That many another fool has played.

He rose to power through his wealth;
  He crushed those who were in the way;
He gained a fortune, lost his health
  And miserably died one day.

Then came his drunken cousin, who
  Had thrashed him when the two were boys.
His savings and his stealings, too,
  One whom he hated now enjoys.

SCAVENGER OF THE VELDT.

The Aasvogel, Which Keeps the Wide Plains Clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest opprobrium, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it expresses a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.

And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the veldt. But for his quick eye, carrion taste and love of dead meat the disease germs in the carcasses of dead oxen would be far more prolific and dangerous.

Throughout South Africa is found the aasvogel. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and sooner or later—and in all probability the former—you will find the remains of his ghastly meal. There are hundreds of thousands of oxen used in the transport and trekking service. Many of them die from exhaustion, want of water or cruelty from their Boer masters. Or they may eat of the poisonous tulp, a bulbous plant growing in marshy places.

A kurneyor, or teamster, soon knows if any one or more of his oxen have been eating tulp. The neck of the ox swells, his eyes close up, he gives short, sharp coughs, and his case is generally hopeless. Sometimes, however, he may be saved, and this by a peculiar, homeopathic sort of remedy. If the bulb of the tulp plant is crushed into pulp, mashed with hot water and forced boiling hot down the throat of the ox he may recover.

The quickness of the eye of the aasvogel is simply astounding. An ox falls out of the team, evidently ill. He is outspanned from his yoke fellow, and he goes down to the spruit, or stream. The sky above and away to the horizon on all sides is absolutely clear and cloudless.

Hardly has the breath left the body of the poor ox than you may observe far, far away up in the sky a tiny black speck, then another and another and another, until there are 20 of them. Gradually they get larger and larger, circling round in ever diminishing circles all the while they descend. The dead ox forms the center of the circumference of their flight. Within a few minutes the grisly horde swoop down upon the still warm beast and commence their ghoulish task.

An hour afterward there is nothing in the spruit but a bundle of bleached white bones that might have been there for months. The sky is clear and speckless again. The aasvogel has scavenged the veldt.

Whittier's Predicament.

Whittier held "Gail Hamilton" (Abigail Dodge) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them are really most delightful. Here is one of the series in The Ladies' Home Journal that is truly characteristic of Whittier. It was written in 1868:

"I must tell thee something droll. Last week the Amoskeag veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house, and Governor Smyth of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them civilly off, the men in epaulets got up a grand military salute, with music and three cheers to wind up with! Was ever a Quaker in such a predicament? I did, I fear, somewhat compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat. But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows by way of testimony."

He Set at Eight.

He was only a little boy, and this was his first diary. It had been given him as a birthday present and was bound in a red cover, with a highly colored picture adorning the front.

He meant to begin well and early, so he carefully wrote, "Got up at 7." Then, according to instructions, he took it to his governess for approval.

That highly proper lady frowned. "Got up!" she said; "got up! You careless boy! Does the sun get up? No, it rises."

Very neatly she scratched out the barbarous words and made him write, "Rose at 7." This settled Master Tom; no more mistakes of this kind for him again!

So on retiring for the night he wrote, with the air of a man who knew his business well, "Set at 8."

Art Treasures in Japan.

The Japanese idea in regard to art treasures is quite different from the American idea, as seen in the home. The American method is to keep all the good pictures or beautiful bronzes or unique vases in evidence all the time. The Japanese way is to store the artistic belongings, bringing different ones to light for a time, and thereby avoiding the too abundant appearance that is often the rule here.—New York Sun.

Would Strike England.

Albay, N. Y., Jan. 16.—The Ancient Order of Hiberians of Albany county, in convention here today, adopted resolutions offering their heartiest congratulations to the Boers for the gallant fight which they are making "for the protection of their lives and liberty" and promising aid in case their national officers should see fit to order a call to strike a blow at England.

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 16.—A pro-Boer movement was started here by the Ancient Order of Hiberians. This organization held a special meeting today and made arrangements for a mass meeting to be held in the Old City hall within a week. The meeting is to be nonsectarian and all friends of the Boers are invited to be present.
